SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 4, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your soft-hearted self is drawn to a tempting offer. But your hard-headed half isn't so sure. Best advice: Do it only after every detail is checked out to your liking.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your inventive mind should help you find a way to get around an apparently impassable barrier and make yourself heard. Your efforts get you noticed by the right people.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're enjoying this creative period. But by midweek, you'll need to emphasize your more pragmatic talents as you consider a risky but potentially lucrative move.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An unexpected rejection could turn into something positive if you pocket your pride and ask for advice on how you can make changes that will make the difference.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Lion's heart gives you the courage to push for answers to a job-related situation. Stay with it. You'll soon find more believers coming out the ranks of the doubters.

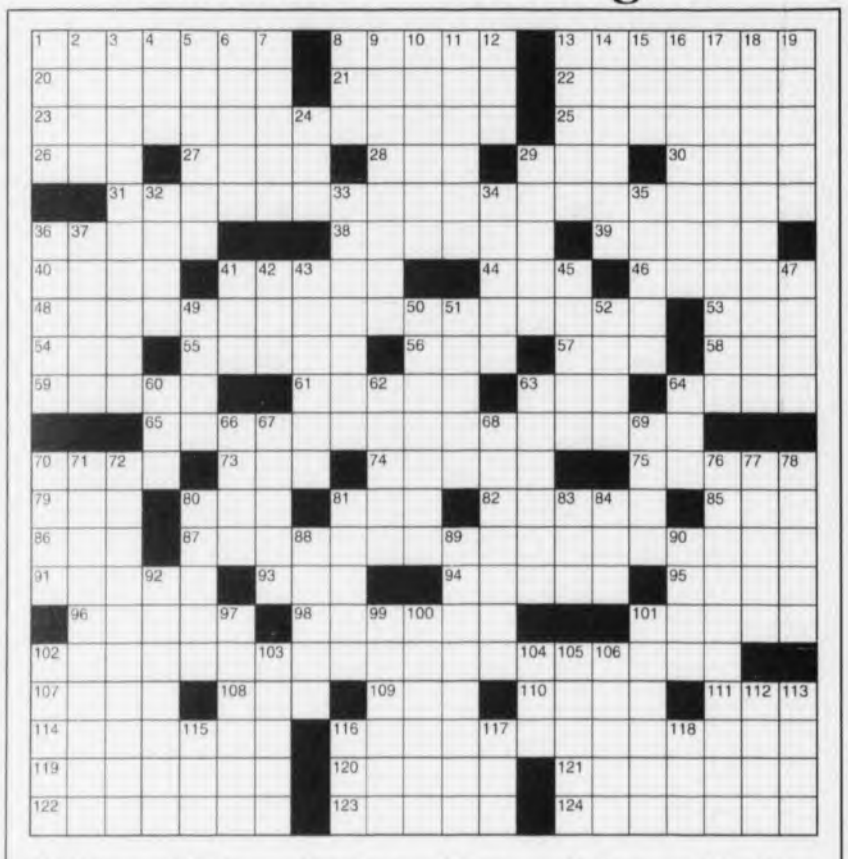
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your curiosity pays off this week as you push past the gossip to find the facts. What you ultimately discover could lead you to make some changes in your plans.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A new sense of enthusiasm helps get you out of on-the-job doldrums and back into a productive phase. Family matters also benefit from your more positive attitude.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A bit of nostalgia is fine. But don't stay back in the past too long or you might miss seeing the signpost up ahead pointing the way to a new opportunity.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) If you feel you need to take more time to study a situation before making a decision, do so. Don't let anyone push you into acting until you're ready.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) As the Great Advice Giver, the Goat really shines this week as family and friends seek your wisdom. Someone especially close to you might make a surprising request.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Spiritual concerns dominate part of the week before more worldly matters demand your attention. An old promise resurfaces with some surprises attached.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're in a highly productive period and are eager to finish all the projects you've taken on. But don't let yourself get swamped. Take a breather now and again.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Service dog grant recipient selected

CWDF holding fundraiser to purchase dog

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Two years ago, the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation was formed to raise funds to provide the police department and community with a K9 service dog. This year, the CWDF is giving back to the Cohasset community — by donating raised funds to provide individuals with service dogs of their own.

The CWDF recently announced its first annual Cohasset Service Dog Grant, which will help pay for the purchase and training of a personal service dog for a Cohasset resident. Trained service dogs can aid individuals with visual or hearing impairments, seizure disorders, mobility impairments, autism or other serious health issues.

These dogs can alert to certain medical conditions, such as seizures, before they happen.

"They're remarkable and life-saving, and love you on top of that," CWDF president Trish Morse said of service dogs. "They provide you with amazing service and unconditional companionship and love... No medicine or device will do that for you."

These specially trained canines can help their owners lead regular lives. However, these dogs come with a hefty price tag, especially for an individual or family already facing medical bills. The purchase, training and raising of a service dog can cost around $20,000.

This is where the CWDF comes in — the group's mission is to cover a significant portion of the costs for one Cohasset individual in need each year. This is a new initiative for the organization, which was originally formed to raise funds for the Cohasset police department's

Cohasset architect makes mark on NYC

By Erin Dale

The next time you're in Manhattan, you might stroll by one of a few new haunts designed by an architect from Cohasset.

Cohasset native Robert Stansell III is making his mark as an architect in New York City. Drawing influence from the city's Industrial Age aesthetic, Stansell and business partner Tim Welsh started Emporium Design to create unique, artsy spaces that New Yorkers – and visitors – will keep coming back to over and over. Their latest venture, gastropub Boulton & Watt, which they not only designed but also co-own, has opened to rave reviews and is poised to become part of the Lower East Side landscape.

And while Stansell, along with his wife, Nicole, and their three-month-old son Jasper, has made a life for himself in New York, he hopes to one day return to his Massachusetts roots and work alongside his father, a Boston-based architect.

"Everything I know, I learned from my father," said Stansell, who graduated from Cohasset High in 1997.

Stansell's journey as a New York architect began as a student of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (RPI) in Albany, NY, where he met future partner Welsh. After graduation, both found jobs in their field working for major corporations. Both spent a decade doing this before deciding to break out on their own.

The duo's focus in the corporate world involved big construction projects such as hospitals and hotels, with much of the projects being overseas in places like Egypt and Saudi Arabia. Stansell explained that he and Welsh both wanted to take a more hands-on approach.

"We were missing actually seeing our work," he explained. In addition to wanting to work one-on-one with clients, Stansell also wanted projects that could be done more quickly, explaining that many of the corporate projects took three to four years to complete.

Stansell and Welch turned their focus to smaller businesses in the retail and hospitality sectors.

"I was doing some restaurant and bar work at my corporate firm, moonlighting and started getting momentum," Stansell said. "I decided to give it a go full-time," a process he described as both exciting and scary.

At Emporium Design, Stansell is the Design Director while Welsh is the Director of Architecture and Construction. In his role, Stansell utilizes his knowledge of sustainable design, which involves repurposing

OPEB Task Force

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen has set up a special committee to tackle the topic of Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB) unfunded liability, which is both a local and national problem. Various boards, from Advisory to School committee, have taken on the issue at their meetings in the past.

OPEB (other post employment benefits) is the set of benefits offered to a retiree other than their pension, consisting mainly of health insurance and including medical, dental, Medicare Part B premiums and prescription medications. The OPEB liability is what the town owes for its share of the retirees' health insurance costs, plus their dependents, from the time they retire up until they die.

Now, the selectmen seek citizen volunteers to serve on an OPEB Task Force to make recommendations to the selectmen and the town on local options to address Cohasset's current and future liability.

Actuarial reports from 2010 identify Cohasset's retiree healthcare and other non-pension benefits at $32 million. Today, it is significantly more; as of May 2012, the entire future liability was unfunded.

Cohasset citizens established an OPEB trust fun at the May 2012 Annual Town Meeting and voted to put $163,000 into the account. Currently, annual retiree healthcare costs are funded in the town's annual operating budget.

The OPEB Task Force will become familiar with the town's benefits and OPEB liabilities; review the state's recent OPEB

WHAT IS GOING ON HERE?

Loading zones on Depot Court

What: There are two loading zones on Depot Court. One (pictured here) is near Constitution Park and the other is near Dooley's.

When: The large loading zone near Constitution Park is to accommodate tractor-trailer and large delivery trucks serving village businesses. It becomes a commercial only loading zone on Mondays and Fridays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. No public parking is allowed at that time.
No public parking is allowed at all in the smaller loading zone near Dooley's, which is restricted for commercial vehicles only.

Why: Police said these parking areas have been created because commercial vehicles, which had no place to park and make their deliveries, had been blocking Depot Court which is the main access for police and fire vehicles to head to Route 3A.

More: The loading zones are clearly marked. Violators will be ticketed, police said.

Police ask motorists to observe restrictions in the loading zones on Depot Court. Violators will be ticketed. PHOTO/MARY FORD

Code Red signups offered

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

"We would like all the best phone numbers to get a hold of people at all times of the day."
Deputy Police Chief William Quigley

Everyone with a listed phone number is included on the town's automated emergency telephone call system. However, if phone lines are down – as many were during Blizzard Nemo – then residents are not going to get that important call.

Enter: Code Red. Code Red, which is a new vendor the town is using, is an emergency call notification system that can be used for landlines, cell phones and those with landlines but who have unlisted numbers. However, residents need to sign up to obtain the free service.

To sign up, residents should go to the town website (cohassetmass.org) and look for the Code Red logo. The sign up can include multiple numbers.

"We would like all the best phone numbers to get a hold of people at all times of the day," Deputy Police Chief William Quigley said. He explained that if your landline and cell phone are both working – you would receive the emergency notification call on both phones.

Code Red differs from the police EMAS, an email notification system, which is primarily used for press releases and requests for information, police said.

Lost bracelet

A Scituate woman reported to police last week that she had lost a tennis bracelet valued at $12,000 but was not sure where. She filled out a report with the Scituate police but alerted Cohasset as she shops in town and could have lost it while in Cohasset.

Hit & run

A 53-year-old Scituate woman reported on Tuesday (Feb. 19) that her 2013 Toyota Venza had been struck while parked at Starbucks by an unknown vehicle. Police said there were no witnesses and no video surveillance in the parking lot so they do not have much to go on.

Runaways

A worried Cohasset mother called police on Tuesday (Feb. 19) at 8 p.m. explaining that her son and daughter, ages 9 and 11 respectively, had left a note that they had run away to look for adventure. The note said they packed lots of stuff. By the time the police responded the two kids had returned home. It was 29 degrees that night, so it appeared that they cut their quest for adventure short.

Fake $20

Police have notified the Secret Service about a counterfeit $20 bill that the manager at Dunkin' Donuts at the Gulf Station found while counting the money in the cash register last week. She notified police after realizing that the bill did not look or feel right. The investigating officer agreed it was fraudulent and it was turned over to detectives who notified the Secret Service.

OUI charge

A 20-year-old Scituate man is facing drunken driving charges after driving off the road into the woods off North Main Street near the train station on Friday (Feb. 22). Police said he was showing the signs and symptoms of intoxication, had alcohol on his breath and failed a series of field sobriety tests. He was arrested at the scene and charged with OUI, negligent operation of a MV and failure to stay in marked lanes. His car was towed.

Hit & run

A 56-year-old Scituate woman reported to policed that her 2012 Mazda CX9, which she had parked on Border Street the night before, was hit in an apparent hit and run accident. There was heavy front-end damage to the car, she said.

Domestic arrests

Two men were arrested last week in unrelated incidents after they allegedly beat up their female partners. In the first incident, a woman called 9-1-1 after her husband, whom she is separated from, allegedly grabbed her around the neck and threw her into the wall. He had left the house when police arrived but was stopped and arrested in Hingham and brought back to Cohasset. He is charged with domestic assault and battery.

In the second incident, a woman called 9-1-1 after her boyfriend became intoxicated and allegedly threw her to the floor during an argument. He also allegedly spit in her face and slapped her with an open hand. He was arrested and charged with domestic assault and battery. Police notified the state Department of Children and Families (DCF) because the woman's 9-year-old daughter was present.

Both women declined to take out restraining orders, police said.

SSRECC UPDATE

Regional dispatch issues due to 'growing pains'

Cost of program about even, Milanoski says

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Addressing recent newspaper articles on the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC), in particular a recent letter to the Hingham Journal from Hingham's fire captains, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski discussed problems going on at the regional dispatch center.

Cohasset moved to regional dispatch last year in an attempt to improve emergency call services and save money by sharing services with Hingham, Hull and Norwell.

The Hingham fire captains wrote that the center is not making the progress they thought it would, and said that while they reported problems in emails to the SSRECC directors, those messages went unanswered for a long time. The captains said that they felt the cost for the center has exceeded the quality of services.

Milanoski said that Cohasset's fire and police chiefs fill out official reports whenever issues with the SSRECC arise, and that the reports are analyzed and responded to. The town manager added that to his knowledge, the issues raised by the Hingham firefighters have not been addressed in reports to the SSRECC.

"Without a formal report issued, there's not much they can do about it," said Milanoski.

Milanoski agreed that problems with the dispatch center exist, but chalked them up to "growing pains."

"Whenever you get four different unions together to form one union, there are growing pains with the transition, but things get progressively better; we see constant improvement," said Milanoski, adding that the SSRECC is "providing better service than any one community could do" on its own.

Milanoski said that in 2011, Cohasset paid just under $240,000 for dispatch services; after the switchover to the SSRECC in early 2012, it seems that costs are breaking even. The town manager said that the estimated cost for fiscal year 2014 is $250,000, including employee benefits (the 2011 price does not include benefits). In short, said selectmen chair Paul Carlson, "We're getting much better service for a little bit less [money]."

AT&T cell tower: license approved

The Bear Hill cell phone tower issue is back in the news. The selectmen voted Tuesday night to approve a license for National Grid to run underground conduits up to the water tank to get the ball rolling for the AT&T cellular tower project. The project was approved by a previous Town Meeting.

The project "will generate additional money for the water department" and "provide additional cell phone service to the town," said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

While questions arose about whether AT&T would need an easement before National Grid could run conduits to the tower, Milanoski explained that they would not need an easement if the selectmen approved the license.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said all the issues surrounding the cell tower were "vetted in great detail years ago. This is a big win for the town."

The board voted 4-1 to approve the license, with selectman Martha Gjesteby as the dissenting vote.

The women's doubles tournament will begin Friday afternoon, March 8 for those with an 8.0 and under combined USTA rating. The event continues Saturday, March 9 with a women's 6.5 and under doubles competition. On Sunday, March 10 the event concludes with a Cohasset vs. Hingham Men's Pro-Am.

K9 unit.

Morse explained, "The over-arching goal of the organization is to support the police K9 program; the second part is to provide service dogs to the people in the community who need them. That's our mission."

The CWDF announced last week that the first grant recipient has been selected: five-year-old Emmy Naples.

Emmy lives in Cohasset and attends the South Shore Collaborative School. Emmy has a rare genetic disability that affects her vision and mobility; a service dog would assist her with mobility, communication, and companionship, according to Morse.

"She is definitely a great candidate for a service dog," Morse said of Emmy. "I was very excited when I saw that application come in; this is exactly what we want to do and what we're here for."

Emmy's mother, Katie Naples, said that she and her family are grateful to receive the CWDF's help. Katie explained that she is experiencing a whirlwind of feelings, from "lucky" and "excited" to "overwhelmed." But perhaps the best way to describe the Naples' family's reaction to winning the grant: "We're thrilled."

"The service dogs do amazing things for people; we're hoping it will do the same for Emmy," said Katie. "We're hoping it will give her freedom she hasn't experienced yet in her short life— mobility, companionship, and getting around safely."

NEWS UPDATE

Budget talk

Ambulance, police car, culvert work lead the list

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

With the Annual Town Meeting less than eight weeks away, coming up on April 22, Cohasset officials are digging into the town's fiscal future in earnest. This week, the Capital Budget Committee reviewed a draft of proposed purchases for fiscal year 2014, which starts on July 1, 2013.

Public safety

Some of the proposed items include a new ambulance for the fire department, replacing a vehicle that is over 20 years old and at the end of its life, according to Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained that since the town has raised ambulance fees, in alignment with comparable communities, the town is taking in more revenue. Milanoski said that the "net-net" equals around $100,000 in new revenue that could go toward a new ambulance; he suggested the town go out and bond for a three-year cycle and transfer the additional revenue to the capital stabilization fund.

Capital Budget chair Steve Gaumer said that if purchasing a new vehicle is an immediate need requiring a reserve fund transfer, a future Town Meeting could vote to reimburse the fund at a later date.

Silvia said that his department estimates spending around $200,000 for the new ambulance, adding that whatever is not spent will be returned. "We won't go out and buy a Cadillac."

The police vehicle roll-off program was also discussed. The department recently switched to driving Chevy Tahoes and is in the process of replacing old cruisers. A new Tahoe is estimated to cost $35,000.

Speaking on behalf of Acting Police Chief William Quigley, Silvia said that the new Tahoes are working out well for the PD. "I've heard no complaints from the troops," said Silvia.

And while the Tahoes, which have two-wheel drive, had some issues getting around in the recent blizzard, Silvia explained that there are no pursuit vehicles with four-wheel drive available for purchase. However, the Tahoes fared better in this storm than the past cruisers would have.

"They're much better than the Crown Vics in the snow," said Silvia. "There are pluses."

Capital projects

Director of Project Management and Planning Brian Joyce provided a status update on several town projects, including purchasing new streetlights and fixing the Beechwood culvert.

Joyce said that he is waiting for a cost estimate from National Grid on the streetlights, but a 2008 study quoted the price at around $60,000. Joyce also discussed the merits of using eco-friendly LED lights, but since the cost of installing those is as yet unknown, he said that it would make more sense to use conventional lights for now.

Regarding the Beechwood culvert, Joyce explained that he would not know project costs until mid-March, which Capital Budget members and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained would make it difficult to get the project on the warrant for the April Annual Town Meeting. If approved, construction would not begin until the fall.

Seemingly wanting to avoid the need for a fall Special Town Meeting, and thus save the town some money, Milanoski asked Joyce if the project could wait until next spring to be voted on in the 2014 ATM, and become a 2015 project; Joyce said it could wait. Milanoski added that the project could be funded sooner if it was a matter of public safety.

Highlights: Draft FY14 Capital Budget

- Ambulance replacement: $230,000
- Replacing heart monitor/defibrillator: $35,000
- Police vehicle replacement: $35,000
- Police fingerprint scanner: $15,000
- Public building maintenance: harbormaster's office ceiling, roof replacement: $15,000
- Paul Pratt Building roof work: $30,000
- Generator upgrades for all town buildings: $50,000
- DPW 50-foot bucket truck: $175,000
- Library basketball court lights: $60,000

Gaumer said of the matter, "I have no problem with the idea of a very contained special town meeting for a project like this, but if it's the only thing on the docket, it's a great expense to the town."

Joyce said that he hopes to get final bid prices for the project before Town Meeting.

Joyce also discussed the latest on the Town Hall renovation project. The Building Information Modeling (BIM) computer study of the building, paid for by Community Preservation funds, was recently completed. The study was reviewed later in the week with an architect to look at layout design options. These plans should be ready next month, said Joyce: "We're on schedule."

The harbormaster's building is also in need of a facelift, including ceiling and roof replacement. Joyce explained that there is rot in the rafters and the ceiling is falling down. There is a possibility that Community Preservation funds could be used to fund these repairs in the name of historical preservation. Milanoski and Gaumer both recommended that the project be pitched to the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) for consideration.

salvaged materials and artifacts. Welsh's role requires technical knowledge of building while juggling the demands of feasibility, scheduling, and budget.

Since launching their venture in 2010, the duo has already created buzzworthy establishments on both the East and West coasts, including:

- GalleryBar (NYC), an influential art gallery by day and a lounge by night;
- Ella, a lounge that embodies the glamour of Old Hollywood;
- The Blind Barber, a 1920s-inspired barbershop and lounge for the modern gentleman, where he get a haircut and shave as well as a cocktail; the shop has locations in NYC and L.A., and has had pop-up shops at Donna Karan fashion shows and the 2012 Sundance Film Festival;
- Basik, a Brooklyn bar with industrial and rustic charm;
- Carson Street Clothiers, a Soho men's clothing store started by two former lawyers with a space that features Emporium Design's chief aesthetic: vintage Americana meets "industrial chic."

Last but not least, Boulton & Watt, what is perhaps Emporium Design's proudest accomplishment to date, opened in December on the Lower East Side. This project stands out from others that Emporium Design has designed, Stansell explained, because in this case the architects guided not only the design process but the actual construction, hiring contractors themselves to oversee the build, which took around six months. Stansell and Welsh are also co-owners of the establishment.

This fully hands-on approach, which Stansell refers to as a "design-build" process, explains why Boulton & Watt so perfectly encapsulates the Emporium Design Americana, vintage, industrial-chic aesthetic. The design and the name come from British inventors Matthew Boulton and James Watt, who perfected the steam engine in the late 1700s in Birmingham, England. The restaurant is a nod to this history.

"We tried to recreate the past and the space where Boulton and Watt worked on the steam engine," Stansell explained. "We tried to emulate a very industrial warehouse-type space." Features include "a self-driven fan system run off a replica of a steam engine" and "a lot of moving parts" that recall Industrial Age factories, including a salvaged rusted metal ceiling.

Despite the factory feel, the restaurant's vibe is anything but mechanical. Boulton & Watt is a gastropub, known for both alcoholic beverages and high-end food, a watering hole where patrons can also get a substantial meal. Like the steam engine Boulton & Watt is modeled after, along with its inventors, the gastropub also traces its origins back to the United Kingdom.

"It's a gastropub in the true sense of the term," Stansell said of Boulton & Watt. "It's a comfortable, casual dining experience with a big bar scene. It's flexible, which makes people feel comfortable staying for a long time— that's the plan."

It seems, too, that Emporium Design will be making an impact on New York architecture for a long time, even if Stansell and his family could one day be Boston-bound. In the meanwhile, "I've grown to love New York and the city," the architect said. And although he appreciates all kinds of architecture, including New England styles, Stansell said that the downtown New York industrial look is "something you just can't get" back home.

Emporium Design: Q&A

1. Where does the name "Boulton & Watt" come from?

The space that the Restaurant currently occupies has had many lives since the 19th Century, two of which were a factory and an engine repair shop. This fit well with our love for the Industrial Revolution and Machine Age. The story of Boulton and Watt, pioneers and pivotal figures of the Industrial Revolution, with their perfection of the steam engine, is one of courage, ambition, creativity, and loyalty – a story that we were drawn to immediately. Boulton and Watt's workshop and factory, The Soho Foundry, is the inspiration behind the design.

2. What was the direction from the restaurant owners on this project?

Emporium Design, the operator, the general manager, and the executive chef are a part of the ownership group. This unique collaboration of passion and in-house expertise has resulted in a true product of the courage, ambition, creativity, and loyalty that we also saw in Boulton & Watt and their Soho Foundry.

Emporium Design was not only given creative ownership of the concept, brand, and design, but – in the truest sense of Design-Build – also managed the construction process from beginning to end, often designing and improvising in field to keep up with a very ambitious schedule. We have assembled an amazing team of tradesmen, craftsmen, artists, and material/artifact sources, which allow our designs to come to fruition without a lot of the layers that typically come along with a traditional project.

The group's affinity for the inspiration and concept is evident throughout the experience of the space, even reaching as far as the menu, food and drink vessels, and staff wardrobe.

3. How do you describe the interior aesthetic?

The word "steampunk" is getting tossed around a bit... We've heard that a few times. Our interpretations try to be more literal than abstract; more authentic than fantasy. We use authentic materials and methods to recreate the aesthetic and experience that we find in our inspiration. "Industrial chic" is probably closer than "steampunk," but we don't like labels or classifications, and stay away from getting pigeonholed by specific genres or aesthetics.

In Boulton & Watt, for example, we created a backdrop that looks and feels like a sophisticated 19th Century factory, with many real artifacts and mechanics highlighting the interior of the space. We make sure that the found objects that are seen throughout the space are authentic artifacts that are used or repurposed in ways that are serve a function in restaurant, not simply static or contrived decoration.

4. From the outside, this place looks like it's been here for a long time. How did you find a balance between a rustic, lived-in look with the need to communicate that this is a new restaurant?

We always start with researching the history of the space or building. Boulton & Watt sits at the corner of Houston Street and Avenue A, one of the busier intersections in Manhattan. The existing dive bar did an injustice to not only the great location, but also the unique history of the building. After many hours going through the historical archives, we took aspects of the Soho Foundry and combined them with aspects of the building during its life as an engine repair shop.

When we took down the plywood fence that concealed the space throughout construction, we were hoping people would think the exterior had not changed since the building was built in the 19th Century. Of course, this meant going back a few generations of work that hid much of the original industrial charm.

Layers upon layers of peeling paint were added to the reclaimed brick that we used to rebuild the exterior walls; huge, custom made operable, patinaed steel windows make up much of the façade; hand-painted signage — created in the same methods used in the time of the Soho Foundry – cap the busy corner; and "explosion-proof" light fixtures salvaged from a turn of the century factory add an authentic charm.

We didn't want people to see us from across the street and think "restaurant" – and we certainly didn't want them thinking "new." Rather, we hoped people would be curious enough to come closer and see what Boulton & Watt is all about. It seems to be working.

5. Who is the chef and what type of food does the restaurant serve? How do the food and the interior design relate to one another?

David Rotter (983, Norwood) is our executive chef. Chef Rotter was able to take our inspiration and transform a traditional gastropub menu into a revised and sophisticated take on rustic comfort food. A wide array of pickled fruits and vegetables (pineapple, radish, okra – to only name a few), shared plates (Scotch egg, short rib and bone marrow toast), and sensational entrees (brick chicken, fish and chips, duck confit carbonara) are featured.

6. Did you do the logo design as well?

We designed Boulton & Watt's logo and fonts (also seen on the physical menu) in collaboration with Bobby Jordan, our very talented graphic designer. Bobby is an invaluable part of our broader team, and is involved in almost all of our projects.

Bobby also helped us with the Emporium Design font and logo, which features an anvil – the universal symbol of creation and quintessential representation of built work.

In the past, students have made amazing pieces from paper french-fry cups, Coke bottle caps, and even a used typewriter, so start getting creative!

Welcome back Cohasset! I hope everyone enjoyed the break.

Getting right back into the swing of things, after-school Concert Band practices started up again Monday, in preparation for All-School Band Night on March 27. For those of you just entering the Cohasset Public School system, All-School Band Night is a concert hosted by CHS that features performances from the Deer Hill fifth grade band, the Middle School sixth, seventh, and eighth grade bands, and the High School Concert and Jazz bands, ending the night with a collective performance from all three schools. Mark the date on your calendars!

Tuesday afternoon, members of the Arts magazine met in Ms. Berkowitz classroom to further prepare their creations for "Recycled pARTS" next Wednesday. Held for the first time last year, Recycled pARTS is a creative competition organized by the Arts Department in which all Cohasset students are allowed to participate. The competition requires students to create any type of art they wish, using only recycled materials in their pieces. In the past, students have made amazing pieces from paper french-fry cups, Coke bottle caps, and even a used typewriter, so start getting creative!

While classes were suspended, sports continued through February vacation, and CHS is proud to have four teams advancing into MIAA tournament. After winning against Nauset last week, the Boy's Basketball Team earned the number 4 seed in the MIAA Division 4 South Sectional Tournament and hosted their first playoff game Wednesday night against number 13 Southestern Regional Vo-Tech. The Girls' Basketball Team won their final five games of the season to qualify for the MIAA Division 4 South Sectional Tournament and earn the number 13 seed. The girls travelled to the number 4 seed Greater New Bedford Regional Vo-Tech on Thursday night for their first playoff game. From the Ski Team, three Cohasset players qualified for the MIAA State Championships, held Wednesday morning at Blue Hills; congrats to Mackenzie Axelson, Caty Gilman, and Ben Astley! After upsetting the number 11 seed Westwood Monday night in their first playoff game, the Boys' Ice Hockey Team (number 22 seed) advanced further into tournament to play number 6 Blue Hills Regional Vo-Tech Wednesday afternoon. Notable on and off the ice, the boys have been awarded the 2013 South Shore League Sportsmanship Award. Congratulations to all sports teams on a successful winter season!

Today, the Peer Leaders finally held their last workshop (after postponement from the blizzard) with the middle school students, reflecting on their past discussions this year, engaging in closing activities, and saying goodbyes to the senior leaders.

Next week, CHS students participating in Model U.N. will travel to New York City for a second convention this year. The Model U.N. program is a great way for students to exercise their interests in foreign policy and government, gain experience in public speaking, and meet other high school students from around the world!

GIMME SHELTER

Maybrey is looking for a forever home that will bring him years of love, attention and caring. COURTESY PHOTO

Maybrey wants to be an only

PAULA J FATERSIK

This handsome young man has been through some big changes in his short life! At just four years old, Maybrey has made a journey here after living in Florida for a while. Well, given the weather lately, he might like to head back down South, but a sunny window where he could lounge, stretch out and relax would be just as wonderful.

Like most Maine Coon cats, Maybrey has thick, luxurious fur that is black, chocolate and beige and so shiny and soft. His eyes are a gorgeous green and rimmed in black. Add the little pink tinge on his nose and you have one fine looking boy! One who wants to communicate with you as well. Maybrey has a sweet little meow and will greet you with that as soon as he sees you come in the door.

Yes, this classy cat is looking for one forever home that will bring him years of love, attention and caring. Since he is used to living in an adult family, this might be the best placement for him. We know that he loves petting and brushing. Also, he is very anxious to be out and playing with toys and strings. Maybrey would really enjoy getting some exercise and being a part of the fun that goes along with chasing little stuffed mice and even the laser light! He watches carefully and pounces right on it.

It would be best for Maybrey to be the only pet in his new home. Having to share a room with other cats in the shelter has him a little nervous and he would love to have his own safe and loving territory back. If you have room in your heart and home for this great guy, please come to visit him and perhaps you will find that he is the perfect match for you and your family.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Mabrey and other available feline companions who are waiting for a loving home. You are welcome to visit our cats at Open Hours on Mondays from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121. You can visit out website, www.hsar.org, to view other available pets in our shelter who are featured on Petfinder.com.

It was a busy Monday for the shelter this week with many owners arriving for the spaying and neutering of their pets. We continue to offer this affordable service to our surrounding communities so please let neighbors or friends know that if they have a cat in need of these procedures, they can call us for new dates and times.

We are preparing and gearing up for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue's "Gimme Shelter" fundraiser. Please save the date and join us on Sunday, April 28th from 4-8 p.m. at The C Note in Hull. There will be fabulous raffle and silent auction items, food, music and all proceeds help to support the cats in our care. If you can help us in any way, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121. As always, we are looking forward to seeing our friends and supporters and hope that many more people will come by to help this worthy cause. You make the difference for all of the homeless animals we are caring for.

Volunteers continue to give of their time and help to provide clean and healthy surroundings for our residents. You all keep our kittens and cats purring and keep us smiling as we work to find loving forever homes for cats in need. There is always a need for more assistance and if you are interested in getting involved please call and come by for an application or contact our volunteer coordinator at 781-925-3638. Two-hour shifts are scheduled in the morning and evening and we appreciate our dedicated group and encourage others to help us.

Paula J Fatersik is a board member and volunteer at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

OUR VIEW

Code Red

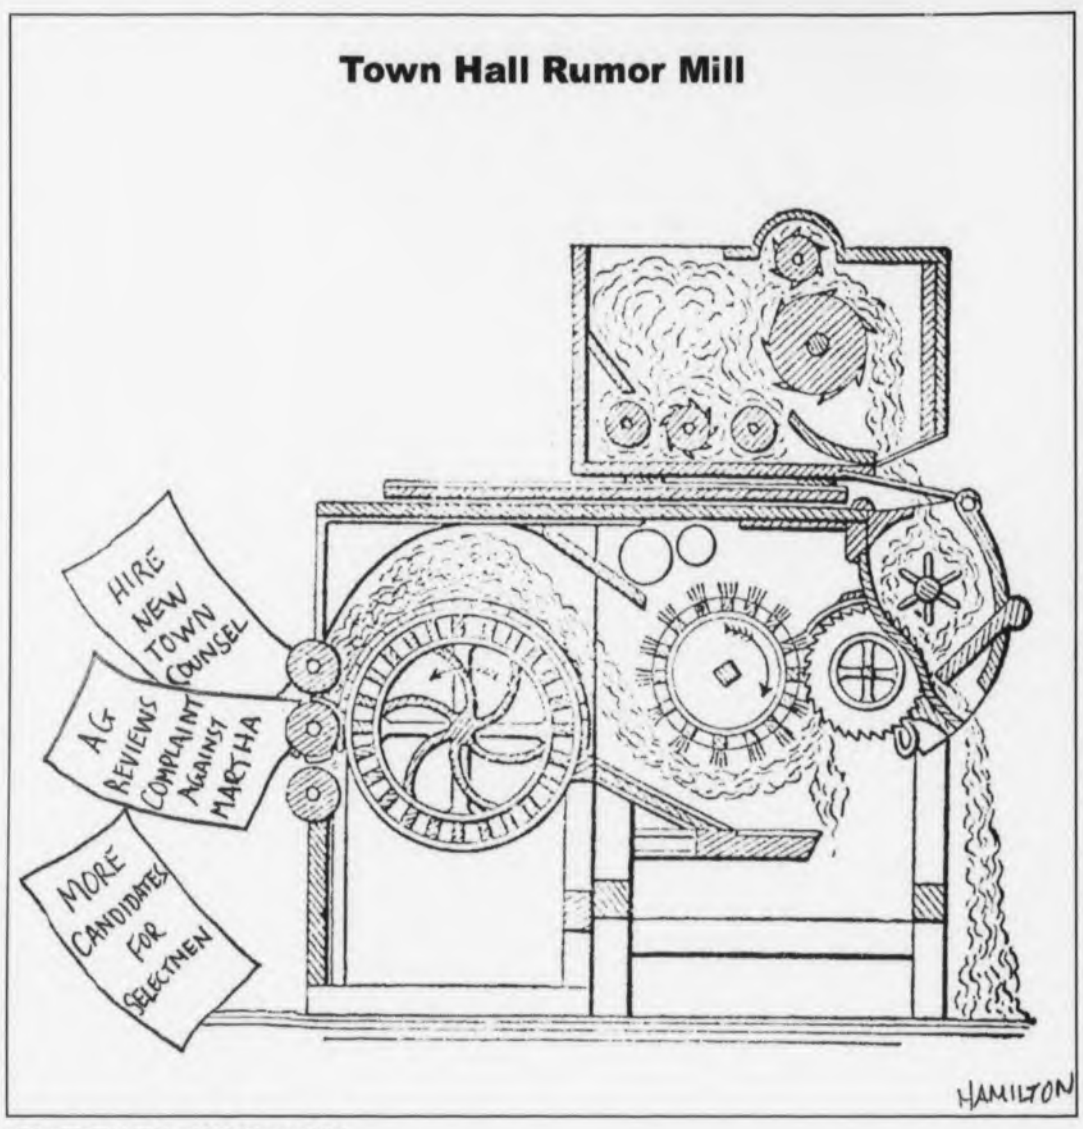
When the temperature rises and the sun is out – experiences like those we had during and immediately after Blizzard Nemo – suddenly become a distant memory.

However, we all need to be reminded of Tropical Storm Irene that wiped out power for nearly a week in some neighborhoods in the late summer of 2011. Irene, when she came to us, had been downgraded to from hurricane status but still managed to do a number on our power lines.

Then there was Hurricane Sandy last fall that devastated the coastal areas of New York and New Jersey. A slight change in direction and Sandy would have packed a wallop here as well.

Although, we cannot explain why power outages appear to be more common today during both major and not-so-major events (aging infrastructure, perhaps?) – technology has provided ways for us to stay in communication.

To that end, Cohasset is now offering Code Red, an emergency communications notification system that can go out on both landlines and cell phones. It is important that you sign up for Code Red and you can do so on the town website (cohassetmass.org)



Here is what Code Red says:

"Please take a moment to fill in the appropriate information below to be notified by your local emergency response team in the event of emergency situations or critical community alerts. Examples include: evacuation notices, bioterrorism alerts, boil water notices, and missing child reports. This information will remain the property of ECN and will not be disclosed unless compelled to do so by a court of sufficient jurisdiction."

Deputy Police Chief William Quigley says it is important that the system has the best numbers to reach residents any time of day.

It is up to you whether to take advantage of this technology. But we can say for sure that many, many people were relying on their cell phones as their only way of communication when their power and landlines were down during Nemo.

No system is perfect but having an emergency notification via your cell phone in a storm or other critical event can be a comforting thing.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Upset over hoarding story, photos

I am usually an individual who would prefer to contribute to the solution of a problem or help fulfill a need, but last week's Mariner propelled me out of that comfort zone. I am at a loss for words to describe how profoundly disturbed I was by the front-page article: Hoarding show filmed here.

Cohasset is a small, intimately connected community. While I realize that the purpose of the Mariner is to provide news and information to its readers, I am deeply saddened that the reporting of this event was deemed necessary. To add further insult to the injury of one of Cohasset's gentlest and kindest senior citizens, the article was described in lurid details accompanied by three photos!

If the purpose of the article was to inform and help, why not let the information from TLC prompt an informative article printing contact information of agencies that provide help to families and individuals in need of guidance. I know that I am not the only individual in town that was disturbed by the Mariner's monumental insensitivity and I hope that feeling will be reflected in a host of letters in next week's letters to the editor.

Susi Coley, 61 Elm St.

Heartfelt appreciation for storm help

The Board of Directors, Staff and Residents of the Cohasset Housing Authority wish to extend their sincere appreciation to the Cohasset Emergency Preparedness Team, D.P.W., Police Department, Fire Department, Boy Scouts, Varsity Boys Basketball Team, Elder Affairs and Brewster Road Residents for their efforts on behalf of our residents insuring their safety and security during the Nemo Blizzard.

Helen Nothnagle, Chairman, Cohasset Housing Authority, 60 Elm St.

Hats off to those who helped during storm

People who should be remembered in "Nemo": Jill Rosano, Elder Housing, 60 Elm St.; Coral Grande, director, Center for Elder Affairs, Main Street; Sgt. Treanor, Cohasset Police Department.

Jill worked tirelessly throughout the storm seeing we were safe and secure after loss of portable generator.

Coral Grande worked the Warming Center sending numerous volunteers around town to visit sick and elderly to be sure they were safe and to transport to the Warming Center. She spent the entire storm at the helm!

Sgt. Treanor carrying seniors out to van with "fireman's carry," arms around his neck, snow up to his waist, getting them to Warming Center from 60 Elm St.

These few were among many who helped out the senior, elderly and sick around town who you won't hear from.

Thank you for myself and all the seniors in Cohasset.

Mary Griffin, 60 Elm St.

Taking issue with Mariner editorial on call firefighters

PAUL CARLSON

How about the anonymous bloggers who are peddling this malarkey without manning up and giving us their real names?

The Mariner carried an editorial last week opposing a call system for firefighters without checking before hand with Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski or members of the Board of Selectmen and other key committees. The basis for the editorial was a couple of anonymous blog postings by people who the editor thought might be "in the know." These "in the know" folks were described as being close to the budget process.

After the editorial appeared in the newspaper, Michael Milanoski informed Editor Mary Ford that there has been no discussion of a call system in town government. She then printed a clarification on the Mariner website, but the story was already out to the broad newspaper reading public.

Certainly, the Board of Selectmen has not considered a call system. I made a quick check with the chairs of the Advisory Committee, the Capital Budget Committee, and the Budget Planning Group and with Michael Milanoski. None of these key budgetary committees and participants has considered a call fire system either. So much for bloggers "in the know."

It seems odd to me that editorials are based on anonymous blog postings when it is so easy to verify the facts. Is this the new standard for responsible journalism?

How about the anonymous bloggers who are peddling this malarkey without manning up and giving us their real names? Are they really close to the budget process? If they do not identify themselves, we have no way of judging their credibility.

We have a great group of dedicated members of the fire department. Anybody who has needed their services has been highly impressed with their skills and professionalism. If any of them have legitimate complaints and want a serious discussion of the issues, they are free to join the public debate. I will gladly give them time to speak at one of our selectmen meetings. When they have something to say, I want to hear them. Just call the selectmen's office to arrange a spot on an upcoming agenda.

In the meantime, let's not give undue credence to those who hide in the bushes.

Paul Carlson, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, lives at 18 Old Coach Road. These are his opinions and do not represent the position of the Board or the other individual members.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Wheels will be turning soon

JON BELBER

The wheels of the 1954 new tractor, the Massey Ferguson and the John Deere are also at ease in the old horse barn, ready for their spring passes...

The old metal wheel to the tiller rests quietly on an upper floor of the Main Barn. If you squeeze through the slightly ajar doors, you can peer up to see it and imagine how farmers hoed many a row, while walking slowly and deliberately behind, loosening the soil.

A glance to the left reveals carriage wheels, which held happy folks on a Sunday jaunt, several decades ago.

The wheels of the 1954 new tractor, the Massey Ferguson and the John Deere are also at ease in the old horse barn, ready for their spring passes, once the melting snow and falling rain dissipate to allow for drier conditions.

The 4-wheel drive of the black truck has been hard at work clearing snow, but now it too will stay parked for a while as most of the focus turns to the greenhouse. The only wheels needed there are the continuous sowing, watering and stove churning cycle of checking on the seeds under wraps in the greenhouse next to the farmhouse. Hoping for sun to warm during the day and slowly rising temperatures to make less frequent the midnight visits to stoke the fire. But many wheels keep turning.

Last week, 13 children were driven by car wheels onto the gravel road and into the snowy, muddy, cool confines to walk, explore and visit the farm during the February vacation farm program.

All the participants were powered by their own two feet and an excitement to discover, but walking sticks aided for unsure footing. There are still plenty of winter programs, followed seamlessly by a full slate of spring programs to entice folks of all ages to walk, bike, scoot or drive to the farm.

Lately, I have been on the phone and sent electronic, as well as US postal, mail to teachers so they can book their spring field trips. The wheels on the buses start rolling in two weeks when Hingham High School will spend a few hours starting seeds and gaining insight into sustainable agriculture, as part of their Environmental Studies class.

The wheels will certainly go round and round until mid-June as first graders, middle schoolers and students from every grade level board the yellow transports for informative, fun field trips. Teachers too will drive to the farm for training, so as to become better informed about integrating healthy food and organic farming into their classrooms and communities.

Teacher training began in 2005, when Frank and Mimi founded our first annual professional development training. One of the first participants was Rob Platka, a grade 5 teacher at the Jenkins School in Scituate. Rob arrived for those 10 hours of training by his own two wheels – on a bike. I seek to emulate that practice he completed each day when he taught and commuted from Hull. Rain, cold and nice sunny days, Rob rode, and still rides the streets of the South Shore today for probably many reasons. But, when he rode onto the farm, to learn more about organic farming, it seemed quite appropriate and in concert with respect for the environment and healthy living.

One bike I use has a child cart in tow for collecting compost and hopefully carting seedlings to school farm gardens. I need to be more diligent and take the rig out more often. I save gas and gain exercise. These efforts of sustainability are principles upheld in the act of farming organically. We are not completely gas free at the farm, but it might behoove us to gather a fleet of bicycles for the farmers, teachers and interns to pedal between the nine separate fields. Many already use their own two feet to travel to the barnyard and the fields, while longing for the company of those with four feet. As for the diesel tractor, we need to look into used vegetable oil. And with regard to tilling, I am inclined to shimmy up to the loft for the antique, walk behind tiller. There's a wheel worth reinventing and turning again.

Working together in the storm made the difference

CORAL GRANDE

The following is a recounting of a yet-to-be reported aspect of the storm response that should be told.

Thank you to the Cohasset Mariner for its coverage of the latest snowstorm. Although there are a few improvements the Town is working on, this storm, as reported, was a wonderful exercise in Town departments working together for the safety and security of all, and for neighbors helping neighbors, with much attention paid to our elder residents. I would like to express my sincere appreciation to all those who helped Cohasset Elder Affairs and many other organizations assist in the response to the latest winter storm.

The following is a recounting of a yet-to-be reported aspect of the storm response that should be told.

Cohasset Elder Affairs staff and volunteers played an integral part in providing transportation and other services to elders during the most recent storm.

Preemptory phone calls were made from Elder Affairs Thursday and Friday afternoon to more than 75 elders who need additional assistance during emergency conditions. A script was used for volunteers making these calls to make certain that each person knew what to do in case of a power outage, and was prepared for the storm.

Contact with these at-risk people was again initiated Saturday afternoon (as soon as possible), either by phone call or home visit. A cadre of volunteers – from CERT (Cohasset Emergency Response Team), CEA Board of Directors, CEA staff, CPD Explorers, and other volunteers, made 3 and 4 home visits to each of these people, and more, over the course of the next 3 days.

Our van driver, Jim Campbell, had the Elder Affairs van on the road mid afternoon Saturday (in heavy snowfall and wind) to provide transportation to those needing to come to the warming center at Deer Hill School, and did not stop until late Saturday evening (after 10 pm). Jim also drove dawn till past dusk Sunday and Monday, as well, usually bone tired, but still cheerful and still professional. He should be commended.

Calls were re-directed to me from the Cohasset Police Department from relatives and friends from many far away states wanting to check on their loved ones. As a result, either the CPD, our volunteers, or myself went out and checked on these people, and in many instances, brought that person(s) to Deer Hill, and/or to the Red Cross Regional Shelter at Weymouth High School.

Of the many tireless volunteers (including Elinore Barrett), one volunteer in particular – Mary Kay Richardson (both should be commended), helped Jill Rosano (Property Manager, Cohasset Housing Authority), manually shovel out as many residences as possible so that together with the CPD and our van driver, several residents could be carried out of their very cold apartments to warmer locations – usually the warming center or the regional shelter. Our van, again, provided transportation for many of these elders.

All of this information, by itself, may not be at the apex of the Town's response, but working together in symphony, this effort played an essential role in the manner and efficiency in which this Town responded to this emergency situation.

We could be heroes just for one day

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Yes, I am starting off this article with a title stolen from David Bowie's song "Heroes" and as you will see, it will actually come back into play later on. The term hero for some reason or another has popped up a few times in the past couple of weeks and I want to use this article to bat around a few "hero" thoughts.

We all have heroes that we admire but what constitutes a hero? While I believe like beauty, a hero's worth lies within the eye of the beholder, I went to the Dictionary.com website for a more concrete definition. They state a hero is; "a man of distinguished courage or ability, admired for his brave deeds and noble qualities." Okay, so apparently the folks at Dictionary.com need a little assistance with the whole gender reference thing, but overall a decent assessment.

Heroes come from the broadest of spectrums; parents, teachers, explorers, military personnel, doctors, civic leaders, politicians (well, maybe), first responders, athletes and many other diverse fields, but one thing they have in common is that they all possess traits that others find admirable. One of the most memorable articles I ever read was the cover story from the November 1998 Esquire Magazine, which was entirely dedicated to heroes. You know who was on the cover, Fred Rogers.

Earlier this week Doctor C. Everett Koop, the US Surgeon General throughout most of the 80's passed away at the age of 96. Doctor Koop was the embodiment of the aforementioned definition; he was a man of distinguished courage who was admired for his brave deeds and noble qualities.

A quiet and devout man, Dr. Koop set aside political and religious leanings to step to the forefront in order to address prevailing health issues that crossed over social boundaries. In a manner that the office of Surgeon General had never seen before and with the risk of losing his job by angering political foes, Doctor Koop firmly decried the dangers of tobacco and the tobacco industry. If Doctor Koop's fight against tobacco established his passion, his drive to educate the American public about AIDs defined his compassion. AIDs burst into the news as a "gay man's disease" that was more deadly and ravaging than cancer. Because of the stigma associated with AIDs, public and government support was slow to come. Doctor Koop, a man who thought homosexuality was a sin, worked tirelessly to educate a fearful and skeptical public about the causes and means to prevent the AIDs virus from spreading.

Twice I had the honor of meeting Doctor Koop and I truly admired him for his strength and willingness to expose himself to criticism for the betterment of society. The world needs more people of the caliber of C. Everett Koop, which brings me back around to David Bowie.

Following the collapse of the World Trade Center towers, a concert was held in honor of the 350+ first responders who lost their lives. David Bowie was the first performer of the evening and the manner in which he performed "Heroes" left me with tears in my eyes. As one who works in the fire protection industry, I greatly admire our nation's firefighters. I have deep resounding respect for any individual who willingly puts himself or herself in harm's way to save another. I consider myself incredibly lucky to work with so many admirable people, so much so that the running joke at my office is that when I attend the national fire related trade shows, I'm the one wearing the Sparky the Dog costume.

It is because of my respect for the firefighting community that I have struggled with the recent chat threads on the Cohasset Mariner's website. If you are not familiar with the website, I recommend you check it out. As you may know, following each online story there's an opportunity to post comments and share ideas. While some offer constructive comments, many posters using pseudonyms in lieu of their real names utilize the space to ridicule the issue du jour and others. With anonymity, grown adults are able to hide behind catch names and hurl barbs at each other. The behavior of these folks can best be described as cowardly. Say what you want about our former Town Manager, at least he uses his real name. Why he posts is anyone's guess, but at least he's man enough to put his name to his words. (For the record, I post using part of my email address – jjmcs, I don't know how to change to my full name, so I sign each post.)

Many times these online squabbles are nothing more than a tree falling in the forest when no one is around, but last week the honorable may have opted to dive into the fray. Posters claiming to be members of our town's fire department began using these threads as a means to air dirty and unsubstantiated laundry, an act that has left me disheartened.

I am not here to take a side regarding the accusations put forth, (although I find it inconceivable that our town would for a moment explore replacing our existing department with a hybrid volunteer service, given the average loss per fire is double in towns with volunteer departments – Boston Globe, 2005) rather I question why individuals who may be true heroes would resort to mudslinging while hiding behind fictitious names.

Noble, brave, distinguished and admirable qualities are the defined characteristics of heroic individuals. People of strong character like Doctor Koop step forth and deliver their message in person because they believe in what they say. If members of our fire department indeed have legitimate concerns they should step forth together to share them. If their concerns are substantive; I believe they'll have the respect and support from the majority of our community, I know I'll be first to stand up in support.

"Pay no attention to the man behind the curtain", the Wizard exclaimed. The same can be said for those who post from behind the curtain anonymously, it's certainly not a heroic act.

Thanks for reading and have a great Saint Patrick's Day.

John McSheffrey was born and raised on the South Shore and he and his family have been part of the Cohasset community since 2007. John can be reached at jjmcs@aol.com

FOR THE RECORD

Making the most of jury duty

GREGORY MATHIS

My reaction was mixed the day the jury duty summons arrived in the mail back in October.

On one hand, I've wanted to serve on a jury. I've been called a handful of times only to be told by an answering machine voice the night before that I wasn't needed, or I've sat in the jurors' room for hours before being sent home. On one occasion I saw the inside of a courtroom, but wasn't selected for the jury.

The other reaction, which is probably more common than looking forward to serving on a jury, was devising a really good excuse for getting out of driving to Brockton Trial Court. I did postpone my jury duty service due to my father passing away the beginning of December, but I would have preferred driving to Brockton.

By the time my rescheduled day arrived in February, I was looking at my busy work schedule and hoping that when I called the jurors' hotline the night before I would be told not to bother showing up at court.

No such luck.

With newspapers to put out and an important meeting scheduled in Needham, I worked well into the night to get as much of the next day's work done as possible and to clear my schedule. I was still holding out hope that I'd show up, watch a little daytime TV with the other members of the jury pool, and be on the road by noon to make my 1 p.m. meeting.

Strike two.

We sat and watched a lot of mindless television that day, but the court officer assured us there would be some judicial activity. He told us there were several cases that could go to trial and we were just waiting for the judges and lawyers to go through their processes.

Since I was already in the courthouse and the day's work had been reassigned or canceled, I was hoping this would be my chance to sit on a jury. If anything, I thought, I would get a column out of it.

Sure enough, juror 7 (me) became the fifth person selected to serve after answering a few questions about my job as a newspaper editor and my wife's previous service on a federal jury back in 2010. After assuring the judge and the two lawyers I could be impartial, I took my place in the jurors' box.

Initially the case seemed to be a snooze. It didn't unfold like it does on the copious television courtroom dramas, but as witnesses were called and the cross-examination and sidebars took place, it became more intriguing.

The seven jurors were instructed by the judge not to discuss the case with anyone, even amongst ourselves, so there was little communication between us during the trial. That all changed when six of us were sent to the jury deliberation room to reach a verdict (one alternate member was chosen by the judge and was not part of the deliberation).

It was a rush to sit in a room with people you've never met and decide the outcome of a case.

After two-plus hours of taking all the evidence and testimony and the judge's instructions into consideration we reached a verdict – not guilty.

And I got a column out of it.

NEWS UPDATE

Officials clash on Town Counsel

Debate hiring other firm for HR

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Things became heated during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting when the matters of Human Resources and Town Counsel became intertwined during a discussion on hiring HR legal services.

An agenda item concerning a Request for Proposals (RFP) for Town Counsel was postponed, as the board's consensus was that this should be looked at after the April 22 Annual Town Meeting; however, Town Counsel still became part of the discussion as the selectmen weighed the merits of hiring a law firm to conduct an HR audit.

After much debate, however, the board decided that this matter, too, could wait until Town Meeting. This went against Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's recommendation, citing lack of compliance and years of neglect in Town Hall, where policies and procedures manuals were last updated in the late 1990s.

"The laws have changed" since then, Milanoski explained, adding that "this was not a priority" for past town managers. "It slipped through the cracks."

Selectman Fred Koed said that he did not see the harm in waiting a few more months to address the issue at Town Meeting and let voters decide.

"Fifteen years of neglect can wait seven more weeks," said Koed.

Milanoski first pitched the idea of hiring legal counsel to conduct an HR audit, and bring Cohasset into compliance with state regulations, during the Feb. 5 selectmen meeting. He gave the board a proposal from the Boston firm Kopelman and Paige for the cost of $20,000 for four months of work, which would include an audit and creating HR policies and procedures for the town. The selectmen asked Milanoski to obtain competitive bids from other firms.

Two of the selectmen, Koed and Martha Gjesteby, did not understand the need to hire a law firm when the town already retains Boston firm Deutsch Williams for legal counsel. Koed wanted more information before agreeing to hire another firm. Selectman Diane Kennedy, meanwhile, said that she agreed with Milanoski that an HR audit was necessary, and it needs to be done by lawyers.

Milanoski complied with the board's request for more bids, and brought two more to Tuesday's meeting, along with an adjusted price from Kopelman and Paige of $17,500. Milanoski explained that the firm lowered the price because if hired, the firm would not get to work until mid-March; if the selectmen had agreed to hire them on Feb. 5, the audit would already be underway.

Milanoski also received a proposal from an HR firm that would charge $23,000 to conduct the same services without any legal work. Town Counsel Deutsch Williams also made a bid for $18,500, which would exclude all of the existing labor the town is billed for.

The selectmen were torn between the options.

Gjesteby once again questioned the logic of hiring lawyers to do a job she felt Cohasset citizens could do themselves. She argued that appointing an HR committee would make more sense.

"We shouldn't be spending all this money," Gjesteby said of hiring a firm. "It's good to use all the wealth [of talent] we have in our town. We don't want big money spent; I don't think a law firm is appropriate at this time."

Kennedy once again said that she was in favor of hiring legal counsel to do the work, but added that she was inclined to go with Deutsch Williams.

"I really feel very strongly that we need to have a law firm take us where we need to be on stable footing," said Kennedy. While she felt that Kopelman and Paige could lend a "fresh eye" to an HR audit, Kennedy explained that Deutsch Williams already "knows all the players in town."

Kennedy added that a $1,000 price difference is "very little" in a competitive bid.

Milanoski was asking for a reserve fund transfer to cover the costs of the HR audit, but Koed said the fund should only be used for emergencies. While the town manager stressed the urgency of the issues, Koed said that he felt the matter could wait for Town Meeting approval; that way, the cost could be factored into the Fiscal Year 2014 budget.

Kennedy and Gjesteby both ultimately agreed with Koed that Town Meeting should have a say.

Milanoski also seemed hesitant about accepting Deutsch William's proposal when, apparently, the firm has been asked to conduct HR services in the past but has not done so.

"There's another side to the story," said Milanoski. "There are many other issues not being addressed."

Koed said that Town Counsel Paul DeRensis should be part of the discussion, and hinted at a breakdown in communication between Milanoski and DeRensis.

Milanoski said that he had many emails from department heads that would back up his claims and was "happy to discuss" his issues with Town Counsel. Koed did not like the idea of "trotting out witnesses" against Town Counsel.

Milanoski responded, "I'm not trying to put town counsel on trial. We have a void in HR; it's irrelevant to Deutsch Williams. The service needs to be done; we have ongoing potential liability issues we're exposed to that I'm now aware of."

The town manager said he recommended hiring Kopelman and Paige because the firm specializes in HR, and it was nothing against Deutsch Williams. However, he told the selectmen, "Whatever the board wants to do after that with town counsel is up to you."

Later in the meeting, during the public comment period, Tanna Kasperowicz, South Main Street, told the board that she had heard a rumor that they planned to fire Town Counsel that night. Kennedy said that the rumor had to do with the discussion on the RFP, which was postponed; selectmen chair Paul Carlson responded, "The answer to that question is 'no.'"

SENATE RACE

Gomez makes kick-off speech

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"America deserves better. Our country has problems and we need problem solvers. That's why I am running."
Gabriel Gomez, Republican Senate candidate from Cohasset

Gabriel Gomez, Republican Senate candidate from Cohasset, has been silent on the campaign trail so far, only communicating to the press through a few YouTube videos that his campaign released. On the morning of Thursday, Feb. 28, Gomez released a statement, his "kick-off" speech for the campaign.

Gomez began his statement in Spanish, introducing himself and saying, "I've never been in politics before... and I'm running for the United States Senate."

Gomez ran for the Cohasset Board of Selectmen in 2003 but was not elected.

A former Navy SEAL, Gomez attended Harvard Business School and has spent 15 years in the investment business, "where we do all we can to help companies grow."

The reason Gomez said he is running for the Senate is because he is concerned about the business that is America.

"As a business man, if I were evaluating the federal government today, I would say that it is an overextended, bloated organization that literally has no budget, runs at a significant annual loss, and is $16 trillion in debt. I would never invest pension funds for Massachusetts public employees in a company like that," said Gomez. "Yet we all are invested in that Government – and it's time to fix it! When I look at Washington I see non-stop bickering. I see a dysfunctional, partisan atmosphere.

"America deserves better," Gomez continued. "Our country has problems and we need problem solvers. That's why I am running."

Gomez also warns that there will be times throughout his campaign where he might appear "confused about politics."

"I'm confused why the US Senate has not produced a single budget in over four years. I'm confused how the federal government consistently spends more money than it has. I'm confused by politicians who attack each other rather than looking for common ground. And I'm confused why we the voters continue to put up with it," Gomez said.

The candidate also said that while many try to pigeonhole political candidates with labels such as "conservative," "liberal," or "moderate," Gomez said that he is none of these things. "I'm a Navy guy."

And while technically Gomez is a Republican, he explained that he feels he is "a new kind of Republican." While acknowledging that he holds some conservative views, Gomez considers himself to be an independent thinker, and has no plans to "engage in partisan trench warfare" if elected.

"I will endeavor to be a voice for bipartisanship, reasonableness and common sense," Gomez pledged. "Sending yet another career politician to the Senate would be more of the same."

Update: Fox Run dispute

Residents of the Fox Run neighborhood were back before the Board of Selectmen this week to discuss their concerns over the open space purchase by the Cohasset Conservation Trust that could see public trails developed, which would go through some of the residents' yards.

Fox Run is a small private way off of Forest Avenue. The May 2012 Annual Town Meeting approved using $100,000 in Community Preservation funds to purchase a conservation restriction for the 34 acres of land.

Fox Run neighbors claim that the project was not properly explained to Town Meeting last year. Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she seemed to remember the notion of public trails being brought up during initial discussions of the project, but the subject was quickly dropped and never came up again until recently.

At the last selectmen meeting on Feb. 12, these residents were told to work out their issues with the CCT. During the Tuesday, Feb. 26 meeting, Fox Run resident John Leffel said that he reached out to CCT but has not yet heard back.

The selectmen reiterated their request from their last meeting. "I stand by what I recommended last time," said selectmen chair Paul Carlson. "There's not much of a role for us to play but to encourage the neighbors and CCT to get together."

Volume 39 - Report No. 8 February 22, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. As is customary during the February school vacation week, there were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the 2012 official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by the Legislature's 40 state representatives from January 1, 2012 to December 31, 2012. The list reveals that representatives collected a total of $298,999. Beacon Hill Roll Call reported a few weeks ago that state senators in 2012 collected $58,304 in per diems. The combined 2012 total collected by representatives and senators is $357,303.

Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to representatives "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to representatives above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a representative resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for legislators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Members who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Supporters of the per diems say the system is fair and note the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. They note many legislators spend a lot of money on traveling to Boston and some spend the night in Boston following late sessions.

Some opponents argue most private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. Others say the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers have lost their jobs and homes, the state is in the midst of a recession, and funding for important programs has been cut.

The 2012 statistics indicate that 101 state representatives received reimbursements ranging from $432 to $9,400, while 59 have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that senators must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The representative who received the most money in 2012 is Rep. Timothy Madden (D-Nantucket) with $9,400.

Representatives rounding out the top ten include Gailanne Cariddi (D-North Adams), $8,460; William "Smitty" Pignatelli (D-Lenox), $8,100; John Binienda (D-Worcester), $7,776; Former Rep. Demetrius Atasalis (D-West Barnstable), $7,350; Paul Mark (D-Hancock), $6,840; Michael Finn (D-West Springfield), $6,732; Tricia Farley-Bouvier (D-Pittsfield), $6,660; Ellen Story (D-Amherst), $6,480; and Angelo Puppolo (D-Springfield), $6,420.

REPRESENTATIVES' 2012 PER DIEMS

The dollar figure next to the representative's name represents the total amount of per diem money the state paid him or her for 2012. The number in parentheses represents the number of days the representative certified he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

VIOLENCE PROTECTION (H 57) - A new law, signed by Gov. Deval Patrick as part of a supplemental budget, requires that any state-operated or state-funded human service program providing direct services to clients have a workplace violence prevention and crisis response plan for its social workers, human services workers, volunteers and all other employees. The proposal was prompted by the 2008 death of 53-year-old social worker Diruhi Mattian, who was performing a home visit when she was murdered by her client.

Supporters say that more than 50 percent of social workers in Massachusetts have been physically assaulted in a work-related incident, ranging from pushing, hitting, and choking to life-threatening attacks. They note it is time to protect these dedicated, often underpaid workers.

DEADLINE TO REGISTER TO VOTE FOR U.S. SENATE ELECTION - April 10 is the last day to register to vote in the special state primary to fill the U.S. Senate seat given up by Secretary of State John Kerry. Registration hours are from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., except in towns with under 1,500 registered voters, where the hours are 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

EARLY CANDIDATES - Meanwhile, Sens. William Brownsberger (D-Belmont) and Katherine Clark (D-Melrose), and Rep. Carl Sciortino (D-Somerville) have taken the unusual step of already announcing their intention to run for U.S. Rep. Edward Markey's seat if Markey is elected U.S. senator in the special election.

THOUSANDS OF PROPOSALS FOR THE 2013-2014 SESSION - Many pieces of legislation have been filed for consideration in the 2013-2014 Legislature. Here are ten of the more interesting ones:

LABEL TUNA TOXINS - Requires labels on tuna, swordfish and other saltwater fish to provide information about the toxin levels' hazards to consumers' health including young children and pregnant women.

BALLOT LISTING OF CANDIDATES - Prohibits the use of the word "incumbent" next to a candidate's name on local and state ballots and replacing the word "unenrolled" with "independent" when referring to a candidate without a party affiliation. Also provides that candidates be listed on the ballot in an order determined by a random lottery. Current law requires incumbents to be listed first, followed by an alphabetical listing of candidates of established political parties and then an alphabetical list of non-party candidates.

NO SMOKING IN CARS WITH YOUNG KIDS - Prohibits smoking in cars in which there is a child who is required to be in a child passenger restraint. Under Massachusetts law, children must use a restraint until they are at least eight years old or at least 57 inches tall.

DONATE FOOD WITHOUT LIABILITY - Immunizes from criminal and civil liability, businesses that make good-faith food donations to food pantries and homeless shelters. Current law immunizes only individuals.

OPTIONAL SEX EDUCATION - Requires any school's sex education courses to be offered only on a non-mandatory elective basis in which parents may choose to enroll their children through written notification. Also requires schools to implement a written policy ensuring that parents are notified of the programs and their content and prohibits public school teachers or administrators from being required to participate in any school programs that violate their religious beliefs.

NO NAMES (H 2773) - Prohibits the placing of the name of any appointed or elected official on any state signs and property.

SIMPLIFY LANGUAGE (H 2809) - Requires all documents published by the state to be written in language understandable by a child at a third grade reading level.

VISITING NURSES (H 3018) - Exempts from city and town parking fines any vehicles driven by visiting nurses on duty.

PROSTITUTES (H 1322) - Increases the prison sentence for "johns" of prostitutes from the current one-year sentence and/or up to a $750 fine to 2.5 years in prison and/or up to a $5,000 fine.

ALLOW SUNDAY HUNTING (not yet numbered) - Allows hunting on Sundays with a bow and arrow. Current law bans hunting on Sundays.

ELDERLY ABUSE (not yet numbered) - Requires mandated reporters, including doctors, nurses, social workers, police and firefighters, to report incidents of compulsive hoarding by senior citizens. Hoarding is acquisition of and unwillingness to discard large quantities of items that cover the living areas of the home and threaten the health and safety of the resident.

UPDATE

DOR review released

Recommends HR audit, meals/hotel tax, cutting legal costs

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Selectman Diane Kennedy noted that since these matters are already being looked into, "there weren't a lot of surprises" in the report.

The state Department of Revenue (DOR) conducted a management review of Cohasset's town government during the close of Fiscal Year 2012 (which ended June 30, 2012), and the report was issued on Monday, Feb. 25. Acting Town Manager gave an overview of the main points of the report during the Tuesday, Feb. 26 Board of Selectmen meeting, although the selectmen had just received a copy of the 35-page report that day and had little time to review the document in advance.

The DOR identified 27 areas of concern for Cohasset to work on; officials stated that many of these issues are already being addressed. Selectman Diane Kennedy noted that since these matters are already being looked into, "there weren't a lot of surprises" in the report.

The issues include:

The need to boost the town's stability or reserve fund, which is "growing," according to Milanoski, but still low;

Better consistency in the town's financial management; Town Hall has had several in the role of Financial Director/Town Accountant over the years, but Mary Gallagher has been at the helm since late 2011;

• The need for accurate record keeping;

• Implementing a local options hotel and meals tax, something Cohasset has explored before but Town Meeting has shot down, twice;

• The need for a Human Resources audit and/or hiring an HR person;

• Formalizing personnel policies and updating job descriptions for town employees;

• Better managing of legal services and costs; the report indicates that Cohasset's legal costs are "significantly higher" than those of its peer communities;

• Resolving storage issues of old files;

• Developing procedures and training manuals for employees;

• Improving information technology (IT) by starting a technology committee shared between the town and schools; the two already share an IT position, Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell;

• And upgrading the town website, which Milanoski estimated would be completed by the end of the current fiscal year.

The DOR report delved into many of Cohasset's issues, but also said the town was in good hands with its finance department, including Gallagher and Treasurer Collector Jane Lepardo. This praise was echoed by auditing firm Powers and Sullivan in their FY12 audit.

Milanoski said that while there are still things to work on, the overall outlook is good. "This is an objective report," he said of the DOR review. "The overview sums up a lot of initiatives the board of selectmen have allowed us to do over the past year to bring Cohasset to a more transparent form of government; it's paid off a lot."

Since the selectmen only had a brief overview of the report, selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that the board should have "a more detailed discussion" at a future meeting.

VETERANS UPDATE

Cohasset to hire new VSO soon

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Hingham's full-time VSO Keith Jermyn visited Cohasset's Board of Selectmen meeting Tuesday night to give an update on how the regionalized program has been going.

Cohasset will continue its working relationship with Hingham, regionalizing veterans' services, while planning to staff a part-time Veterans' Service Officer (VSO) sometime in the near future.

Hingham's full-time VSO Keith Jermyn visited Cohasset's Board of Selectmen meeting Tuesday night to give an update on how the regionalized program has been going. The partnership between the two towns started last September. Before that police Sergeant Garrett Hunt had been serving as interim VSO since the Cohasset's last permanent VSO, Joe McElroy, stepped down in late 2011.

Jermyn works mainly out of his office in Hingham Town Hall, where he has a staff assisting him, and part-time out of Cohasset's VSO office above Sovereign Bank at Cohasset Plaza (380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite F). Many of Cohasset residents receiving veterans assistance have opted to visit Jermyn there, although he is also at the Cohasset office after 1 p.m. on Friday's by appointment.

A volunteer veteran is also providing services in the Elder Affairs' office in the Community Center, said Jermyn, thanks to the help of EA director Coral Grande. The EA has referred four veterans to Jermyn for assistance.

Grande praised the "good working relationship" between Hingham's VSO office and Cohasset's EA, saying that she is "thrilled to able to carve out a little piece of space in our little tiny piece of space" in the community center. "This is a great marriage," she added. "Hopefully it sets us up for a new partnership in the new [senior] center," which is expected to open sometime in 2014.

Veterans' services provide veterans with assistance in obtaining food, shelter, clothing, housing and medical care under Mass. General Laws Chapter 115. Jermyn reported that Massachusetts is the only state to provide these benefits, and has done so since the end of the Civil War.

Jermyn gave a status update on Cohasset veterans, reporting that the town currently has nine veterans or widows receiving assistance. Despite the change in temporary VSOs over the past year, Jermyn said that many of the veterans "had no idea there had been a change, which is what we hoped for." His job as an assistant VSO to Cohasset has been to ensure "a seamless transition of monthly veterans assistance."

Jermyn said that it "has been a pleasure" working in Cohasset so far. Now, he is working with Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski to hire a new VSO by April 1. The part-time position is for 10 to 15 hours per week.

Milanoski said that the regional relationship with Hingham will continue, however, in case Cohasset's part-time VSO ends up pursuing a full-time position in another community; "At least we have Keith and his office to help transition so the veterans won't lose access to benefits."

The town manager plans to advertise the position soon.

The notion of a town Veterans Council was also discussed. Hingham has one — a board of 15 people, two-thirds of whom are required by law to be veterans, one-third of whom are citizens-at-large. Jermyn explained that this board functions as an extension of the VSO office and is "pivotal to the success of the whole department." He acknowledged, however, that Cohasset is not quite at that stage.

"I urge you down the road to consider picking that up," Jermyn said. "That's in the future — right now we're trying to sustain what we have."

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Boys roll in third on way to playoff win

When it comes to the MIAA Tournament, anything can happen.

There are always games featuring highly seeded teams against much lower seeds that turn out to be anomalies due to one strength of schedule, or an upstart from a lower division that played higher all season long.

Wednesday night's Div. 4 South Sectional first round game between Cohasset and Southeastern Regional wasn't one of those games.

The No. 4 seeded Cohasset boys basketball team started slowly, but turned on the jets in the third quarter with a 25-5 run on the way to a 64-51 win over visiting No. 13 Southeastern Regional School (10-9) in the opening round of the MIAA Division 4 South Sectional Tournament on Wednesday night.

Cohasset's Chris Haggerty tries to work around Southeastern's Fernando Quade on Wednesday night.

Shane Haggerty led the Skippers with 27 points, outdueling Southeastern's Allen Herring, who scored 29.

The difference was the supporting cast, and the score was a bit misleading.

After three quarters, Cohasset led 49-23 and down the stretch, Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero, who was recently named South Shore League Coach of the Year, gave everyone on the squad a chance to get tournament action.

Nine Skippers scored, and all 13 played.

Joe Buckley scored 9, while Henry Brown and Alex Norton chipped in 6 each.

Christian Davis and Rocco Laugelle both added 5 points

Skippers win tourney opener before elimination in OT

The Cohasset Mariner

With a frustrating loss to Scituate in the final game of the regular season in the rear view mirror, the Cohasset bus rolled into Canton Metropolitan Arena on Monday night for the opening game of the Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament.

It went well as the No. 22 seeded Skippers (11-10-0) upset No. 11 Westwood 3-2 in a preliminary round game to advance to Wednesday's first-round bout against No. 6 Blue Hills (13-3-4).

This young, tenacious team electrified a huge crowd of Cohasset fans with the spectacular win against Westwood.

The season came to a rough ending however, as Cohasset lost 4-3 in overtime to No. 6 seeded Blue Hills in Canton, Wednesday night.

Ski team finished successful season

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset Ski Team finished up a very successful season at Blue Hills on Wednesday night. The team rebounded strongly in their second year back after not fielding a team for several years.

Participation has doubled since last year with most of the growth coming from freshman and eighth graders. The young team should continue to grow and become more competitive under Head Coach Jack Danes' guidance.

On the boys side: Ben Astley skied well all season, consistently placing in the top 10 and qualified for the State Championships.

Hollis Hunnewell, Devin Kennedy, Chris Norton, Ray Tolosko and Kyle Gunderson all were competitive and showed great improvement during the season.

On the girls side: eighth graders Sophie Matthews and Betsy Faherty skied great all season.

Outstanding season

Grapplers fifth at Sectionals

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

It was a solid finish for the Cohasset wrestling team.

"We placed fifth at sectionals as a team, out of 13," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "Pembroke, Hingham, Foxboro and Hanover finished ahead of us."

Hanover was only a half point ahead.

For Cohasset Sweeney had several ouststanding performances.

At 106, eighth grader Drew Skolnick finished fouth.

"That was great experience and our first eighth grader to place in sectionals," Sweeney said. It was a great day for Harry Helbock as well. He finished fourth at 113 after being seeded sixth. He also won a match at States."

Senior Captain Greg Berube took fouth place and also won a match at states at 120.

and drive brought them the victory they deserved.

Terence Doonan scored (assisted by Adam Benson) within three minutes of the first period to set the stage for a competitive game.

A goal by senior Bendan Queenan (assisted by Curtis Golden and Michael Lund) in the second period energized the Skippers who kept the heat on against Westwood.

The third period began with a 3- 1 lead by Cohasset.

Junior goalie Brandon Winn would not let up as Westwood pounded him with shots. Cohasset's strong defense of junior Captain's Chris Lund and Mickey Barry controlled the play inside the Skippers blue line.

The return of Derek Benson was a huge boost to Cohasset's offense.

Forwards Tom Powers, Adam Benson and Curtis Golden moved the puck spectacularly all game long.

The third goal turned out to be the winning goal – scored by Terrence Doonan assisted by Chris Cohen fortified Cohasset's dominance on the ice.

Westwood kept the pressure on but thanks to the magnificent play of Winn in net – Westwood could not score on the junior goaltender. As the final buzzer rang Cohasset fans – led by Dallas Purcell and Conor Dooley rushed to congratulate this talented team who has now advanced to the second round of the MIAA Division III High School Playoffs.

The win was a quick comeback after the team suffered a frustrating 5-4 loss in the last game of the regular season to one of their top rivals, Scituate, last Friday afternoon at the Bog in Kingston.

Cohasset was ahead 3-0 after the first period, but a series of penalities against Cohasset in the second period gave Scituate the momentum to score five second-period goals in a game that was truly a battle to the finish.

Standout play by forwards Colin Whelan, Chris Cohen, Jeffrey Powers as well as defensemen Michael Lund and Matt Legge enabled Cohasset to put up a strong fight.

A win by Cohasset would have knocked Scituate out of the playoffs.

ethic and leadership all season," Sweeney said. "At 126, freshman Sean Mavilia was the surprise of the tournament. He was the No. 5 seed and he beat the No. 1 seed in the semi finals with a four point move with 15 seconds left in the match. Sean went on to states and placed eighth (they wrestled for seventh and this year) so that's an official placement. Sean beat a two time state place winner in his third match to qualify for the medal round."

At 132, junior Joe Sestito placed fourth in the one of strongest weight classes in the tournament. Joe also won a match at states.

Sophomore Matt Froio Finished third in the Sectionals and won a match at states.

"Matt lead the team with 32-8 record," Sweeney said.

In the 195 division, senior Mike Livingstone took second in the sectionals and fifth in the state.

"Mike became the 10th two time state placewinner in CHS History," Sweeney said. "He finished 6th last season.

"Seniors Axel Seppala, Graham Bell and Zach Washak all had winning season's for us. Juniors John Nolan (160) and Chandler Skolnick (152) had solid seasons for the Skippers and had big dual meet wins for us all season. Sophomore Hayes Keniley was one of our most improved wrestlers and shared the 160 class with Nolan. Hayes had some big team wins for us this season. Sophomore Kyle McKnight just started wrestling this year and did a great job learning the sport."

Another big thing for Cohasset was youth.

"Freshman Nick Hall was another first year wrestler that finished with a 12-8 record which was remarkable given the tough 138 and 145 weight classes that he competed in," Sweeney said.

The following five freshman all had varsity opportunities though out the season and gained valuable experience for next year. Sean Kearns (106), Whyatt Dominquez (113), Dom Sestito (120), Conor Naughton (120) and Davis Cronin (126).

The team finished with an 18-11 dual meet record.

"It was a great year," Sweeney said, summing up his feelings.

Michael Hill won his second USTA New England 12 and under tournament at the famous Sportsman's Tennis Club in Boston on February 20 using a strong serve, sharp slice backhands, big forehands, and solid net play over Spencer Pogue of Edgartown, MA, Cole Hamilton of Carlisle, MA, and Jacob Schwartz of Newton, MA. Mackenzie Axelson was impressive all season, qualified for States and finished second overall in the league. She had three first place finishes, three second place finishes and just barely missed winning the league title in the last race of the season.

At the State Championships, Mackenzie Axelson finished 14th in Slalom, while Caty Gilman finished 32nd in Giant Slalom and 36th in Slalom.

Astley, meanwhile, Finished 107 in Giant Slalom, 90 in Slalom.

memory. As a result, the school was able to field for the first time a junior varsity team that played at Black Rock Country Club. Part of the interest is a result of the success that the boys varsity program has experienced by winning the South Shore League title in each of the past four seasons.

The boys varsity team plays at Cohasset Golf Club.

It may not be a known fact, but two of the strongest girl's high school golf programs in Massachusetts reside just down the road. In Hingham, the Notre Dame Academy girls team came in first in the state in 2012. The Hingham High School girls team, which has been in existence for ten years, finished third in the state rankings.

Both teams participate in the MIAA's Massachusetts Bay League.

Similar to the generosity provided to the boys varsity program, the Cohasset Golf Club has offered its facilities to this girls club program.

The program will run from the first week of April through the third week of May.

It will be coached by Nikki Lanzetta-Custenborder who is the Director of Instruction and Player Development at Rockland Golf Course and also Teaching Pro at Green Harbor Golf Club in Marshfield. There is no experience required to participate, but is expected that the participants be committed since this program is strictly limited to no more than 12 openings.

During these two months, there will be considerable focus on development at the practice facilities and also on-course golf strategy. Golf etiquette and rules of the game will also be covered. The goal at the end of the program is to develop better golf skills, build confidence, enhance knowledge of the sport, and increase enjoyment of a game that could be a lifetime sport. Also in the planning stages are non-league matches at the end of the season against other high school teams from the Mass Bay League.

The club program is open to any middle or high school girl in Cohasset, but preference will be given to high school level students. The fee for the program has not been determined, but will be competitive with most seasonal sports program in town. If the club program is successful, the hope is that it will serve as the model to becoming a school varsity offering in the future.

If you have any interest in this program or would like to learn more, contact Maggie Moy at maggiemoy@comcast.net.

The win sets up a game against No. 5 Holbrook (15-4) tonight at home at 7 p.m.

Holbrook beat No. 12 Old Colony (11-10) 67-47 in the first round to set up the match.

"Getting the first win in the tournament out of the way feels good, especially when you're the higher seed. It's never an easy game," Ruggiero said. "We played at home and started out flat. We picked it up when we needed to. The press took its toll and it gave us an opportunity to get our entire roster in the game."

The win improved Cohasset to 18-4 this season.

"We're 18-4," Ruggiero said. "That's an elite number."

As for Haggerty, Ruggiero was pleased.

"Shane has to play," he said. "He's the guy who makes us go."

Haggerty and Christian Davis were both named South Shore League All-Stars.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Cohasset's Martin honored

The Liberty League announced its year-end men's basketball award winners and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute senior captain Daniel Martin, a former Cohasset High School star, earned Defensive Player of the Year and All-Liberty League Honorable Mention.

Martin, a center, was chosen the league's top defender by ranking among the league leaders in blocks with 67 and rebounding with 173 (6.7 per game). He registered 10-or-more rebounds in five games and had multiple blocks in 15 contests. Martin, who averages 8.3 points per game, also has 26 steals in 25 games.

This is the first time Martin has earned year-end Liberty League accolades.

Rensselaer is riding an eight-game winning streak which has pushed its record to 17-9. The Engineers, who are coached by Mike Griffin, were 11-5 in the league and earned the third seed in the post-season tournament.

RPI defeated second-seeded Union, 85-77, in the semi-finals and face top-seeded Hobart on Saturday at 3 pm in Geneva, NY. The winner of Saturday's game is the league champion and earns an automatic berth into the NCAA Tournament.

Flibotte honored

Bucknell freshman midfielder Thomas Flibotte, a former Cohasset star athlete (football, wrestling, lacrosse) was honored by the Patriot League on Monday after playing a prominent role in a 10-8 victory over defending Northeast Conference champion Bryant on Saturday in the team's home opener. Flibotte earned his second Rookie of the Week award in the first three weeks of the season.

Flibotte scored two of Bucknell's five second-quarter goals against Bryant. Both of his goals came on hard outside shots, and both of them broke ties. His second tally snapped a 4-all deadlock and gave the Bison the lead for good. Flibotte now has five goals in three games to start his career. Thanks for supporting the Special Olympics!

The South Shore Mariners pose for a team picture during the annual Polar Plunge for the Massachusetts Special Olympics held Saturday, Feb. 23 at Nantasket Beach.

2013 Polar Plunge draws a crowd

The 15th Annual Polar Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts took place at Nantasket Beach last Saturday, and what a great time was had by a record number of over 616 registered plungers (and many "drop-ins!"). The day began with the fun Costume Parade with outfits ranging from Fairy Tale characters to Pirates, Mariners, Polar Bears, and 116 Hula Dancers, with more than 1,000 spectators huddling together in the cold air and wind to cheer the Plungers on.

Then followed the serious, adrenalin-pumping business of dashing out and plunging into the icy, roaring surf! Teams came from high schools and colleges, businesses, and Special Olympics community programs, with men and women ranging from age10 to near 80! All survived the 39-degree air and water, with the cold on-shore wind pushing surf into the beach! The U.S. Coast Guard provided volunteer rescue divers and a cutter from Point Allerton just offshore!

The important result is that, together with 500 who plunged simultaneously at Revere Beach, a record total of over $400,000 (still adding!) was raised to support the year-round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for 13,000 athletes in Massachusetts. As the Special Olympics doesn't charge athletes or their families to participate, these funds are vitally important. Even with the help of 12,000 volunteers, it costs almost $500 per year to support each athlete.

The 30-member South Shore Mariners Team again won the state-wide award for Highest Fundraising Local Program, raising over $31,000, with more donations still arriving by mail. Cohasset Mariners included: Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Geoff Chamberlain, Kit Coffey, Laurel Hickey, Brian Host, Jessica MacDonald, Steve Myers, Jay and Jeff Nothnagle, and Pat Plante. Jay Nothnagle, Team Captain, again was the Highest Individual Fundraiser at Nantasket Beach with over $9,000 collected. Also Plunging with SSharcs of the South Shore were Cohasset residents Charlotte, Graham, and Nick Sida. The funds raised come back to our local Mariners program, based in Scituate, which has 90 athletes, ages 8 to 76, from seven South Shore towns from Milton to Duxbury, and helps to fund area, section and state-wide competitions.

If you haven't yet had a chance, please support our athletes with a pledge! Send a check to your favorite plunger, payable to Special Olympics, or go on-line at: (SpecialOlympics-MA.org/SponsorPlunger) our secure website to pledge.

Again, a sincere "thank you" from your local team to all who pledged and supported this wonderful organization that builds physical fitness, self-confidence, pride, and healthy athletes!

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Check your wallet to see when your driver's license expires. Massachusetts has stopped mailing out renewal notices of driver's licenses (and registrations). Unlike many other states, Massachusetts does not have a grace period for expiration for expired driver's licenses. It is actually a criminal offense (not a civil offense such as speeding) to drive with an expired license. Also, your vehicle is subject to being towed if you are pulled over and don't have a valid license. COURTESY PHOTO

FOOD

WISE TO THE WORD

DAIKON: An Asian radish with a sweet and spicy flavor. It is an essential ingredient in Asian cooking and the most popular vegetable in Japan. The literal translation from the Japanese is "big root." The most common variety of daikon, however, looks like a turnip or white carrot, and that's probably the kind you'll find near the fresh ginger in the produce aisle. — Cookthink.com

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

BRANDPOINT

Understanding food labels

Here are common food-related terms you're sure to see at restaurants or supermarkets, according to the U.S. Farmers & Ranchers Alliance:

Organic: The main difference between organic and non-organically grown foods is the production method — those who raise organically-grown food must follow a strict set of guidelines outlined by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Organic food can be more expensive because, in some cases, it costs more to produce. A common misconception is that the increased cost of organic food relates directly to its superior nutritional value, which is unproven.

Local: Local food is grown (or raised) and harvested close to where it is sold. It's distributed a much shorter distance than is common in the conventional global industrial food system.

By Family Features

To keep hearts healthy, the USDA recommends eating at least 8 ounces of seafood per week, ideally two 4-ounce servings. Here are ways you can add delicious, heart-healthy seafood to your diet:

■ Choose seafood which offer nutritional benefits such as heart-healthy omega-3s such as pollock, cod, halibut, sole, King and Snow crab, black cod and salmon.

■ Prepare seafood so it's lean and flavorful by using healthy cooking methods such as grilling, roasting or baking.

■ Add flavor using spices and fresh or dried herbs as seasonings.

■ Serve seafood with healthful sides, such as whole grains, roasted vegetables and crisp greens.

Cod Moroccan-Style with Mango-Carrot Slaw

Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 20 minutes
Servings: 4
4 Alaska Cod fillets
2 T olive oil, divided
1/2 cup finely chopped shallots
1/4 cup chopped cilantro
2 T fresh grated ginger
1 can vegetable broth, divided
1 t sugar
4 cloves garlic, chopped
Large pinch of saffron
1 t cinnamon
1/2 t allspice
2 cups dry couscous
1/4 cup toasted almond slices
Mango Slaw:
1 mango, peeled and sliced
1/2 red bell pepper, finely sliced
1/2 cup shredded carrot
1/4 cup chopped cilantro
1 T fresh lime juice
1 t grated lime peel
2 t orange juice
1 T honey
1/2 t cinnamon

Rinse any ice glaze from frozen fillets under cold water; pat dry with paper towel.

Heat heavy nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Brush both sides of cod with 1 tablespoon oil.

Place in heated skillet and cook, uncovered, about 3 to 4 minutes, until browned. Shake pan occasionally to keep from sticking.

Turn cod over, cover pan tightly and reduce heat to medium. Cook an additional 6 to 8 minutes for frozen cod or 3 to 4 minutes for fresh/thawed fish. Cook just until fish is opaque throughout. Remove from pan; keep warm.

In the same pan, saute shallots in 1 tablespoon oil just until soft, about 2 minutes. Add cilantro, ginger, 1 cup vegetable broth, sugar, garlic, saffron, cinnamon and allspice; cook until thickened. Meanwhile, prepare couscous according to package directions, using remaining vegetable broth as part of the liquid.

Slaw: In large bowl, combine mango, bell pepper, carrot and cilantro.

In separate small bowl, blend lime juice and peel, orange juice, honey and cinnamon. Pour dressing over slaw; toss.

For each serving: Place about 3/4 cup couscous on a plate; top with 1/2 cup mango slaw. Top with a cod fillet. Pour 1/4 cup shallot sauce over fish; garnish with 1 tablespoon toasted almonds.

Mix parsley, celery, red pepper, orange segments, fresh dill and seasoning salt together in large bowl. Add potatoes to celery mixture; stir.

For dressing, saute green onions in olive oil. Add orange juice (if using canned mandarins, omit orange juice and use the juice in the can) and Dijon; whisk. While warm, pour dressing over salad. Add halibut chunks and mix gently.

Tips for dealing with food allergies at school

By Brandpoint

Food is a very important part of the school day, from snacks and treats to the lunch hour, but children with food allergies could face extreme consequences if they come in contact with certain foods.

All states have laws governing how schools protect students and employees with allergies and asthma, but these laws vary from state to state. Each year the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America releases its State Honor Roll of Asthma and Allergy Policies for Schools, recognizing those states that are at the forefront of establishing policies, and pointing out other states that don't yet make the grade. Check out what laws and policies have been established in your state at www.StateHonorRoll.org. Also keep the guidelines from your state in mind as you purchase or make treats for your child's classroom:

■ Check with the classroom teacher and the school first about foods that should not be brought into school. Some children have extreme allergies, such as to peanuts, and can react to minimum contact like touching a door handle that had been touched by someone handling something with nuts.

■ Any food can cause an allergic reaction, but milk, soy, eggs, wheat, peanuts, tree nuts, fish and shellfish allergies are some of the most common. If purchasing a snack, read the ingredients list carefully, and double check it against the allergy list provided by the school.

■ When preparing the foods or shopping at the grocery store, make certain the foods you'll be taking to the classroom don't come in contact with foods that are barred from the school. This includes washing pots, pans and utensils thoroughly before blending ingredients when baking at home.

■ If your child has been diagnosed with a food allergy, consider making special treats he can enjoy without worrying about the snacks containing the foods he's allergic to. Also develop an allergy action plan with your child's doctor, teacher and the school nurse.

A free asthma/allergy action card is available from AAFA on the State Honor Roll website, which helps you outline what foods to avoid, what medications to keep (an epinephrine auto-injector is the best first-line emergency treatment), what to do in case of emergencies, whom to contact and more. The AAFA site also has many other pages of free information and tips about food allergies.

Resolving issues with your Child's School

The Cohasset Special Education Parent's Advisory Council (SEPAC) is pleased to host "Guidance in Mediation" presented by Steve Lilly-Weber and Myrto Flessas of the Massachusetts Bureau of Special Education Appeals on Tuesday, March 5th at 7PM at Paul Pratt Library.

What is Mediation? Special Education mediation is a process available at no cost through the Bureau of Special Education Appeals (BSEA). It is utilized when school personnel and parents disagree about the educational needs of a student with disabilities. In mediation, an impartial, third party mediator helps parents and school staff clarify the issues and underlying concerns, explore interests, discuss options and reach mutually satisfying agreements that address the needs of the student.

Mr. Lilly-Weber and Ms. Flessas will give in depth presentation of the mediation process from requesting to resolution and answer any questions that parents and caregivers might be afraid to ask. The presentation is helpful to any family who wants to learn the steps in resolving education issues with the school system.

Lilly-Weber joined the BSEA in 2004. Prior to becoming a mediator at the Bureau, Steve was a Mediation Services Coordinator at the Office of the Massachusetts Attorney General, where he oversaw peer mediation programs in middle and high schools, adult consumer and small claims mediation programs in the district courts, and emergency interventions in schools experiencing racially related conflict. He has been affiliated with the Community Dispute Settlement Center in Cambridge since 1987; there, Steve has been a volunteer mediator, staff person running a mediation program at the Northeast Regional Vocational Technical High School in Wakefield, and a member of and President of the Board of Directors.

Since joining the BSEA in 2012, Myrto Flessas has mediated over 400 cases in more than 50 school districts. After graduating from Temple University School of Law in 2000, Ms. Flessas was a principal attorney in the firm of Flessas & Finocche, LLP. Most of her work was focused on representing parents in special education disputes. Ms. Flessas also provided pro-bono representation for students in special education through the Boston Bar Association and with the Massachusetts Women's Bar Association in the field of domestic violence divorce. Prior to her work at the BSEA, Ms. Flessas had the opportunity to serve on the Board of Directors for the Federation for Children with Special Needs. Along with mediating cases at the BSEA, Ms. Flessas runs informational trainings for parents and school districts to help the parties better understand mediation and use the process to promote meaningful and positive results.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 11, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You could have some problems with doubters who don't share your enthusiasm for that new project you're supporting. But use the facts to win them over to your side.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Someone is impressed by how you managed to get your case to the right people, despite attempts to keep you on the outside looking in. Expect to hear more about this.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Good for you — your gift for seeing both sides of a dispute helps cool down a potentially explosive workplace situation. Some family-related tensions also begin to ease.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your determination to prove yourself is put to the test by midweek. Counting all the positive factors you have going for you will help you get over your self-doubt. Good luck.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Several co-workers are still determined to resist coming over to your side. But don't let that stop you from presenting your proposal to the people who count. Stay the course.

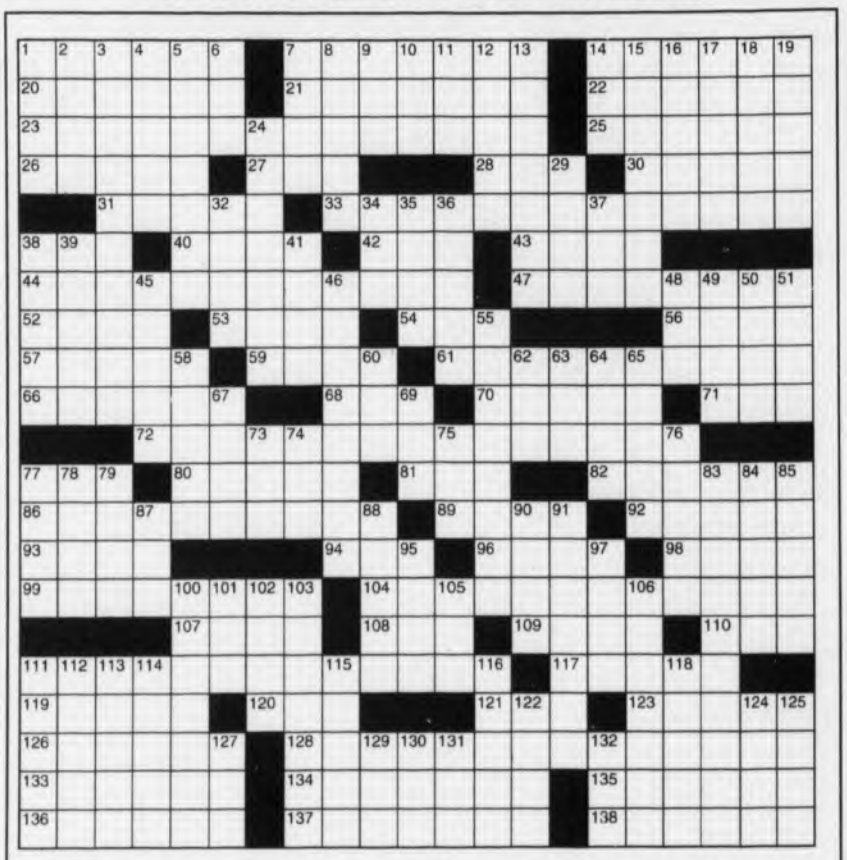
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might prefer to be taken on faith and not have to prove yourself. But the truth is, you need to offer more facts if you hope to persuade people to accept what you say.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family situation takes an unwelcome turn. While others might be looking around for answers, you'll soon sort it all out logically, and the matter will be resolved.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Someone might try to create doubt about your reliability for his or her own agenda. But your reputation and your colleagues' long-standing faith in you saves the day.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unexpected change of plans forces you to come up with an alternative by the end of the week. Look for colleagues to offer valuable suggestions.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Nothing upsets the Goat as much as broken promises. But before you vent your anger, consider that this could ultimately prove to be a blessing in disguise.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An old workplace problem you thought you had solved for good resurfaces. But this time, co-workers will take a more active role in helping you deal with it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful not to be misled by a negative reaction to one of your more important projects. If you believe in it, then it has worth and is, therefore, worth staying with.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Cohasset animal charity launches ad campaign

Fashion models stand up for animals

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Anyone who has ever seen a PETA advertising campaign – that's the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals – knows that there has long been a link between show business and animal rights. Now, a local nonprofit organization that has spent over 20 years standing up for animals has launched its own campaign, with the help of some very glamorous people: models, stylists, photographers and more from the fashion industry.

Like PETA, the Cohasset-based Companion Animal Protection Society spreads awareness for animal rights; while PETA's high-profile campaigns advocate against animal testing, circuses and wearing fur, CAPS focuses primarily on pets.

CAPS was founded in 1992 by local Deborah Howard, a California native

About CAPS

Founded by president Deborah Howard in 1992, the Companion Animal Protection Society (CAPS) is the only national nonprofit organization dedicated exclusively to protecting companion animals from cruelty in pet shops and puppy mills. CAPS actively addresses the abuse and suffering of pet shop and puppy mill dogs through investigations, education, media relations, legislative involvement, puppy mill dog rescues, consumer assistance, and pet industry employee relations. Please visit: caps-web.org.

All aboard!

Senior Center driver Pat McCarthy is all smiles, as he gets ready to roll. More volunteers like Pat are needed not only to drive the van but to deliver meals to homebound seniors. Volunteers must have a valid driver's license and have the ability to carry moderately heavy bags. If you would like to help the Senior Center in this worthwhile endeavor, please contact Jeff Steele at 781-383-1351. STAFF PHOTO/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

WHAT'S UP WITH THIS?

Poles are not a mystery

What:
Ever notice these almost ancient-looking poles around town? Turns out that they're not that old. These are sewer vent pipes that were installed when the Little Harbor sewer project first broke ground in 2007, the sewer department explained. The poles are located in areas where there is low-pressure sewer and act to vent sewer gas. They are usually located close to telephone poles in order to be a more discreet part of the landscape.

Poles vs. pylons:
The reader who submitted the photo of the sewer vent pipe referred to it as a "pylon." While not technically a pylon, the definitions for that term almost seem to fit. Here are a few from Merriam-Webster:

- A gateway, specifically an ancient Egyptian gateway;
- A monumental mass flanking an entranceway or an approach to a bridge;
- A traffic cone;
- Any of various tower-like structures.

The word "pylon" is Greek for gateway, according to Merriam-Webster: "Originally, pylons were monumental gateways to ancient Egyptian temples, either a pair of tall truncated pyramids with a doorway between them or a masonry mass pierced by a doorway."

The sewer vent pipe is certainly mysterious-looking, but is only a pipe and not part of a gateway. Thanks to the sewer department for solving the mystery!

These sewer vent pipes are located around town where there is low-pressure sewer and act to vent sewer gas. COURTESY PHOTO

No STM in the fall?

Eliminating tradition is FY14 budget goal

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

There's a rumor floating around town government that there may not be a Special Town Meeting this fall.

At this point, the rumor is more of a notion or a goal than a done deal; Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski first started talking about the possibility of eliminating the need for a special town meeting when outlining the town's budget process. The idea came up during a recent Capital Budget meeting and again at the Tuesday, March 5 Advisory Committee meeting, during the discussion on consolidating the water and sewer commissions (see related story). To some officials, however, this notion came as a surprise.

"I beg your pardon. We always have a fall meeting."
Selectman Martha Gjesteby

Selectman Martha Gjesteby, who was in the audience for the Advisory meeting, expressed concern over the thought of not having a special town meeting, which Cohasset has done for decades.

"I beg your pardon," Gjesteby said during the Advisory discussion. "We always have a fall meeting."

She said that it was the first she had heard of such an idea. Milanoski, however, said that the matter had come up before.

Milanoski explained that eliminating the special was discussed on January 29 during a presentation of the Fiscal Year 2014 budget; it was part of the PowerPoint presentation, listed as one of the goals for the FY14 budget. That fiscal year will begin on July 1, 2013; thus, the town manager is hoping to avoid a special town meeting this coming fall.

Milanoski said that under the town's current fiscal management policies, which Town Meeting voted to adopt last year, a special town meeting would be redundant and

Bear Hill cell phone tower

An item that appeared in last week's Mariner warrants correction and clarification.

Last week, the Mariner reported that town officials said that the AT&T cell phone tower project on the Bear Hill water tank was approved at a previous Town Meeting. However, the project did not go before Town Meeting; a previous Board of Selectmen gave the project the go-ahead in March 2011, giving the Water Commission approval to build an access road to the Bear Hill water tank on town-owned land off of Reservoir Road.

House fire on Nichols Road

Once the fire was knocked down members also conducted a primary search of the building and they rescued the family cat, the family bunny and the family guinea pig.

On Tuesday March 5 at 11:51 a.m. Engine 3 (Acting Lt. Hernan and FF/Medic Martin), Engine 1 (FF/Medic Durette) and Ambulance 1 (FF/Medic K. Silva) were dispatched to 91 Nichols Road for a fire alarm activation.

Engine 3 crew on arrival of the scene found fire showing from the first floor of single a family, two-and-a-half story wooden structure. Hernan order a box alarm to be struck for the building fire and established command of the incident. Engine 3 crew and Ambulance 1 crew then made an aggressive interior attack on the fire with an 1-3/4 in. hose line. Engine 1 crew established a 4 in. hose supply line to Engine 3 from the hydrant just after 91 Nichols Road, then proceeded to assist the crew in the aggressive attack of the fire.

Off duty members Captain P. Bilodeau and Lt. R. Protulis responded back to headquarters, manned Ladder 1 and responded to the scene. Captain Trask also off duty responded directly to the scene to assist members operating at the scene. C-1 (Chief Silvia) and C-2 (Assistant Fire Chief Dockray) also responded to the scene. Dockray took command of the incident, while Chief Silvia directed interior operations of the incident. The heavy fire in the first floor living room was knocked down within five minutes by the aggressive interior attack of the first arriving units.

Ladder 1's crew on arrival at the scene was then directed to ventilate the building of the heavy smoke condition that existed on all floors and turn off the electricity and gas to the building. Once the fire was knocked down members also conducted a primary search of the building and they rescued the family cat, the family bunny and the family guinea pig.

FF/Medic Donovan also responded back to the station, manned Squad 1 and responded to the scene to assist members in the overhaul stage of the fire. At this time, the cause and determination of the fire is being investigated by the state fire marshal's office and detectives from the Cohasset Police Department.

No one was home at the time of the fire. An engine company from Hull Fire provided station coverage while units were tied up at the fire scene.

Dryer fire

On Friday March 1 at 4:55 p.m. Engine 3 (Capt. Mahoney and FF/Medic Pergola), Engine 1 (FF/Medic Cunningham), and Ambulance 1 (FF/Medic Collins) were dispatched to 715 Jerusalem Road for a reported dryer fire. While units were responding to the scene they updated by the dispatch center that the fire was out. On arrival of the scene units confirmed that the fire was out. Members then removed the dryer from the residence checked for any extension of the fire in the walls of the residence. No extension was discovered and units cleared the scene.

Hubcap help effort is mistaken for road rage

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A frantic woman called police at around 10:12 p.m. on Thursday (Feb. 28) saying she was the victim of an apparent road-rage incident. She was told to head to the police station and as she turned onto Sohier Street in her VW Jetta, the 2003 Toyota behind her followed her, was flashing its high beams and the operator was yelling at her.

An officer responded to Sohier Street and Ripley Road. Further investigation revealed the man in the Toyota, who was following her, is 57 and from Scituate. He was trying to get her attention to alert her that a hubcap had bounced off her car near the Rotary.

OUI arrest

At 5:45 p.m. on Sunday (March 3), an officer was flagged down by a motorist in front of Tedeschi Plaza who explained that a gray motor vehicle that was headed north on Route 3A had been driven erratically through Scituate. The officer caught up with the car at sitting at the light at Beechwood Street but the car did not stop despite the fact the officer turned on the lights and siren. The officer observed the vehicle travel over the centerlines several times. There was heavy traffic due to rush hour but the vehicle finally stopped at 3A and lower King Street. The driver, a 41-year-old-Malden woman, failed field sobriety tests and was arrested for drunken driving. She was charged with operating under the influence of liquor, negligent operation of a motor vehicle and failure to stay in marked lanes. The car was towed.

MVA

At 1:11 p.m. on Monday (Feb. 25), police responded to a two-car accident at the foot of Forest Avenue by Wadleigh Park. Police said a 2011 Kia, operated by a 50-year-old Hingham woman, stopped at the stop sign on Atlantic Avenue in Hull and then proceeded to head up the Forest Avenue hill. However, she failed to yield to a 2005 Toyota Scion, operated by a 70-year-old Hingham woman, who was headed down Forest Avenue and was making a left onto Jerusalem Road. The Kia cut into the path of the Scion, hitting the Scion's passenger-side door, police said. The Toyota Scion was towed, the Kia was drivable, police said. The operator of the Kia was cited for failure to yield. There were no Injuries.

Spilt milk

On Monday (Feb. 25), Shaw's reported that two teens were in the store, one of whom claimed to have slipped on split milk and filled out an accident report. However, further investigation by the store showed the two teens on video surveillance smashing two gallon jugs of milk together, causing the spill. The prank apparently has been circulating on the internet onYou Tube. Police are waiting to get the tapes from loss prevention at the store.

Parking lot

A 57-year-old Town Hall employee reported that her car, a 2000 Toyota Camry, was backed into in the parking lot at Town Hall, damaging the front of the car on Monday (Feb. 25).

unnecessary. Furthermore, the need for a special demonstrates poor planning.

"Basically, a fall town meeting has been a 'fix-it' meeting," Milanoski explained. "If there were financial issues, we needed to call an emergency fall meeting to balance the budget because the finances weren't correctly laid out."

Special town meeting is usually a shorter meeting than the spring Annual Town Meeting, often addressing unpaid bills or any surprise budget items. In recent years, however, the special has had fairly robust warrants dealing with such "heavy-hitter" issues as altering the Town Manager Act, an article that was presented at the Dec. 2012 Special Town Meeting and voted down.

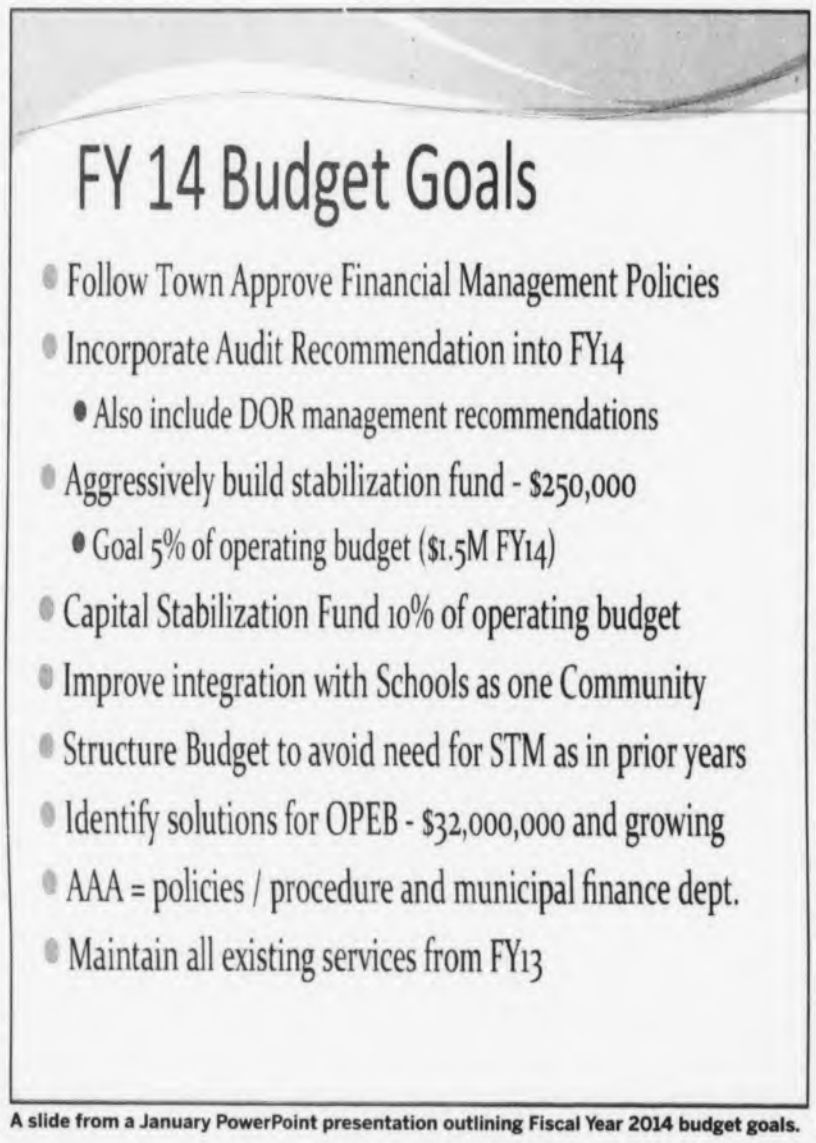
The town manager added that many surrounding towns, including Hingham, hold only one annual Town Meeting per year. With "good financial management," Milanoski continued, "your projections should carry you through at least 10 months of the year. If not, you're not doing a good job with your financial analysis."

While acknowledging that emergencies and anomalies in the budget do "pop up," the town manager said that there is "no requirement" to have two town meetings, and the next fiscal year budget "has been put together with that in mind."

And the idea of cutting out the fall special is nothing new, Milanoski explained. "The initial discussion took place with the Budget Planning Group back in December when they approved the five-year forecast. The budget was presented to the Board of Selectmen in January with a detailed presentation. It was even in the slides [as a goal to] avoid the need for a special town meeting."

While saving the town money, skipping the fall meeting also "allows us to focus on policies and procedures, and get them up and running versus having a meeting just to fix financial mistakes," said Milanoski.

While acknowledging that emergencies and anomalies in the budget do "pop up," the town manager said that there is "no requirement" to have two town meetings, and the next fiscal year budget "has been put together with that in mind."



Selectmen chair Paul Carlson, who was not at Tuesday's Advisory meeting, said in a phone interview on Wednesday that he was familiar with the idea of skipping the fall special, but feels it's a little soon to make that call.

"If we can successfully manage so we don't need a special town meeting, it would save a lot of time, money and effort, but as we get closer to the fall we may find we need one," said Carlson. "It's an interesting idea... I think it might be a matter of organization. But people might prefer a fall meeting."

Gjesteby said that it's up to the selectmen, not the town manager, to decide. The selectman pointed out the Mass. General Laws (MGL) Chapter 39, Section 9, which deals with setting town meetings. However, that portion discusses setting annual meetings and does not say much on holding special meetings, only stating that town selectmen or councils may vote to hold additional meetings.

The MGL states, "The annual meeting of each town shall be held in February, March, April, May or June; and other meetings may be held at such times as the selectmen may order or the charter or by-law prescribe."

Finance Director Mary Gallagher said in an email, "There is no state statute that requires a town to have a special town meeting in the fall."

UPDATE

Red Lion reopened after 1-day shutdown

Health Inspector yanked permits after missed payments

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It's back to business as usual at Cohasset's Red Lion Inn after a temporary shutdown this week.

The popular inn and eatery was served a cease and desist order by the Cohasset Board of Health on Monday after failing to pay permit fees on time.

Health Administrator and Inspector Felix Zemel met with the inn's owner, Gerd Ordelheide on Tuesday afternoon, and allowed the inn to resume operating under a temporary occupancy permit.

Zemel explained that Ordelheide issued the minimum amount of documentation necessary to comply with the health board's request for the interim; however, Ordelheide must attend a public hearing during the Tuesday, March 12 board of health meeting and present all of the required permits then. Also, Zemel plans to conduct a full food safety inspection at the inn sometime before next week's meeting.

Ordelheide said Tuesday that the inn would resume business on Wednesday and would be serving food, as per usual. The inn does not serve food on Mondays or Tuesdays so did not lose any business during the shutdown.

Zemel noted that the cease and desist order had minimal impact on the inn's business. Once Ordelheide contacted Zemel and submitted the required documentation, said Zemel, the inn "was given top priority and is now able to reopen immediately."

The health inspector said that the inn was the only one of around 60 food establishments in town that did not pay its permit fees on time, and this was after receiving a 30-day extension. However, a recent change in the health board's fee structure seems to have caused some confusion.

When a second bill was received, the inn owner said that he thought it was the same bill being sent twice. However, this was the bill for 2013 permits. This bill went unpaid.

Zemel said that the board of health voted on a new fee structure during their Oct. 30 meeting; the schedule was effective Dec. 1 with bills due by Dec. 31, with an incremental percentage increase for delinquent payments. However, since Zemel said that many businesses were likely unaware of the new schedule, the health board decided on a 30-day grace period for late payments.

Businesses were first notified on Dec. 7 and then again on Jan. 15. If businesses failed to comply by close of business on Mar. 1, permits would be revoked.

Ordelheide explained his confusion over the new fee structure. He said that his staff notified him, while he was out of the country, of a bill received in December that was for 2012, which he paid. When a second bill was received, the inn owner said that he thought it was the same bill being sent twice. However, this was the bill for 2013 permits. This bill went unpaid.

The owner said that he would have no problem complying with the health board's request. Zemel said that he would make sure that the inn does, and would ensure that this lapse is not repeated in the future.

"We wanted to work with him, and gave him very strict guidelines that he has to work with," Zemel said of Ordelheide.

TOWN ELECTION

Update: Three more pull papers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Nomination papers for the May 11 Town Election have been available since Tuesday, Feb. 12. So far, a dozen Cohasset residents have pulled papers.

This week, Kimberly Mulcahy pulled papers to run for the open five-year seat on the Recreation Commission, while Mary McGoldrick pulled papers to run for School Committee, which has two open three-year seats. Jeanne Astino, who currently serves as school committee chair, pulled papers last month.

Also this week, Planning Board member Charles Samuelson pulled papers to run for the open full member, five-year position on the board. The Planning Board also has an opening for a three-year associate seat.

There are three open seats on the Library Board of Trustees, and three people running so far: Last week, James Sandell and Sarah Pease joined the running for the Library Board of Trustees. Teresa Polhemus pulled papers for the library board last month. Both Pease and Polhemus are incumbents on the board.

James Sheerin is running to fill an unexpired term on the Housing Authority. Elsa Miller is running for reelection to the Board of Assessors

Elizabeth Kirkpatrick pulled papers for the Board of Health. Kirkpatrick was appointed to fill the position vacated by former long-term member Steve Bobo late last year, knowing that Bobo's seat would be up in the spring.

The first two Cohasseters to pull papers on the day nomination papers became available are both running for Board of Selectmen: current selectman Leland Jenkins, and Steve Gaumer, who currently serves as Capital Budget chair. There are two openings on the board of selectmen for three-year terms.

Many of the candidates have given statements to the Mariner on why they are running for town office.

Selectmen

Current selectman Leland Jenkins, whose first term is up this spring, pulled nomination papers on Tuesday, Feb. 12, the first day papers were available; Steve Gaumer, who currently serves on the Capital Budget and Budget Planning committees, pulled papers the same day.

Jenkins issued the following statement on why he plans to run again: "I am a candidate for Selectman running to safeguard the progress we have made and to initiate plans for future improvements that will continue the ultimate goal of financial health of the town. We can no longer afford to have our taxes increase 10 percent every three-plus years. Cohasset families want their town to be in the 'Top Ten' in education but not in real estate taxes."

Gaumer explained his reasons for running in a phone call. "There's been tremendous progress made in a variety of areas within town government over the past several years; they haven't always been smooth or without controversy. The result, however, is a government that is beginning to run more efficiently and learning quickly what the voters want from it. I think the role of selectmen is to make sure you listen carefully, guide with principal, and execute with some efficiency; I think I'm quite capable of doing that."

School committee

Mary McGoldrick issued the following statement on why she's making a bid for election to school committee: "Over the past seven years I've been involved in the reformation and operation of the Cohasset Education Foundation [CEF]. It's been incredibly fulfilling to support excellence in education by raising funds for programs and materials that would not have been possible in the regular budget.

"My term with the CEF is coming to an end, but I continue to be deeply committed to public education and to helping the Cohasset Schools be the best they can be for the benefit of the entire community. Should I be elected I will bring the knowledge and experience I've gained over the past seven years with administrators, faculty and students to the School Committee. Obviously, there will be a lot to learn, but I will do my best to keep the student's best interest at the forefront of all my decisions."

Jeanne Astino, who has served one three-year term on the school committee and currently serves as chair, said that she is running again because she feels that one term is not enough.

"You're just hitting your speed after the second year, and the third year is kind of a slippery slope sometimes," Astino explained. "In the first year you learn the budget process and the different ways municipalities govern themselves... There's a lot of learning that goes on in that first year. The budget is very complex; after three years some people still don't understand the cost centers in the budget... I think I've done a really good job of learning that piece of my job and am looking forward to continuing another three years."

Housing Authority

James Sheerin explained that he is running to fill an unexpired term on the Housing Authority because he is a resident of 60 Elm Street, where the HA is located. The HA has five members, with four elected by Cohasset residents and one appointed by the state Dept. of Community Affairs.

"It's always good to have a tenant on the board," said Sheerin. "Sometimes you can go to a meeting and can speak as resident, and understand the problem someone might have."

Sheerin has run for office in Cohasset and served on boards before, and is thus "no stranger to the political system here," he said. A former Cohasset firefighter/EMT, Sheerin was also a special police officer for Cohasset and Scituate and spent 18 years as Assistant Harbormaster for 18 years. He was also elected to the Water Commission in 1985 and '88.

Sheerin spoke of one goal he would like to accomplish, if elected to the HA: "We've never had any radon gas testing here; I'm concerned about that. The whole complex here was built on ledge; radon gas seeps through cracks and ledge. It's easily fixed; you can ventilate the building with a fan to the outside. It's an easy fix, but a matter of finding out if it's necessary... You wouldn't want to know you have it and not do anything about it."

Library

Sarah Pease has served on the Library Board of Trustees since 1995 and is running for her seventh term this spring. Pease is part of the library's adult program committee and is involved with the popular Sunday Author Talks.

"It's a very powerful program," said Pease. "I want to continue working on that. We also have so many initiatives right now; we have a new young adult librarian, and we're trying to put something forward for that age group. Our children's programming has always been strong."

Pease hopes to remain on the library board for continuity's sake; also, she is just plain "passionate about books." Pease, who works at Buttonwood Books and recently became a grandparent, explained, "I'm interested in keeping the written word out there for the next generation."

Recreation

Kimberly Mulcahy grew up in Cohasset along with her husband and has two sons, a 10-year-old and a five-year-old, who have participated in many memorable recreation experiences. Mulcahy is self-employed in Cohasset caring for pets in the community. She said in an issued statement that she loves her job, her clients, and the town, and would love the opportunity to support and be a part of such an important organization. Mulcahy would be honored to serve on the Recreation Board and would love to help them continue with all the incredible activities and events that they provide to all of the residents of Cohasset.

The person whose vehicle backed into hers had left a note under the windshield wiper with his information. She called police in order to have the report on file, police said.

Car break-in

On Monday evening (Feb. 28), a 43-year-old Cohasset man who had been working out at a King Street gym, got dressed after his workout and when he went out to his 2004 Toyota Highlander in the parking lot realized his car keys were not in his coat pocket where he had put them. He contacted his roommate who brought an extra set of keys. Further investigation revealed that his car had been entered. Police said $12 was taken from his wallet in the center console and the missing keys were locked in the car.

iPhone taken

A 19-year-old woman who had been shopping at Stop & Shop went out to her 2000 Jeep Wrangler and discovered that her iPhone 4S and car cell phone charger were missing. She returned to the store and borrowed a computer where by using a special app tracked her cell phone which was making its way north on Route 3A along with the alleged thief. The last known location of the cell phone was at the Rotary in Hingham, police said.

Brother lost

An officer on patrol stopped to check out a car that was parked on the side of Forest Avenue near Wheelwright Park at 6:39 p.m. on Tuesday (Feb. 26), as it was getting dark. While he was checking on the car, a 46-year-old Hull man emerged from the woods and told the officer that he and his brother 42, also of Hull, who was walking his dog, became separated. He was concerned that he could not locate his brother. The man went back to his home in Hull to retrieve his cell phone to call his brother. Police said the men only had one cell phone between them during the walk. By the time the man returned his brother had been located walking on Forest Avenue near Fox Run. That brother explained that he had gotten lost but knew if he walked in a straight line in any direction, he would come to a road. The two men were reunited.

Squirrel

A Pond Street woman called police at around 9 a.m. on Tuesday (Feb. 26) after a squirrel that had fallen down her chimney had become overly excited and was chewing the windowsills and dashing around the room in an effort to escape. The animal control officer was not available. Two officers responded and were able to shoo the animal out of the house.

Disturbance

A homeowner on Hull Street reported that someone had knocked on her door after 11 p.m. on Thursday (Feb. 28), woke her up but then seemed to be gone. She called back to report she then heard someone screaming for police. Police responded and located at 44-year-old Hanover woman, who was intoxicated. They took her to headquarters where she was able to arrange for a ride back to Hanover.

CHS GIRLS TENNIS

Scholarship program launched

Cohasset High School girls tennis has announced a new scholarship program to be awarded to senior members of the Cohasset High School girls varsity tennis team. Eligible players have demonstrated leadership, sportsmanship, and commitment throughout their high school careers.

Established at the end of the 2012 season, team Captains Erika Botts, Caitlin DeAngelis, Hannah Rawson, and Meredith Spofford announced, "We are inspired by our love of the game and the desire to acknowledge future senior players." This scholarship recognizes the girls' belief that the characteristics developed through team participation: hard work, positive attitude, sportsmanship and leadership will sustain the players in their future endeavors, both on and off the court.

LIFE AT CHS

Awards for two actors!

WHITNEY MALONE

The Boys' Basketball Team has moved on to sectionals and will play Bishop Connolly in Taunton tonight.

Last weekend, CHS students put on a fantastic showing of Thorton Wilder's The Long Christmas Dinner at the One-Act Play Festival in Duxbury. Although Cohasset did not advance to the Semi-Finals, senior Bobby Nahill and junior Maggie Littlejohn each received Best Overall Acting awards. Congrats to all the cast and crew!

Tuesday, current members of the National Honor Society met at lunch to organize their last few "Homework Club" tutoring sessions at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Within the next couple of weeks, junior and senior applicants will be notified of their acceptance into NHS and new members will continue Tuesday night tutoring at the library after their induction ceremony Thursday, March 21st.

Wednesday night, students, teachers, and parents all enjoyed viewing CHS students' original works at Recycled pARTS. After replacing "Eat Your Art" two years ago, Recycled pARTS has proven to be an outlet for students' artistic expression and creativity, that also emphasizes the importance of being less wasteful and more environmentally conscious!

Today, CHS students attended a Spring Sports meeting in the school auditorium to introduce the new season, officially beginning March 18th. However, the winter sports season is not yet complete; after triumphing over #1 seed Westport Monday night in a nail-biting game, the Boys' Basketball Team has moved on to sectionals and will play Bishop Connolly in Taunton tonight. If you don't feel like making the hike out to Taunton yourself, fan buses for the game have been kindly funded by the Cohasset Candy Company! Good luck boys!!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High School; her column runs weekly during the school year.

CHS Laxers yard cleanup

Join in the 2013 Cohasset High School Boy's Lacrosse Team Fundraiser and have your yard cleaned up for the spring.

On March 30, four supervised players will spend two hours: raking your yard of leaves, sticks and fallen branches, sweeping the driveway, and removing the debris all for a prepaid tax deductible donation of $100 dollars.

If you are interested in this worthy cause, email Karen Nahill at nahillfamily@gmail.com or Maureen McElgunn at mgmcelgunn@yahoo.com to schedule a time on or before March 25.

GIMME SHELTER

Bello is a wonderful boy!

PAULA J FATERSIK

This handsome guy is 4 years old and though he was rescued, he obviously came from a loving home. COURTESY PHOTO

When the right person or family falls for this gentle soul, his life will be made complete and he will share his heart, from both the inside and the outside!

A cat's body is like an artist's canvas, and sometimes we are stunned to see unique and endearing patterns emerge as they grow. Such is the case with Bello, this week's feature cat. It has been so much fun for us meeting him and enjoying his very special markings. When he was just a kitten, it must have been a magical time seeing his fur patterns taking shape.

He is truly a wonderful boy and has proven to be very friendly, seeking attention and asking for more with every day. Bello is new to the shelter and it is always encouraging to have a cat who is eager to be involved right from the start. This handsome guy is 4 years old and though he was rescued, he obviously came from a loving home.

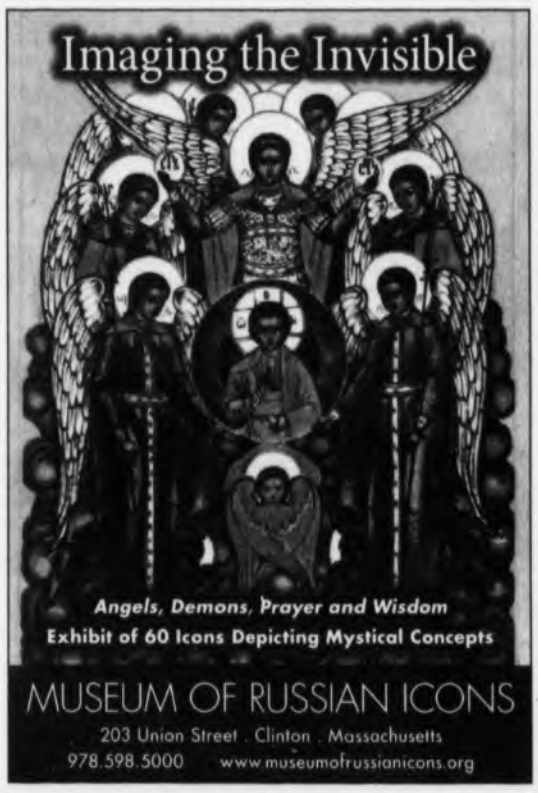
It is time for him to be able to bond with a family again and enjoy the love and attention that he deserves. Bello is anxious to play, but is a little tentative since he is in a room with other cats who are unfamiliar to him. When the right person or family falls for this gentle soul, his life will be made complete and he will share his heart, from both the inside and the outside!

Please call Chris at 781-534-4902 for more information about Bello and other available feline companions. You are welcome to visit with the cats at Open Hours on Mondays from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121. You can visit out website, www.hsar.org, to view other available pets in our shelter who are featured on Petfinder.com.

For those of you who have a cat, or know of someone who does, who needs spay or neuter services, our next spay day is Monday, March 25. Drop off time begins at 8 a.m. and your pet will be ready to return home later in the day. Call the office at 781-925-3121 to reserve a spot. Please leave a message with your name and number, age and sex of your cat and we will return your call with more information and details.

Save the date! Our Gimme Shelter fundraiser is on Sunday, April 28th from 4-8 p.m. at the C-Note music club. Come and join us to help our shelter and hopefully win some fabulous prizes from our raffle and silent auction. We look forward to seeing all of our volunteers, friends, family, pet lovers and supporters. All of you make it possible for us to continue to find loving homes for adorable kittens and cats who find themselves homeless.

A big thank you to all of the local businesses who display our HSAR Cottages at your registers! Donations from each location really add up and help us provide quality care for our residents. Bottles and cans are another wonderful source of financial help and we are grateful for all to you who choose to support us in donating those to us.



Our volunteers are always stepping up and doing so much to make the shelter safe and comfortable. If you are looking for a worthy cause to help, love cats and can spare 2 hours a week to help with feeding, upkeep and socializing please call Nancy, volunteer coordinator, at 781-925-3638.

Donations are always arriving at our door, and to all of you who think of us and come by, we appreciate your dedication and caring. Our wish list is on the HSAR website, but there is always a need for clay litter, dye free dry cat food and canned kitten and cat food. Fleece, small bedding, sheets and towels are some of the other items that we are frequently replacing and it is always great to receive these gently used items. Thank you all for being so generous to Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

cnc.com, not!

Sometimes here at the Cohasset Mariner, we pine for the days when almost all communication to the Mariner walked up the stairs at our Hingham office with the contributor, arrived by U.S. Mail or was dropped off at our drop box in the village. Those were simpler times when we did not have to rely on modern technology to communicate!

However, nowadays upwards of 90 percent of submissions, questions, articles, letters, commentaries, photographs and more – arrive via email.

Here at the Mariner we have recently switched to "gmail" from "outlook" as our email provider. The good news is that our email addresses that all end with "wickedlocal.com" do not change.

However, the bad news is that the old email address that we stopped using two years ago when we switched to "wickedlocal" that ended with "cnc.com" is no longer forwarding to our "wickedlocal" email. That means those of you who have not changed our email address in your address book and were still using "cnc.com" will have your emails to us bounce back as non-deliverable.

We do not want to miss any communication – so if you did not hear back from us that your email was received, please check your address book and make sure you have the following addresses:

- Editor Mary Ford (mford@wickedlocal.com)
- Staff reporter Erin Dale (edale@wickedlocal.com)
- Sports editor William Wassersug (wwassersug@wickedlocal.com)
- Account Executive Claudia Oliver (coliver@wickedlocal.com)

We have had a wild week, frankly, here at the Mariner. In switching to gmail we have had a few glitches. We ask for your understanding if you did not receive a reply or do not see your item in the paper this week.

Please email or call Mary Ford (781-741-2933); Erin Dale (781-741-2935) or Will Wassersug (781-837-4577) with any questions.

If you are in the neighborhood, please stop by and see us at the Mariner office in the Journal Building at 73 South St. across from the Hingham Community Center. We would love to say hello the old-fashioned way!

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Unbiased, experienced leadership needed

I would like to share some thoughts on the current status of Cohasset Government: As many of you know, I have spent my whole life here in Cohasset and have been working for the town at the Department of Public Works for 25 years. If I have not met you either when you are buying your yearly All Facility Sticker or if you have had an issue that you presented in person, I'm sure that I have spoken with you by telephone on any number of issues. I hope I have served you well. While I acknowledge that many things have changed here over the years, the one thing that has remained constant is the common thread of being a community. That means helping your family, friends and neighbors whenever possible. This community feeling is no longer as strong as it was and some of the blame has to be placed at the feet of leadership.

The current atmosphere of town government is lethal at best. I have witnessed first hand the results of this "new" style of governing. It has pitted neighbor against neighbor, employee against employee and department against department. It has to stop now. Leadership should be about bringing people together for the good of all. Not an agenda to be shoved down the throats of all. When our selectmen stop listening to all of us and decide what's best for us all without our input, the community thing is gone and we become people without a voice. Do not let anyone silence you and your ideas. If your freedom of speech is taken from you or used to keep you silent it's wrong and illegal.

I encourage everyone to speak up and stop the leadership of Cohasset trying make changes without our yea's and nay's. We need experienced and unbiased leadership in Cohasset and it's time we got it.

Mary Snow,
317 N. Main St.

Volunteerism during Nemo was awesome

Before Nemo is a distant memory I want to share with you a story of how awesome the people in Cohasset are.

For over 13 years I have been actively involved with Elder Affairs but the weekend of Feb. 9 was a highlight. As many have already read in previous articles the need to give a helping hand to the town's elders was paramount. February 9, 10 and 11, was no exception. A town with no electricity is one thing but many in their 70s, 80s or 90s are not sporting the latest Smart phone to communicate with the world outside their snowed in freezing cold home. Many were home alone.

Volunteers showed up at the warming center, 60 Elm and Wheelwright Farm as well as going door to door from a list of over 80 residences provide by Director of Elder Affairs, Coral Grande.

Sixty-four front doors at 60 Elm needed to be shoveled, walkways cleared and each completely unheated unit's residents had to be checked on twice.

The police station received hundreds of calls from out of state family members who wanted to have their elders checked on. These calls were directed to call Coral's cell phone, she then drove around town door to door with CPD.

Some of the elders were transported to and from shelters in Scituate and Weymouth. Some elders were taken in by their neighbors. Others chose to stay home but needed more firewood, which was delivered to them.

Aside from the obvious tasks volunteers also cleared out refrigerators and emptied trash for the return of the resident as per the Red Cross. It's important to note these volunteers had the same challenges waiting for them when they returned to their own home.

I had the pleasure to volunteer with Coral Grande, Jill Rosano, Jim Campbell, Elinore Barrett, Lacey Richardson, Jim Richardson, Susan Donoghue, Cynthia Hurley, Trish Morse, Linda Gallagher, an impressive group of younger town residents Nate Morse, Conor Hayden, Harry Seraikas, Boy Scouts John Clay, David Hillman, Nick & Josh Rosen as well as the Cohasset basketball team's Shane and Chris Haggarty, Rocco Laugelle, Christian Davis, Patrick Federle, Jack Chamberlain, Jack Donoghue, Jack Hoffman, Harrison Martin, Alex Norton and Henry Brown.

Bradley files bill to punish hit-and-run drivers

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, has filed legislation for this session that would make certain hit-and-run motor vehicle accidents a felony by increasing penalties to include imprisonment or jail time plus higher fines.

Bradley said he filed the bill after a constituent who was severely injured by a hit-run driver contacted his office.

Drivers who are convicted of leaving the scene of an accident after causing bodily injury or death would face stricter punishment if the bill is approved. Maximum prison time would increase from 2 years to 10 years, and the maximum fine would increase from $1,000 to $10,000 per incident. Bradley said he filed the bill after a constituent who was severely injured by a hit-run driver contacted his office.

"This courageous woman from Hull has undergone numerous surgeries to address her many medical problems caused by the accident, can no longer work and is barely able to walk," Bradley said. "The convicted driver served less than one year in jail, and has paid nothing in restitution to help cover her significant medical expenses."

The legislation, H.1217, was originally filed during the previous session, and is currently being reviewed by the Joint Committee on The Judiciary.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

'Lost Boys of Sudan' is subject of movie

The next "movie night" presented by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be the documentary, "God Grew Tired of Us," directed by Tommy Walker and Christopher Dillon Quinn. It will be shown at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Friday, March 15th at 7 p.m. This film, winner of the Sundance Film Festival Grand Jury Prize, tells the story of the experiences of three of the "Lost Boys of Sudan," part of a group of 25,000 young men who fled the wars in Sudan in the '80s.

In 1987 Sudan's Muslim government pronounced death to all males in the Christian south; 27,000 boys fled to Ethiopia on foot. Archival footage used in the film documents the 1,000-mile flight. In 1991, they were forced to flee to Kenya; 12,000 survived to live in a U.N. refugee camp in Kakuma, Kenya.

The film follows life in the camp, and follows three of the young men telling the stories of their experiences as they repatriate to the U.S.

John Bul Dau goes to live in Syracuse, and by the film's end becomes a spokesperson for the Lost Boys and Lost Girls of Sudan. Daniel Abol Pach and Panther Bior go to live in Pittsburgh. As they acclimatize to the U. S., all work several jobs enabling them to send money back to the camp in Kenya. Newtown rides to Washington D.C.

ELISA CASTIGLIONI

The "It will never happen here" mind-set is a very dangerous place. Exactly the kind of thinking that leads to inaction and can cause the repetition of mass-shootings.

Three months ago the unthinkable happened here in New England. We have all wept. Our hearts, I know, have not mended yet. And maybe never will.

Newtown is close to Cohasset. Just two hours or so by car. They are very, very similar villages.

Some people don't like to hear that. They prefer to hide themselves in a tricky, comfort zone. The "It will never happen here" zone. We live in Massachusetts and benefit of one of the country's stricter legislations on guns. True. But New Hampshire is not far. Neither is Vermont or Maine.

The "It will never happen here" mind-set is a very dangerous place. Exactly the kind of thinking that leads to inaction and can cause the repetition of mass-shootings.

This is a child-proof country with booster seats for children at theaters and kids menu at restaurants. But not when it comes to guns. (To me there is nothing cultural about guns. Sorry. I don't get it. Guns are designed to kill. They only culture they promote is the culture of Death. Well, I'd rather call culture what promotes Life and its enjoyment like painting, photography, and why not hiking.)

Our society has failed its most important task: the protection of our children. We have all failed. Let's not fail again and act. Or as Vice President Joe Biden said: there will be a moral price for inaction.

We can all do something meaningful to honor the memories of the Sandy Hook Angels. I've heard of people who write to the Congress everyday at lunchtime. An artist made enough ladybugs to shower the entire Newtown. Ladybugs bring good luck.

Some pray. Others rally. A non-profit, Massachusetts-based organization called Stop Handgun Violence painted twenty hands on the Mass. Turnpike. "Stay outraged." They say.

On March 13, Moms Demand Action For Gun Sense in America has organized a rally in Washington D.C. Parents and grandparents from across the country will meet at Capitol Hill demanding a safer society.

On March 9, a group of bikers will ride from Sandy Hook Elementary school to Washington DC. They will arrive at Capitol Hill on March 12 at 1 p.m. The Newtown police is proud to accompany them.

Frank Monte is the group founder. His daughter is a former student of Victoria Soto, who taught, loved, and then was killed at Sandy Hook Elementary School.

The riders are a mix of professional, top amateur, and master cyclists from the Northeast. The team includes a former US National Team member, a Canadian National Team member, Masters National Champion, State and Regional Champions. Three members are from Newtown and have children at Sandy Hook School. Parents, teachers, and a Vietnam veteran are joining the team.

These people are asking for:

1. universal background check;
2. ban of military-style assault weapons and high-capacity magazines;
3. make gun traffic a federal crime, including real penalties for "straw buyers";
4. strengthen gun ownership restrictions for people with mental illness.

If you want to follow them, their website is: sandyhookrideonwashington.com. You can buy the Sandy Hook Ride sticker for your bike and help them organizing this mission.

Let's be serious. There are no tyrants to overthrow, but children to protect.

There are no ordinary citizens, but citizens who can make the difference by using their extraordinary power. The power to vote. To rally. To call the Congress. To make tons of ladybugs. To paint hands. The power to ride your bike for all the children killed by guns, who will never again ride theirs.

Stay outraged. Or the unthinkable will become thinkable.

Some thoughts as we head toward spring

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Buzzing around town

Emptying the myriad of thoughts rattling around my brain:

• Last weekend's mild weather was a welcomed treat after what seemed like 432 straight weekends of snow, rain and high winds. Driving around and seeing all the tree damage, it's amazing that power was only down for a few days.

• Love the smell of burning brush, but please be careful and make sure you have a fire extinguisher nearby.

• Wondering how many enterprising teens will be out and about offering their services of picking up branches and limbs.

• Did you catch the CEF's 6th annual Spelling Bee last weekend? What a phenomenal event that was. Congratulations to all the kids; great team names and lots of ovations. Yet again the CEF did a great job and a huge 'High-5' to all parents and teachers who helped make the event a success.

• While I am in the mood, 'High-5's' to all those recognized in the Mariner over past few weeks for their neighborly efforts during the storm. Well done, I am pretty sure for every story shared there were ten more that were not.

• Okay, one more and this 'High-5' goes to the Mariner's own Erin Dale. Her coverage of all that has been going on the past few weeks in town has been sensational.

• For February vacation my wife and kids went to Florida, while I stayed here with the cats. Without the family around, a home is but a house.

• Check it out: the Music Circus has announced part of its schedule and there are some pretty big names coming to town this summer, including numerous acts inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame.

• Need to do any food shopping this weekend? Drop by Stop & Shop on Saturday between 8:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.. A group of people will be collecting food for the food pantry. Gail Collins and the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee continue to do an amazing job supporting the food pantry and I'll be out there with my son for an hour. Drop by and say hello; anything you might be able to donate would be very much appreciated.

• It's been 3 months since 20 little children were massacred in Newtown, Conn. Are you still outraged? You should be.

• Talk about taking an idea and running with it — last month when I wrote that my ideal candidate would be a fresh face to politics and would be involved in youth sports and other activities, I was referring to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen not the United States Senate.

• If you haven't heard; Cohasset's own Gabriel Gomez is one of three people vying to be the Republican Party's candidate in the upcoming election to fill the seat vacated by Secretary of State John Kerry. The primary vote is Tuesday, April 30. If you are a registered Republican, please consider supporting Gabriel; I believe it's a vote you'll be proud to cast.

• Speaking of the election, riddle me this – the state primary is April 30. Logically, many of the towns in the Commonwealth that are also holding local elections this spring have moved the date of their contests to coincide with the Senate race. Sounds like a smart move right? Save both time and money as towns will only have to set up polling stations once, pay for extra details once, ask polling volunteers to set aside only one day, and just one of whatever else is associated with running an election. The biggest benefit of combining the two events of course will be a larger voter turnout (especially considering Gomez is on the primary ballot). Well, apparently not. Cohasset is planning on separate elections just 12 days apart. Is there time to reconsider this one?

• Had a chance last week to sample this month's freshly brewed Irish beers at Hingham Beer Works – oh my!

• Finally, spring is coming, which means two things; kids fielding groundballs and cars maneuvering for parking at J.J's.

Thanks for reading.

FOR THE RECORD

Wicked important change to email

GREGORY MATHIS

Fortunately the transition went fairly smoothly and it was business as usual for the most part when people powered on their computers Monday morning.

Email has opened lines of communication like never before, making it easier and quicker to get information from the public to use in print or online.

We get everything by email these days: photos, stories, press releases, news tips, kudos and complaints. Faxes and snail mail correspondence are few and far between.

It seems the telephone and voicemail are becoming more obsolete as well, unless of course you have a Smartphone and access to your email, which is a growing segment of the population.

Email has allowed us unprecedented access to the public and them to us at all hours of the day, any day.

So it goes without saying that when our company recently made a behind-the-scenes change in our email provider, there was some nervousness over whether everything would be transferred or if we would lose anything. And some were concerned the public wouldn't be able to reach us given the reliance we have on email to conduct our business.

Fortunately the transition went fairly smoothly and it was business as usual for the most part when people powered on their computers Monday morning.

One important change that could affect whether your email gets through to us depends on how long you've been in communication with the staff. Many of our editors, reporters, photographers or other department employees have been around pre-GateHouse Media, when we were known as Community Newspaper Company.

The @cnc.com email addresses have been in use for more than 15 years, so many of you may still have that address saved in your contacts for our longtime employees.

We have been transitioning from our @cnc.com accounts for almost two years, but during that time any email sent to @cnc.com has been rerouted to the correct @wickedlocal.com address. That will no longer happen with this most recent transition.

If you happen to send an email to gmathis@cnc.com, or any other employee @cnc.com, it will bounce back as undeliverable.

Since GateHouse Media bought Community Newspaper Company (that's where the CNC comes in for the email address) in October 2006, we have gradually moved away from the CNC branding. With the launch and success of our Wicked Local websites, we wanted to expand that branding more by incorporating it into our email addresses. Plus it's easier to explain and relay to people. I can't tell you how many times I've had to use code to explain those three letters to people — "Charlie, Nancy, Charlie dot com."

That's why it's important for people to note that as of this week email should be sent to wickedlocal email addresses.

For most, the address is first initial, last name, @wickedlocal.com. For instance, my email is gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

Wickedlocal should be a lot easier to remember and convey.

Email is a critical form of communication and one we could not live without it in our business.

Please make note of the change and update your email address book now. We'd hate to miss your important email.

CHARITY

who began her long career in animal rights after walking into an Atlanta pet store in '89 and becoming outraged over the sad condition the animals were kept in.

"I didn't know about puppy mills, but the conditions in the store were pretty bad; there were sick dogs in there and it was dirty. I found out where they got the dogs from, and thought, 'This is horrible; I have to do something about this,'" recalled Howard. "It changed everything."

Armed with a law degree and her own public relations agency, Howard started up the Companion Animal Protection Society (CAPS), which became a national organization and a non-profit in 1993.

CAPS has had many accomplishments throughout its two-decade history, including countless undercover investigations, campaigns, protests, and stories with TV news programs 20/20, Dateline, CNN and magazines People, Life and Reader's Digest, among others.

Howard's love for animals and passion for protecting their rights doesn't end with her professional life. Howard is a vegan who does not consume any animal products; neither does her 19-year-old daughter, Ashley, a Cohasset High School graduate who has been a vegan since birth. Howard was a vegetarian who went vegan while pregnant with Ashley. Howard's own rescue animals also adhere to plant-based diets.

At home in Cohasset, Howard has several companion animals that were rescues: two cats and three dogs. Howard practices what she preaches — the message behind CAPS and its newest campaign, Models Against Pet Shops and Puppy Mills, is this: "Adopt, Don't Shop."

"I want to encourage everyone to adopt and not shop — don't support the pet shop industry or buy online," said Howard. "Most dogs come from puppy mills. Don't support breeding; it's contributing to overpopulation and millions of cats and dogs being put down every year."

What are puppy mills?

Puppy mills are large-scale breeding operations that mass-produce dogs for resale. They seem to place an emphasis on quantity versus quality for the dogs that are bred and sold, often to pet shops; advocates like Howard attest that mills focus more on turning a profit than producing healthy animals.

According to the CAPS campaign, around a half-million dogs each year are born into crowded, squalid conditions in puppy mills, receiving little if any veterinary care. The parents of puppy mill pups are used only for breeding and end up being killed, "often by cruel means," at the end of their reproductive years.

According to the CAPS campaign, around a half-million dogs each year are born into crowded, squalid conditions in puppy mills, receiving little if any veterinary care. The parents of puppy mill pups are used only for breeding and end up being killed, "often by cruel means," at the end of their reproductive years.

Puppy mill breeders sell their dogs to federally licensed brokers, who then sell the dogs to pet shops. Puppies are caged and transported across the country in vans, trucks and planes. In pet shops, puppies are further confined in cages that can be unsanitary while they wait for someone to purchase them. However, some of these puppies are so stressed and sick, they die before ever finding a home.

According to the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA), puppy mill dogs suffer from many ailments, including epilepsy, heart or kidney disease, diabetes, respiratory disorders, deafness or eye problems such as glaucoma or blindness. Howard's adopted dog Beatrice, star of the ad campaign, is nearly blind and suffers from many other health issues.

Many pet shop owners cannot afford to care for the animals or to put them down; many of these sick or aggressive dogs end up in shelters. Unless it's a no-kill shelter, the animals could be euthanized there.

Last year, more than four million cats and dogs died in shelters; 25 percent were purebreds. Every year, five out of 10 dogs and seven out of 10 cats are put down because no one adopted them, according to CAPS.

Howard's hope is that more people will adopt animals that are in desperate need of safe, loving homes, rather than contribute to the problems of overpopulation and euthanasia by buying animals from pet shops or breeders, whose dogs often come from puppy mills.

Waging war

The CAPS campaign is also waging war against the online sale of dogs. Some breeders obtain dogs from puppy mills and attempt to resell them by listing them on animal adoption sites like PetFinder.com, under the guise of animal adoption. Howard and her team are cracking down on these online sales.

Howard's advocacy goes hand in hand with some recent legislation. This week, Congress reintroduced the Puppy Uniform Protection and Safety (PUPS) Act, which seeks to establish better federal oversight of puppy mills and online dog sales. According to the ASPCA, the PUPS Act would require commercial breeders who sell puppies directly to the public, online or off, to be licensed and inspected by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). Currently, only breeders who sell dogs to pet stores or to puppy brokers are subject to federal oversight.

As long as pet shops, puppy mills, and the practice of online pet buying still exist, Howard's work is never done. The ASPCA reports that there are between 2,000 and 3,000 USDA-licensed mass-production breeders, or puppy mills, in the U.S.; however, that only accounts for the ones that are licensed. There could be as many as 10,000 puppy mills in the country, the ASPCA estimates.

Howard explained that in Massachusetts, there are a few pet shops left; currently, there are no pet shops in the Boston area. The CAPS founder called Mass. "a fairly progressive state" in terms of animal rights. However, she is surprised that Mass. does not have any "lemon laws" or disclosure requirements in place for pet purchasing.

"It surprised me," said Howard. "People have a right to know where the dogs are coming from before they buy."

Despite the lack of disclosure laws, the purchase of pets from stores is dwindling statewide. There are even some animal adoption agencies where pet stores once stood, including one local example in Kingston's Independence Mall: Debby's Pet land was replaced by Friends of the Plymouth Pound in 2011. Howard explained that CAPS has helped facilitate similar conversions around the nation, including helping one pet store chain with businesses in the U.S. and Canada convert to a completely humane operation.

Model behavior

Fortunately for Howard and her organization, CAPS has some high-profile advocates lending their voices to the anti-puppy mill campaign. Howard was thrilled when Texas-based model Kiley Wirtz Jennings contacted CAPS and wanted to do something. Jennings learned about CAPS after viewing a video documentary on an undercover CAPS investigator who gathered evidence and ultimately convicted one of the most notorious dog brokers of animal cruelty, Kathy Bauck, and terminated her USDA license. Jennings was so moved by the documentary that she contacted CAPS and offered to donate her time, along with help from additional professional models, make-up artists, clothing stylists, a fashion photographer, videographer, and rescue dogs.

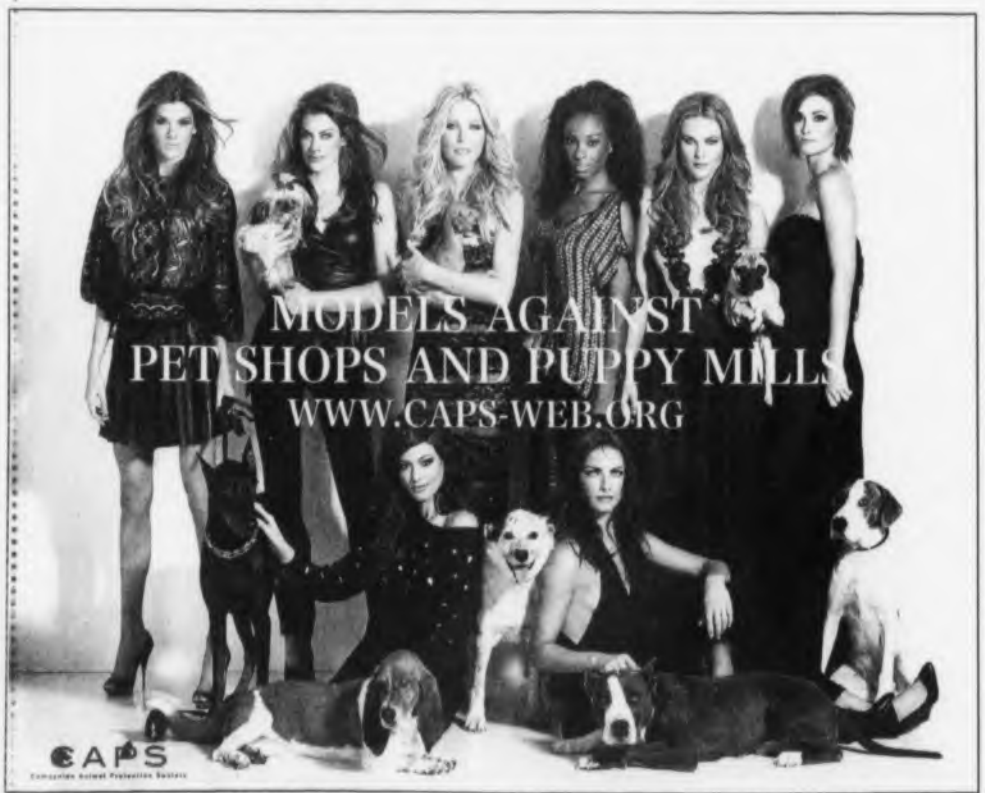
Howard's dog Beatrice shares the spotlight with Jennings in the campaign, although Beatrice has another campaign all her own. A budding celebrity, Beatrice has her own email account, blog and several social networking accounts, from Facebook to Twitter to Pinterest, and has garnered an impressive internet following. Beatrice's goal, said Howard, is to get on The Ellen DeGeneres Show (DeGeneres is a well-known vegan); she even has a petition to accomplish this on Change.org.

Beatrice has already been seen on CAPS billboards, subway advertisements, and a public service announcement on PBS. Even as her star continues to rise, Beatrice can still be seen around Cohasset, being walked by her human companion. Howard said that locals could meet Beatrice at upcoming CAPS events, which Howard plans to start holding this spring.

"Some people have already met her on Sandy Beach," she said of Beatrice.

Those who would like to join CAPS in advocating for animals can visit the website to learn how to get involved. There are complaint forms for pet stores and links to petitions and campaigns. Howard would like everyone to get involved in one simple way—avoiding the purchase of cats and dogs altogether.

"I want to encourage all the residents in Cohasset to adopt a shelter or rescue animal," she said, noting that she has noticed that many locals "are partial to golden retrievers and Labradors." Adoption agencies are seeking homes for the same breeds that people are looking to bring into their lives, said Howard. "There are wonderful rescue agencies for them."



For those who choose to adopt animals, the rewards are both tangible and intangible.

"Rescue dogs tend to be very loyal and devoted," said Howard. "These animals know that you've done something special for them."

WATER AND SEWER

Consolidation talk sparks debate

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Under one management, water and sewer department employees would be "trained to run both types of plants."

It wasn't the first time Cohasset officials have discussed the possibility of combining the Water and Sewer Commissions, and it probably won't be the last.

But emotions ran high during the Tuesday, March 5 Advisory Committee meeting. After reviewing both departments' proposed budgets for Fiscal Year 2014, which starts in July, the advisory board heard a proposal from Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski on combining the water and sewer boards. The agenda item was presented as an article for the upcoming Annual Town Meeting warrant (Town Meeting is Monday, April 22).

Milanoski explained to the advisory board that the idea of combining the two boards stems from "an evolution in the marketplace" involving cross-training employees for more efficiency. Under one management, water and sewer department employees would be "trained to run both types of plants."

If the departments were unified, the commissions representing them would be, too, Milanoski said —"Whether it's this, joint meetings, or getting rid of the boards." Currently, both departments are jointly managed by the town manager. Brian Joyce, the town's Director of Project Management and Planning, also assists in this task. Milanoski said that either he or Joyce attends all of the water and sewer commission meetings.

The town manager told the advisory board that while the warrant article was still being drafted, with "several different versions floating around," his intention was to "get the ball rolling. We need to start the dialogue."

While the idea has been floated before, the water and sewer commissioners present Tuesday night seemed confused as to why this was being presented as a warrant article when, in their eyes, the issue was not ready for prime time. According to the advisory agenda, the matter of consolidating the two boards was listed as "Article 12" for the warrant.

Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio asked Milanoski how this consolidation would work; Milanoski replied, "We don't have a product yet."

Sewer Commission chair Wayne Sawchuk was visibly distressed, demanding to know whether or not this would appear in the Town Meeting warrant — and shouldn't they know by now?

Advisory chair Peter Pescatore wanted to know who was sponsoring the article — the acting town manager or the Board of Selectmen? Two selectmen, Diane Kennedy and Martha Gjesteby, were in the audience, but both denied having an input on the article. Milanoski said that the consolidation was the recommendation of the state Department of Revenue (DOR) and is discussed in the financial management report they recently issued; the town manager also said that the Governance Committee was working on this idea as part of their review of all town boards and committees.

However, the Governance Committee (GC) has been focused on revising Cohasset's Town Manager Act (TMA) in time for the April Town Meeting. GC member Jack Keniley, who was in the audience, explained that they are finalizing the final draft of the TMA.

"As written, I'm not a sponsor," Keniley said of the water-sewer draft article.

"We were hoping we could work on committee structures this spring [after Town Meeting]," Keniley said. The water-sewer consolidation idea, therefore, was not ready to be put on the warrant, nor was the GC advocating for that. Keniley added, "We don't want a dogfight on the town meeting floor."

Milanoski agreed that the idea was not ready for Town Meeting. "I have no intention of bringing anything that's not ready [to Town Meeting]. It's still in its infancy."

Pescatore said that while he thought the idea had merit, and could lead to some cost savings for the town, there needed to be further conversations about it before anything is voted. "It's a fair discussion," Pescatore said. "It should be a roundtable."

DeCaprio asked Milanoski, echoing Sawchuk, "Are you going to have an article or not?"

Milanoski replied, "No."

The town manager clarified in a phone call Wednesday that he would let the GC "take the lead" on the water-sewer consolidation idea. "It's the next step for them to pursue." He reiterated that the notion is a "solid recommendation in the DOR report and in multiple other reports the town has commissioned over the years to provide efficiencies between the boards. This provides for better coordination between all parties... but there's a lot of work that has to be done to analyze that."

Milanoski said he raised the issue as "nothing [more than] getting the discussion to move forward," acknowledging that it isn't ready for prime time. "When we put the warrant together back in January, we were hoping the governance committee would be able to move past the town manager act and move forward with this, but there wasn't enough time [before Town Meeting]. It's next year's project."

Sawchuk explained during a call on Wednesday why he got upset during the advisory meeting. The sewer chair said that he was concerned about items being brought to Town Meeting that have not been fully vetted.

"It hasn't been discussed with either of the boards," Sawchuk said of the water-sewer article. "Last night [Tuesday] was the first opportunity we had to look at a proposed draft."

The sewer chair added that he is glad the article won't appear on the warrant this April. "It's very important for people going to town meeting not be presented with things at the last minute that really should be decided on."

BRIEFLY

Governance public hearing

The Governance Committee's second public input meeting was postponed this week. The meeting was scheduled for Thursday, March 7 but has been moved to the following Thursday, March 14.

The committee will present an update on the current working draft of the Town Manager Act, which will be voted on at the April 22 Annual Town Meeting.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Subdivision rules and regs

The Planning Board reviewed a first draft update of the town's Subdivision Rules and Regulations during a Tuesday, March 5 meeting. The planners will hold a public hearing once the review is completed.

A public hearing is scheduled for Wednesday, March 27 on zoning articles for the April 22 Annual Town Meeting. Look for updates in a future edition of the Mariner.

Budget on track

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro reported to the School Committee on Wednesday that the current fiscal year budget is on track. So far, the schools have expended 48.6 percent of the budget.

"We seem to be on track," said DeGennaro. "Everything is going well."

Teacher contract

During their Wed., March 6 meeting, the School Committee voted unanimously to approve a bargaining agreement between the committee and the Cohasset Teacher's Association. The contract is from Sept. 1, 2012 through Aug. 31, 2015. The contract was negotiated over the course of many meetings between the parties.

School committee member Helene Lieb stated, "I'm happy we were able to get [the contract] in place and control as best we could some of the financial issues moving forward, however respecting the wonderful faculty we have in the school system and rewarding them for their work."

Bus bid results

The School Committee voted to accept a bid from a school bus vendor. Last May's Annual Town Meeting appropriated $90,000 for the purchase of a new school bus. The bid opening was held on Feb. 22, 2013, and two vendors submitted bids: one for $96,822, the other for around $98,000. O'Connor Bus Sales was the low bidder.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said that although the lowest bid goes over the allocated amount from Town Meeting, the school board could make up the difference by using funds from the transportation accounts. However, the committee asked DeGennaro to go back to the Capital Budget Committee and ask for the additional $6,822 needed to purchase the bus, since it is a capital expense. DeGennaro said that this would have to be approved by the April 2013 Town Meeting, and that the bus purchase is necessary in the meantime.

The school committee voted to approve the bus purchase, but asked DeGennaro to go before Capital Budget and ask for reimbursement.

CSCR gets research grant

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) was recently awarded a $10,600 grant from the Massachusetts Bay Program. The CSCR agreed to match 27.2 percent of the project's cost, paying $3,970; the total cost is $14,570.

The project will have students counting herring in Hunters Pond and monitoring the water quality. The study will take place from April 1 through May 30, and the CSCR is looking for volunteers to help count the herring for three to four hour segments. Anyone interested can contact Jack Buckley at CSCR: 781-383-0129.

School board members were happy to hear about the grant and the new study. Being part of the CSCR, said school committee member Helene Lieb, "teaches [students] really good research skills for whatever field they go into."

School committee chair Jeanne Astino agreed that the CSCR provides students with hands-on, real world experience: "They're not in a computer lab watching other people do the work—they're in the water doing the work."

Road to the finals

Skippers edge Westport in thriller

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

A year ago, when the Cohasset boys basketball team faced Westport in the MIAA Div. 4 South Sectional Tournament, it was not a particularly happy time.

For one thing, head coach Bo Ruggiero was out of action after he was seriously injured in a car accident.

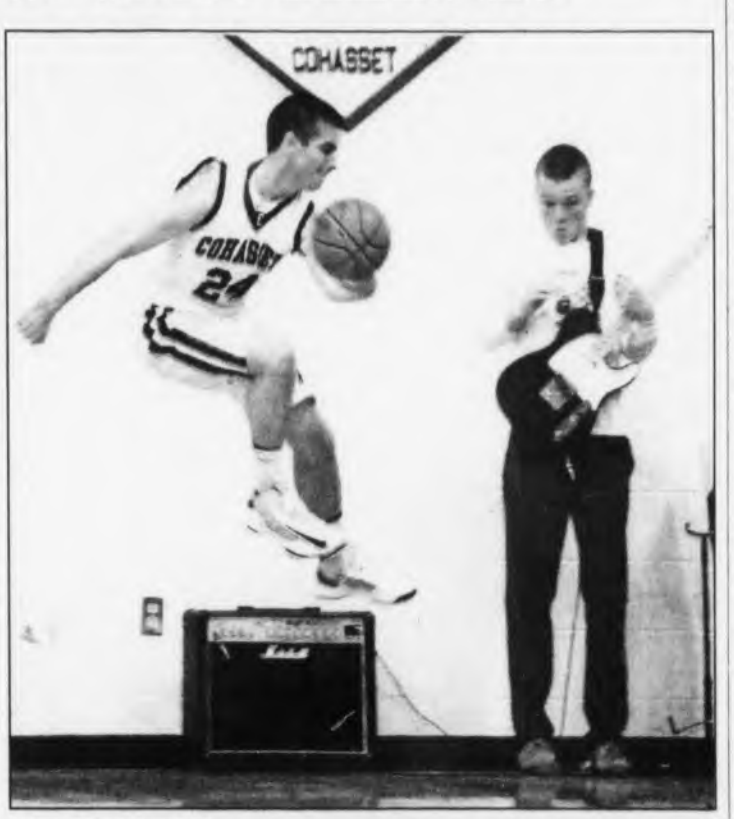
Then there was the game itself.

In that one, Cohasset rallied from a 12-point third quarter deficit to take a lead, but ended up on the losing end of a 70-68 decision in the quarterfinal round.

This time around, things were similar, but in the end Cohasset was on the smiling side of a 48-45 come-from-behind win in the semifinal round, Monday night at Bridgewater-Raynham Regional High School.

Monday, the No. 4 seeded Skippers (20-4) had Ruggiero back on the sideline against the No. 1 Wildcats (20-3), and didn't let an 11-point deficit make the difference, even with their top scorer having an off-night offensively.

Shane Haggerty, who finished with 8 points, was scoreless in the first half as Westport rolled to a 22-11 lead in the second quarter.



The Skippers made up for Haggerty's troubles with solid defense and a balanced scoring attack, and a huge 7-point second quarter by Henry Brown.

Christian Davis, who scored 26 last year, scored 10 Monday, while Pat Federle matched it with 10.

Chris Haggerty had a huge three-pointer and in all, eight players scored.

"I felt we didn't play well I the first half, but we kept ourselves in shooting range," Ruggiero said. "We were only

Skippers defense stymies Holbrook

By William Wassersug

The Cohasset boys basketball team only needed about one minute to show why they deserve to be advancing to the MIAA Div. 4 South Sectional semifinal and make their last home game of the season a happy occasion.

In a 30-second span at the end of the third quarter, Cohasset scored 9 points and added another 3 at the beginning of the fourth quarter to expand a 33-26 lead to 45-26 in a 56-43 victory over visiting Holbrook, Friday night.

The No. 4 seeded Skippers improved to 19-4, while No. 5 Holbrook's season ended 15-5.

Shane Haggerty led the Skippers with 20 points, while Christian Davis added 8.

For the second straight game, 9 Skippers scored, and everyone played.

Patrick Federle scored 7, Henry Brown chipped in 6 points and Rocco Laugelle and Joe Buckley both notched 5.

Chris Haggerty and Alex Norton each scored 2 and Harrison Martin rounded out the scoring with a free-throw.

All middle and high school girls who are residents of Cohasset are eligible to participate. No experience is required and there will be no try-outs.

Youth rowers ready for spring rowing season

As piles of snow disappear and the clocks spring ahead, youth rowers are looking forward to grabbing oars to paddle about the beautiful Cohasset Harbor. It's that time of year again- spring training at Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI). On-shore workouts begin March 25 in preparation for the ever-exciting ocean rowing in late April. Experienced rowers are encouraged to train while novice rowers will be given an opportunity to cultivate good technique before jumping into a boat.

The spring program runs Mondays and Wednesdays afternoons March 25 - June 12. Spring training is available for students currently in eighth grade or high school; students entering 8th grade next September may enter for summer season. CMI welcomes rowers from any local school; current CMI rowers come from Cohasset Middle/High School, Notre Dame Academy and Scituate High School. Numbers are limited, so rowers are encouraged to sign up early. The fee for the 12-week spring season is $275.

There will be an informational meeting at the Cohasset Library on Wednesday, March 13 at 7 p.m. for youth interested in rowing this spring (and their parents). Our coaches and experienced rowers will be there to answer your questions and encourage you to join this fast-growing sport.

CMI has been teaching youth (and adults) how to row for more than 15 years. Cohasset High School teacher Jack Buckley started the program in the late 1990s and since that time scores of youth have learned to row at CMI. Succeeding Jack as the Program Director for CMI Youth Rowing is a similarly highly experienced coach and rower, John Liffmann. John will be assisted by rowing veterans Alice Bellone and Betts Murray.

Neither personal equipment nor prior rowing experience is required to learn to row. We do ask for enthusiasm and determination to master this ocean sport. Rowing is a complete body work-out as well as a mental challenge. It is the ultimate team sport requiring good form to keep in unison. Boys and girls

Shane Haggerty, who had four fouls, did have what may have been the biggest shot of the night, when he knocked down a turnaround jumper as the shot clock buzzed with 1:12 left to play to give the Skippers their first lead of the night, 46-45.

Chris Haggerty followed a Westport turnover with a free throw to up the lead to 47-45 with 29.7 seconds left to play.

A steal by Davis put him at the line and gave the Skippers a 48-45 lead with 13.7 left.

After trading timeouts, Cohasset held on for the win.

"Wow is right Ruggiero said with a big smile. "That's all I can say."

The win sets up a Sectional Final on Friday night against No. 6 Bishop Connolly (17-6).

Tip-off is scheduled for 7:45 p.m. at Taunton High School.

Davis enjoyed this one.

"This was the funnest game of the year," he said. "I can't put it into words. Even when we were down we knew we could do it. We all picked it up. We're not done yet."

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Kelly at Bates

For former Cohasset basketball star Meredith Kelly, things didn't look too good at the beginning of the basketball season.

Kelly, now a junior at Bates College, broke a toe a week before the preseason and had to miss the first eight games, followed by limited action in the next two games.

However, the outlook turned with the new year, and Kelly was able to get back on the court.

From there she played well, finishing among the top players in the NESCAC in several categories, and was named a co-captain for her senior season (2013/2014).

During the last season, Kelly was third in field goal percentage (47.8 percent), free throw percentage (77.8 percent), ninth in scoring (12.5 points per game) and 10th in steals with 1.5 per game.

She had one of her best games In January in a 60-48 win over Colby College, when she scored 19 points on 9-for-13 shooting from the field, with a free throw.

Cohasset led 12-8 after one quarter.

They gave themselves some breathing room with a 9-0 run to open the second quarter, including a three from Davis.

The Skippers used the press well defensively, but played a very patient game on the offensive end with outstanding ball movement that ended up with quality shots.

If there was a problem, it was later in the game when Holbrook's defense started to tighten up under the net and got some turnovers underneath.

The win set up the game against No. 1 seeded Westport

Westport beat No. 8 West Bridgewater (15-7) on Friday night.

Alumni to play IRSF All-Stars

Hockey fans looking for a fun evening for a good cause won't have to go far on Saturday, March 9 at 5 p.m. as the Boston Bruins Alumni Team will be in Hingham at Pilgrim Arena to play the International Rett Syndrome Foundation All-Star team in a fundraiser to raise awareness and money to help battle the disease.

Rett syndrome is a devastating neurological disorder seen almost exclusively in females. It is marked by severe developmental disabilities, including loss of communication skills and purposeful hand function. Many experience all or some of the following: seizures, anxiety, apraxia, dystonia, orthopedic problems, impaired cardiac, circulatory and digestive functions, autonomic instability and sleep disturbances...the list goes on. Currently there are no effective treatments for Rett syndrome. Most survive into adulthood, requiring total, 24 hour a day care.

Among the IRSF team are: Hingham Youth Hockey coaches, Mike Flynn, Bill Engel, Jack Diamond, Dan Rakauskas, Derek Maguire, Trevor Bryne, Mike Connolly, Jim Walsh, Tom Guidi and Hingham High School Tony Messina.

together as a crew will compete in races that test athleticism, uniformity, and knowledge of different ocean conditions. Unlike college crew, ocean rowing gives students an understanding of tides and winds and is rooted in oceanic knowledge.

CMI crews row in a four-oared boats called a Mainville '26, named after the builder Chuck Mainville. Our unique, hand-crafted boats have four sliding seats with rowers using the same sweep stroke of competitive college and high school programs. These boats are stiff and sturdy, a distant cousin to the fragile and sleek racing shells, so they are well-suited to the sometimes choppy waters of Massachusetts Bay.

Several CMI rowers have found their way to college varsity boats since basic movements and training are the same. For some CMI rowers, crew is their only high school sport (as training lasts all year) and/or the first time they were successful at a sport. We take in good kids and make them athletes. CMI athletes gain the skills, discipline, and determination needed to be successful rowers and in many cases go on to the highly competitive college crew arena.

What happens when you take sturdy rowing boats, youthful enthusiasm, physical challenge and add water? You get something much greater than the parts: invaluable experiences, life lessons and fun!

You are encouraged to join. Email us at ROW.CMI@comcast.net with questions or to tell us your interest. On-line registration will open in mid March and we will send you the link.

Crough stars at Endicott

Cohasset's Samantha Crough, a junior forward for the Endicott College women's basketball team helped lead her team into the CCC tournament. Crough pitched in by scoring 15 points on 6-13 shooting against Western New England in a 68-60 quarterfinal upset win at rival Western New England.

She then kept up the consistent play in the semifinal against the Nor'easters of UNE. Crough scored 9 points and 8 rebounds while also having a career high 5 blocks. The Gulls went on to lose the game 69-48.

Endicott was then selected to the ECAC tournament and Crough continued her hot streak by scoring 17 points in a tough 60-58 overtime loss to Suffolk. Crough finished the season with 12.1 ppg and 5.6 rpg, good enough to earn a second team All-CCC selection. She was also a CCC Conference Player of the Week.

Crough looks to come back strong next season where her senior leadership will be instrumental for the success of the lady Gulls.

Crough was a member of Cohasset's 2008 and 1010 State Champion basketball teams.

Listening to Other Voices series at Glastonbury Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey has announced the fifth lecture of its Listening to Other Voices interfaith lecture series will feature Vincent D. Rougeau, dean of Boston College Law School. His presentation is titled, "Beyond Borders: What Should Citizenship Look Like to People of Faith?" Rougeau will speak at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, March 14, in the Abbey Conference Center, 16 Hull St., Hingham.

What does it mean to be a person of faith and an American citizen in the United States today? How do people understand citizenship and responsibilities to those who live among us who are not citizens? To those in other cultures? Widespread global migration and the global economic order link people economically, environmentally and increasingly, legally and morally. Rougeau will challenge attendees to consider what duties they may have to those from other cultures.

Rougeau will explore how Catholic social teaching suggests a moral connection and how confusion exists about basic concepts of membership and participation; for example, the relationship to undocumented workers who perform essential functions but live on the margins of society.

A graduate of Brown University and Harvard Law School, Rougeau was appointed dean of Boston College Law School in 2011, having served previously as a professor at Notre Dame Law School. Rougeau is a national expert on Catholic social teachings and the role of moral and religious values in law making and in public policy. His book, "Christians in the American Empire: Faith and Citizenship in the New World Order," explores how key assumptions underlying Catholic thinking diverge from many of the ideas animating American law and public policy in areas like poverty relief, immigration, and redress for racial discrimination. He also develops an understanding of Christianity as a natural partner for international human rights and a foundation for a legal cosmopolitanism that transcends nation-state boundaries. He is currently the leader of a research group on global migration and cosmopolitanism sponsored by the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies at Notre Dame.

The Benedictine Monks of Glastonbury Abbey offer this free annual Listening to Other Voices lecture series as part of their ongoing commitment to inter-religious dialogue. Seating is limited and on a first-come basis. All are welcome.

College Summer Programs
FOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

BROWN UNIVERSITY

Delve deeper into your interests

By Carole LaMond
Wickedlocal.com

It's all about giving high school students the opportunity to delve more deeply into a subject area they do best in, or love the most, during the one- to four-week summer Pre-College Program at Brown University in Providence, R.I.

"The broad framework of all of our programs is to provide university-level teaching to serious college-bound students," said James Chansky, director of Summer Session and Pre-College Programs at Brown. "The idea is to provide self-motivated, exceptionally bright high school students with courses at a depth and sophistication they are not able to get in high school, and give them a taste of what university is like."

One of the most distinctive aspects of the 30-plus-year-old summer session, according to Chansky, is that it is the largest pre-college program in the world in terms of enrollment and number of courses offered. Summer students number about 4,000 and come from most of the 50 states and from 60 to 70 countries.

Students may choose from some 200 courses carefully selected to showcase the breath of the university's curriculum.

Eligible students must have completed ninth grade through graduation and fill out an application that includes a transcript and essay.

Courses offered run the liberal arts and sciences gamut from Egyptology to numbers theory. A significant number of students pursue STEM courses in science, technology engineering and math, but all the traditional liberal arts courses are also offered and allow students to concentrate in everything from creative writing to anthropology or philosophy.

"If there is something that really fascinates you, it's usually because you are already good at it," said Chansky, and it's likely to be offered in more depth at Brown.

The program is "catalyzing and reinvigorating for students" who want to explore a subject field more intently and confirm their interest, or kids "who are still hungry for more and want to dig deeper in a course of study they already excel in," said Chansky.

Classes are generally small and taught by Brown faculty members who vary activities and approaches so that classes are dynamic and engaging on many levels. Classes typically meet for a minimum of three hours per day and many courses feature site visits, labs and hands-on projects.

"Classes are student-centered and focus on what the students already know and how to take them deeper," said Chansky.

Students typically find it exhilarating to have a whole classroom of peers who are as excited about the material as they are and want to seriously engage with the subject.

The goal is to make the experience transformative for each and every student.

"Faculty love teaching the pre-college courses because the students are so un-jaded. They really want to know what the professors know," said Chansky. "The students are so energized by what they are learning that it's re-invigorating and re-inspiring for faculty who think the transmission of knowledge is important. Bringing their own passion to the students is key."

The programs also include an opportunity to interact with graduate students who describe their own academic path and career goals. Students can take college prep workshops with topics such as how to write an essay or choose a college, and practical advice on succeeding as a college student whether it is how to get along with a roommate or time management skills.

Other offerings include credit courses, global programs, online courses and a leadership institute.

"The Pre-College Program is a really good preparation for university life and study," said Chansky.

FOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

WORCESTER POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE

STEM students find like-minded peers

By Carole LaMond
Wickedlocal.com

It can be an amazing experience for high-achieving high school science students to find themselves in a room full of peers with a similar love for the subject during Frontiers, a residential summer program in science, technology, engineering and math, also known as STEM, at Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

"We hear from students that their joy, interest or love for science isn't always as appreciated in high school as it is here. We hear students say, 'I've found my people' — other kids who want to spend their free time talking about science," said Ed Connor, Dean of Admissions at WPI. "Being around other like-minded students in a residential setting is transformative in realizing what college can be like."

Frontiers is a co-educational program for older high school students and provides in-depth workshop in a STEM subject.

Students in Frontiers may choose from an array of science courses from chemical engineering to interactive media and game development.

"If you name it, we've got it," said Connor. "We're really looking for an opportunity to introduce students going into their junior year a little earlier to STEM, as well as target seniors who may be deciding what to study."

Classes are taught by WPI faculty in state-of-the-art facilities and also include graduate and undergraduate student mentors. Frontiers is an exploration-based program with hands-on experience. For every six hours of instruction, four are spent in labs or hands-on projects.

Students also choose an arts or humanities workshop from a range of courses such as digital painting, theater and law.

"What we are trying to do is mimic the WPI curriculum so a student chooses a STEM workshop and an arts or humanities workshop," said Sue Sontgerath, Assistant Director of Admissions. "What we try to do at WPI is focus on creating scientists and engineers who have a global perspective and have a well-rounded experience."

Frontiers attracts students from about 25 states and 8 countries.

Now in its 31st summer, Frontiers continues to expand its program offerings and is introducing a Global Sustainability workshop and a Women's Leadership Academy in Session II.

Another innovative summer program at WPI, Camp Reach, targets middle school girls just at the point where peer pressure can make them turn away from science. The camp was founded in 1997.

"We're not only targeting girls, but girls at a specific age," said Sontgerath. "Middle school is really a critical time period in girls' attitudes towards math and science. It's the perfect age to catch them and spark their interest before their attitudes toward math and science change."

It's not a question of ability, but of girls' self-identity.

"It's that peer pressure and stereotype threat — that 'girls don't do engineering' attitude," said Sontegrath. "The two-week residential program is a big deal for an 11-year-old girl and you see a big growth in self-confidence and self-efficacy. It's great to hear them say out loud 'I love math,' and realize maybe I could be an engineer."

Research shows that women have an easier time seeing themselves in helping professions, said Sontegrath, so Camp Reach shows girls how engineering disciplines can make a difference in the world – and be fun – with hands-on discovery workshops that might include using materials science to design shoes, electrical engineering to design toys or a biomedical device to take a kernel of corn out of a child's ear.

The other half of the curriculum is a service learning design project that follows the engineering design process to solve a real world problem which the student see through to completion.

The girls also meet mentors, professional women who share their stories and career paths.

"It's about building a community with each other, and we keep that community going after they leave camp and throughout their school career," said Sontegrath.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 18, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) With your practical side dominant this week, it's a good time to reassess your finances to see what expenses you can cut. Aspects also favor mending fraying relationships.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your Bovine-inspired determination to follow matters through from beginning to end pays off in a big way. Enjoy a well-earned weekend of fun with a special someone.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Aspects favor re-establishing business relationships you might have neglected. A family member's request needs to be given more thought before you make a decision.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) While you might appreciate the avalanche of advice coming from others, keep in mind that the intuitive Moon Child is best served by listening to her or his own inner voice.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Lion's social life whirls at centrifugal speed this week as you go from function to function. Things slow by week's end, giving you a chance to catch up on your chores.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Don't let your stand on an issue cause a rift with a colleague. Insist on both of you taking time to reassess your positions while there's still room for compromise.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An opportunity you'd been hoping for finally opens up. But read the fine print before you make a commitment, especially where a time factor might be involved.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your need to know what's going on behind the scenes leads you to make some bold moves. Be prepared with a full explanation of your actions if necessary.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A lot of details need tending to during the early part of the week. The pressure eases by the 20th, allowing you to get back to your major undertaking.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A friend asks you to act on his or her behalf in a dispute. Be careful. You might not have all the facts you need in order to make a fair assessment of the situation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new development might require you to cancel some of your plans. But you adapt easily, and by week's end, you could receive welcome "cheering-up" news.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your recent workplace accomplishments boost your self-confidence just as you're about to consider a potentially rewarding, although possibly risky, career move.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your love of the arts is equaled only by your strong sense of justice. People can depend on you to always try to do what's right.

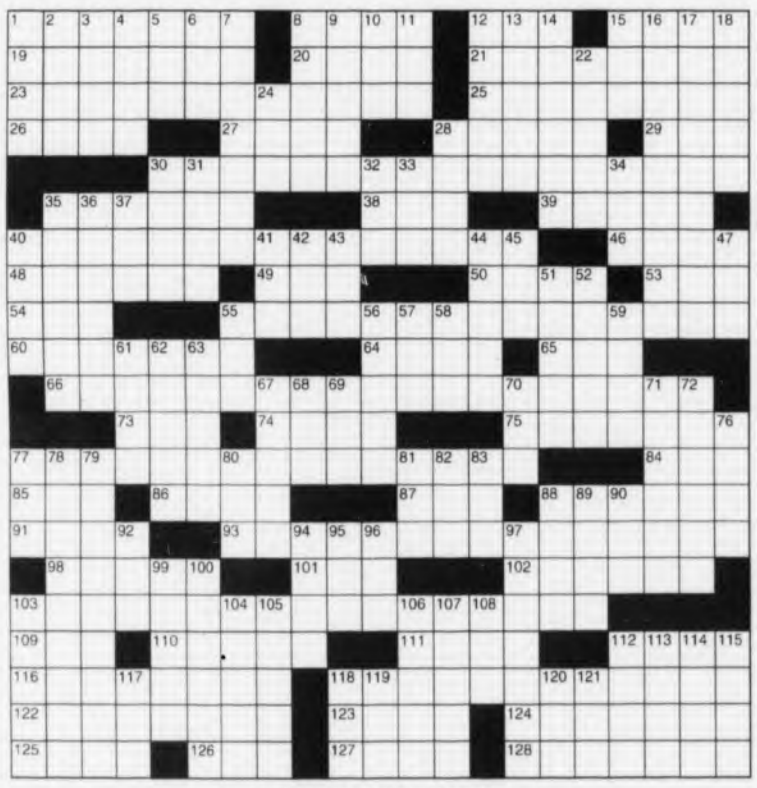
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Fox Run-around

Neighborhood dispute unresolved

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It looks like "Fox Run" could be the new "Cat Dam," which in Cohasset means a piece of land that town officials and neighbors are embroiled in debate over, in the attempt to preserve the environment while keeping all parties happy. It seems that Fox Run could suffer the same fate as Cat Dam — meaning that those concerned with the property and what's going to happen to it are currently at a standstill.

On one side of the issue are the residents who abut Fox Run, a private way off of Forest Avenue; on the other, the Cohasset Conservation Trust (CCT), who are in the process of purchasing 34 acres of land from the White family. Somewhere in the middle, trying to distance themselves from the issue, are the Board of Selectmen and the Community Preservation Committee (CPC). Town Meeting authorized $100,000 in CPC funds to purchase a conservation restriction for the land to create more open space. The CCT would hold the land title, while gifting the land back to the town of Cohasset.

However, neighbors are concerned that the land could instead be used for development, or that trails could be added that would see the public traipsing through their yards at all hours of the night, possibly turning the trails into a dog park.

Calling themselves the Fox Run Neighborhood Association of Cohasset, eight families drafted a petition beseeching the selectmen and town manager to intervene and ensure a provision in the conservation restriction that will bar any public access. The petition states that the land purchase between the CCT and White family was misrepresented to the public

Inn owner fuming

Ordelheide called BOH order 'abuse of power'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The owner of the Red Lion Inn had a major beef with the Cohasset Board of Health Inspector/Agent after the inn was temporarily shut down last week for failure to pay permit fees on time.

Red Lion Inn owner Gerd Ordelheide called it "an abuse of power by a town employee" when health inspector Felix Zemel issued a cease and desist order on all food service on Monday, March 4.

Ordelheide was still so angry about the incident that he appeared before selectmen this week – an appearance that ended with an angry outburst, prompting Chairman Paul Carlson to wield the gavel to restore order.

Despite the drama, Acting Town Manager Milanoski said that he appreciated Ordelheide cooperating with Zemel and filling out the necessary paperwork to get the inn up and running again the same day it was shut down.

"I have to commend Gerry for turning that around so quickly," Milanoski said of Ordelheide. "It was resolved in 24 hours."

Ordelheide's response? "This is a joke," he said, growing visibly angry and causing Carlson to call for order and bang the gavel.

Local legislators weigh in on open government

Transparency has been a political buzzword in politics of late, especially during election seasons. Municipal governments must operate under the strict state Open Meeting Law. The General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, or the state Legislature, does not have to operate under the open meeting law and are exempt from the Public Records Law. There are steps, however, that the Legislature has taken and may yet take to make its process more transparent.

As part of our special report tied into Sunshine Week, which runs from March 10-16, we asked local legislators what progress has been made at the State House in terms of making government more open and accessible to the public.

Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, who represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and one precinct in Scituate, said while Massachusetts has been lauded for transparency in state spending, he sees room for improvement and that the legislature should be open to new ideas.

Despite progress, critics say Legislature isn't open enough

Advocates want more transparency

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

State legislative leaders say they have made the House and Senate more open to the public in recent years, but watchdogs argue lawmakers still conduct too much important business out of the view of their constituents.

The Legislature has made efforts to revamp its online presence, overhauling its website, taking the 2010 process of redrawing legislative districts to the Web and joining the Open Checkbook initiative to post online most state payments to vendors.

In January, the state Senate voted unanimously to post the results of all roll call votes on the chamber's website within 48 hours after a vote is taken, effective in May. That could make it easier to find the results of specific votes than it is now.

A spokesman for House Speaker Robert DeLeo also pointed to a slew of changes under a 2009 ethics reform law and new chamber rules as evidence of transparency. Even critics praised many of these changes, but said they did not address a fundamental flaw in transparency in state government: Unlike city councils and boards of selectmen, the Legislature is

Dugout fire at ball fields

On Tuesday (March 5) at 8:37 a.m., Engine 3 (Acting Lt. Hernan and FF/Medic Martin), Engine 1 (FF/Medic Durette) and Ambulance 1 (FF/Medic Silvia) were all dispatched from headquarters to area of the little league field on North Main Street for a reported structure fire.

No smoke or fire was visible when units arrived on scene. The calling party, who was driving by the field, remained on scene and directed the fire department members to the third-base dugout on Barnes Field along North Main Street. The fire department then found a small section of the wooden bench in the dugout still smoldering. The smoldering bench was extinguished with a pressurized water extinguisher.

It appears that an individual started a cooking fire on the bench to heat up some canned soup. The individual was gone prior to the fire department's arrival of the scene. Units cleared the scene once the fire was extinguished and the area under and around bench was checked for any further extension.

As it turned out, the 18-year-old, who had gone missing and was later located by the K-9 unit, had started a small fire there to cook soup and stay warm. He believed the fire was out when he left, police said.

Electrical feed

On Tuesday (March 5) at 10:12 a.m., Engine 3 (Acting Lt. Hernan and FF/Medic Martin), Engine 1 (Captain Trask) and Ladder 1 (Captain Bilodeau) were dispatched to 41 South Main St. for a reported fire in the rear of building. No smoke or fire was visible from the front of building on arrival of the scene. Units were the directed to the rear of the building, where they discovered that the electrical service feed to the building had melted and burned through two of the three wires feeding the building.

Fire department personnel shut off the power to the building at the electrical panel, National Grid Electrical Division and the wiring inspector were requested to the scene. National Grid arrived on scene and repaired the damaged electrical service feed. The wiring inspector also arrived on scene to check the electrical service to the building. Fire department personnel checked the interior walls of building with the thermal imaging camera for any hidden fires in the walls and none were detected. All units cleared the scene and returned to headquarters in service once National Grid arrived on scene.

DOR review report discussed

The Board of Selectmen delved into a lengthy discussion on the state Dept. of Revenue's financial management report on Cohasset, which was conducted in late 2012. The DOR identified 27 areas of concern, and the selectmen discussed nearly every item; the rest will be covered during their next meeting.

The selectmen also reviewed the 35-page report during their Feb. 26 selectmen meeting. For more on this issue, see an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

POLICE BEAT

'Grandparent's scam' attempt is foiled

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A Wheelwright Farm woman reported to police on Monday (March 4) that she was the intended victim of the infamous "grandparents scam." She reported getting a phone call from someone claiming to be her grandson, who said he had been in a car accident in California and had been arrested. He needed bail money and that she would get a call shortly from his attorney. She was suspicious and did not provide the caller with any personal information. She then called her grandson's mother to confirm that he was in his Boston apartment and was not in California. She was advised to contact police if any more calls like this one are received and to notify the phone company to have the caller's numbers blocked.

OUI arrest

A 64-year-old Cohasset woman was arrested for drunken driving at 12:33 a.m. on Monday (March 4) after police found her at the entrance to the Transfer Station.

Police said the Cohasset animal control officer reported he was traveling on Cedar Street when a Honda Civic swerved into his lane and almost struck his vehicle. He saw that the Civic had damage and turned around and followed the car to the Transfer Station.

Police said her Honda Civic had heavy front-end damage. The front tire was flat and the rim was showing.

Further investigation revealed the driver had struck a utility pole on Stockbridge Street, leaving a piece of fender at the scene. Police said the woman was exhibiting the signs and symptoms of intoxication. After a series of field sobriety tests she was charged with OUI (liquor), leaving the scene after property damage, negligent operation of a motor vehicle and marked lanes violation.

Rock thrown

At 1:40 p.m. on Monday (March 4), police responded to a Hull Street home on a report of a rock being thrown through the car's driver's side window overnight. Police said the victim did not hear anything; there were no other reported incidents so police believe it may have been a random act.

MVA

Police responded to a two-car accident at 1:45 p.m. on Tuesday (March 5) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway past Beechwood Street where the road expands to four lanes. Police said a 2008 Toyota and a 2012 Jeep, both driven by Scituate residents, were traveling side-by-side when one of the cars drifted into the lane of the other.

The 40-year-old woman driving the Toyota said the Jeep drifted into her lane striking the driver's side of her car; the 27-year-old woman in the Jeep said the Toyota drifted into her lane, striking the back passenger side of her vehicle. Both vehicles were drivable and had minor damage. Police were unable to determine who was at fault.

Clarinet missing

The mother of a Deer Hill student reported to police on Tuesday (March 5) that her daughter's clarinet had been missing since she left it at school the previous Wednesday. Police said the girl had left it in the hallway of the school and when she returned to find it, it was gone.

Van accident

Police said a passenger in a South Shore Elder Services van was seriously injured in a two-vehicle accident at 10:13 a.m. on Wednesday (March 5) when a 2011 Ford, sideswiped the van that was traveling on Clay Spring Road. Police said when the accident occurred, the Ford turning left from Bayberry Lane onto Clay Spring without yielding the right of way. The driver of the Ford, an 86-year-old Scituate man, said he did not see the van and was cited for failure to yield at an intersection. Police also filed an "immediate threat" with the Registry of Motor Vehicles. The RMV will assess whether the elderly man is OK to be driving.

Rollover

At 12:23 a.m. on Friday (March 8) police responded to a rollover crash at N. Main Street and Quonahassit Trail where a 1994 Jeep, operated by a 50-year-old Cohasset man, veered off the road in snowy conditions, crossed the centerline and hit a rocky embankment causing the Jeep to roll onto its roof. The jeep sustained heavy damage but the driver had no reported injuries, police said.

MVA

At 7:06 a.m. on Saturday (March 9), police responded to a crash on Church Street near Flintlock Ridge Road. Police said a 2012 Infinity, operated by a 41-year-old Scituate man, was headed north on Church Street when a 2003 Hyundai, operated by a 52-year-old Scituate man, failed to yield while turning left from Church onto Flintlock, causing the Infiniti to swerve and hit a pole. There were no reported injuries and neither vehicle was towed, police said.

Unwanted guest

At 1:10 am on Sunday (March 10), an officer was dispatched to a home on Elm Street for an unwanted guest. The homeowner explained he had returned with some friends from dinner when a man started to talk to them from the road. The man then entered the property and refused to leave after being asked to do so several times. Police asked him to leave the property and he agreed to do so; police transported him to his residence.

Uninsured MV

Police checked on a silver Ford Taurus stopped in the northbound travel lane on King Street on March 8 at about 2:17 p.m. No one was near the car and registry queries revealed the registration was revoked for insurance reasons. The car was towed. The registered owner, a 30-year-old Cohasset woman, was mailed a citation for allowing an uninsured MV on a public way.

Deer put down

Police had to put an injured deer down at 7:15 p.m. on Thursday (March 7) that was lying in the middle of Sohier Street. The deer, which had broken legs, was moved to the side of the road; the Environmental Police were notified to make arrangements for its disposal, police said.

Purse stolen

At 5:30 p.m. on Thursday (March 7), police took a report of a past breaking and entering to a motor vehicle. The victim, a 46-year-old Cohasset woman, reported someone had entered her motor vehicle and stolen her purse sometime around 1:30 p.m.

She explained at that time she was at a friend's house, and had left her vehicle running and unlocked. She did not notice her purse was missing until around 4:20 p.m. She retraced her steps and did not find her purse, which contained her wallet, credit cards, member cards and about $30 in cash. She was issued an identity theft packet and cancelled her credit cards.

Disturbance

Police responded to a reported domestic on Tuesday (March 5) at 7:36 a.m. Upon arrival officers met with the mother who reported her son was pounding and screaming because he had lost a school report on his computer. The son's story matched his mother's. The teen said he had been screaming and throwing his football pads around the room. The mother did not wish to take out a restraining order and no further action was needed.

Suspended license

An officer conducting traffic enforcement on North Main Street near the common saw a 2010 Hyundai Accent traveling 36 mph in a 20 mph zone. The officer pulled the car over and a check on the 51-year-old Hull man, who was driving, revealed his license had been suspended. He is being summonsed to court on the charges of operating after license suspension, speeding, failure to drive in marked lanes and unsafe operation of a motor vehicle. Police said the side air bags in the car were deployed because he had not had them reset after a recent accident.

Necklace

Police have a silver necklace with a pendant that a 77-year-old Scituate woman found in the municipal parking lot on Sunday (March 3).

Youth complaint

Police responded to a recent youth complaint from an Avalon resident who reported that a group of five teens were relieving themselves on the maintenance building. By the time police arrived, the teens were nowhere to be found.

Snowstorm blankets town

Schools delayed then closed last Friday

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset weathered the March winter storm better than the epic storm that was February's Blizzard Nemo. The Friday, March 1 snowstorm, named "Winter Storm Saturn," left over a foot of snow, while Nemo dumped nearly two feet of snow and knocked the power out in all of Cohasset. It took three days after Nemo to restore most of the power outages in town.

While school was canceled last Friday and power failures occurred around town, it seems that Cohasset fared well this time around.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that Saturn was "different than Nemo, 'a' because there's a lot less snow, and 'b,' we don't have the wind gusts we had in the other storm."

Initially Superintendent of schools, Barbara Cataldo, was reluctant to cancel school, since quite a few snow days were used up last month as the town grappled with multiple days without power, and the Deer Hill School was converted to a warming center. Early Friday morning, Cohasset schools initially had a two-hour delay; however, as the weather took a turn for the worst, the delay turned into a closure.

"Additional snow kept on coming," said Milanoski. Cataldo and the public safety department determined that closing schools was a better idea.

Town Hall remained open, however, and did not lose power. The Dept. of Public Works (DPW) reported that they lost power and phone service, and were running on generator power. The Recycling Center remained open throughout the day.

National Grid workers were spotted around town Friday, quickly restoring power to areas that lost it. Folks on Jerusalem Road, Beechwood Street, Forest Avenue, Lamberts Lane and others reported outages throughout the morning, but only went without power for a few hours at the most.

Cohasset residents on Facebook and Twitter also reported flooding on Margin Street and Atlantic Avenue, while the local police scanner reported downed trees and plenty of motor vehicle accidents in the area.

FOX RUN

at the 2012 Town Meeting, not indicating that the 50-foot strip that leads to the White's 30-acre property actually goes across some neighbors' yards.

According to the petition, a land survey conducted by the CCT, which was done after the Town Meeting vote, showed that the 50-foot strip access "is situated above the Fox Run paved entrance and leads into the woods, over ledge and through the front yards of the Martone, Lynch and Michlowski family homes – not the paved road as stated on the Town Meeting handout – before it proceeds down the Leffel driveway."

The petition pleads the selectmen "share our concern for the potential safety issues that may accompany such a significant change to our private way and the abutting neighborhoods. We feel strongly that our neighborhood may be permanently and negatively impacted by this development."

Some of the neighbors, particularly the Benson and Leffel families, have appeared before the selectmen a few times over the past month, and were told that they need to reach a solution with the CCT. However, the neighbors say that they have reached out to CCT and have been ignored.

"Our request for a meeting to discuss this with the CCT has fallen on deaf ears," Bob Benson told the selectmen.

Jeff Waal, CCT president, provided emails showing a back and forth between him, John Leffel and Benson, in which they were attempting to set a date to meet. Leffel stated in one email that he had surveyed other neighbors, and they wanted to see detailed written plans for the development of the White property prior to scheduling a meeting.

"Our only plans are access and walking paths. We have no plans for driveways or parking lots. We have told this to the selectmen, the neighbors and anyone else who would listen."
Jeff Waal, Cohasset Conservation Trust

CCT member Charlie Higginson attended the selectmen's meeting and said that at the moment, the CCT is "trying to negotiate with the neighbors. The issue was whether they wanted to meet or not... We're quite willing to meet with them."

What the neighbors really want — a guarantee that the land, once sold to the CCT, will not be developed or have any trails or public access, and will be preserved only as open space. While the CCT is saying that, so far, there are no official plans, they have not made any promises, either.

"We're not sure what we're going to do with the property," said Higginson. "We were told it's best to have conservation land open to the public so the public can enjoy it. We still have to make those decisions."

Waal said in an email to the Mariner, "Our only plans are access and walking paths. We have no plans for driveways or parking lots. We have told this to the selectmen, the neighbors and anyone else who would listen."

One concern that was quashed during Tuesday night's selectmen meeting: the idea that the CCT would create an access route at Surry Drive, another private road, at the end of Fox Run.

Waal wrote in a March 11 email to Leffel, "Access to the property by way of Surry Drive is not an option for a number of reasons."

Surry Drive resident Jon Durant explained to the selectmen that the only way to access that portion of Surry would be to go across his property. However, the homeowners around Fox Run all have easements on the land, and as Durant explained it, deed restrictions are attached to each property.

"Even if I wanted to give them access to the White property, I can't," said Durant, who said that he relayed that information to Waal in a Feb. 27 email; Waal later confirmed that the CCT did not plan to use Surry Drive as an access point due to the restrictions. The CCT also ruled out Lothrop Lane as an access point.

However, the CCT has given the impression that they would still like the land to be accessible to the public. Higginson said that most of the CCT's held property is open to the public; however, he said that he did not know of any incidents in which members of the public disrupted the neighborhood in a conservation area.

Surry Drive resident John Gordon countered that the CCT website lists several properties that have restricted or no public access.

The bottom line? Once the purchase is official, the CCT can do whatever is stipulated in the property's deed. "The CCT as the owner can do what is legal as far as the state and Cohasset is concerned with private property," said Higginson, who seemed to be puzzled over the neighbors wanting to keep Fox Run – which is mainly a swamp – as "their own backyard."

"If the town wants to use conservation land, it should be for the benefit of the whole town, not just abutters," said Higginson.

Selectman Leland Jenkins, who had originally brought the Fox Run neighbors' complaint to the rest of the board, said, "I'm not happy about this at all."

Other board members wondered how restrictive they could make the conservation restriction —whether the public could be banned.

Higginson said a restriction would have to be drafted by a lawyer, however cautioning, "If it's too restrictive, someone might not like it, and say no."

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson once again deferred to the CCT and neighbors in conflict. "There's not much we can do. The weather's getting warmer; perhaps the neighbors and CCT can get together and work it out."

Eagle Scout makes signage for Straits Pond

Benson built educational kiosks

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Eagle Scout Derek Benson stands near Black Rock Beach in front of one of two informational kiosks he made for the Straits Pond Watershed Association. COURTESY PHOTO

Derek Benson was practically ready to be an Eagle Scout years before he achieved the rank. Having joined the local Boy Scouts Troop 28 in fifth grade, it only took Benson two years to ascend to Life Scout, the rank right before Eagle. The now Cohasset High School junior, 16, then had to bide his time fulfilling other merit badge requirements over the next four years before earning the rank of Eagle after fulfilling his service project in late 2012.

The rank of Eagle Scout is the highest a Boy Scout can achieve. To reach Eagle Scout status, the scout must complete 21 merit badges and a project that benefits the community and involves leadership; the area Boy Scout Council must approve an Eagle project and the workbook detailing the scout's project. The Eagle Scout Project Workbook contains all the scout's records, letters of recommendations, plus pictures and details of the project itself.

All requirements must be completed by the time the scout reaches 18. Roughly 5 percent of boys who enter scouting go on to become Eagle Scouts. However, several Cohasset Boy Scouts have received the honor in the past year.

Benson began brainstorming project ideas during his freshman year of high school. Then starting in the fall of 2011, he began meeting with various town boards to seek approval for the project, a process that ended in spring 2012. Benson then spent part of the summer and fall completing the actual project.

Benson's service project was fairly straightforward — he wanted to call attention to Straits Pond because he admittedly knew little about the pond himself.

"The pond is just kind of 'there,' but I didn't know the name of it," said Benson. "That's pretty bad considering I live three minutes away. I wanted to help raise awareness, and it seemed like a good project."

Benson had some help from Dick Avery, head of the Straits Pond Watershed Association, who acted as Benson's Scout advisor. The association gave Benson an informational video on Straits Pond, which helped him come up with the information to include on the kiosks. The scout also had assistance from Roger Hill, owner of King Street Boats, who helped build the wooden kiosks in his workshop.

The project also had a fundraising component. The Cohasset Rotary, Garden Club and Hingham Lumber all contributed to the cause. In addition to getting the project approved by the local Boy Scouts council, Benson also had to appeal to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, Conservation Commission and Cohasset Land Trust.

With the help of these parties, Benson created and installed two kiosks: one at the West Corner Tide Gate, the other at the east end of the pond across from Black Rock Beach. The kiosks focus on the Straits Pond ecosystem and display information and photos of seasonal marine and avian life, and of the geological history of the pond and the tide gates.

Benson said that the Straits Pond Watershed Association was happy with the project, since they helped guide it. Fulfilling the requirement necessary to become an Eagle Scout taught Benson a thing or two about scouting, and "life in general."

"It taught me a lot of basic life skills" such as First Aid and how to navigate around the woods, Benson said of scouting. The Eagle Scout project, in particular, "taught me how to lead, dealing with people and trying to get work done." He also gained experience dealing with local government, which he admitted was a challenge.

This turned out to be a valuable lesson, however, as Benson said he also learned about the importance of time management. "It taught me a lot about procrastination," he said. "You can't miss deadlines."

While Benson also feels that these lessons learned will aid him as he prepares for college, as a junior, he's got a little more time to worry about all that. He's not sure yet where he would like to attend school, although he is looking at Tufts and MIT and thinks he would like to study engineering or computer science. Working with computers is one of his hobbies; when he's not scouting, he also enjoys skiing, swimming and sailing.

Benson also plays several sports and plays music in two school High School bands, the main band and the jazz band. He played varsity hockey this year and will be the golf team captain next year; he's also playing tennis this spring.

Benson said that he's enjoyed being a Boy Scout for so many years and is friends with many of his fellow Troop 28 scouts, many of whom are also Eagle Scouts or are going to be.

"It's pretty cool considering all the other scouts [in Troop 28] eventually make Eagle," he said.

The Mariner will feature other Troop 28 Eagle Scouts in upcoming issues. Stay tuned!

HAPPENING TONIGHT

'Lost Boys of Sudan' is subject of movie

Movie Night presented by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is the documentary, "God Grew Tired of Us," at 7 p.m., Friday (March 15) at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This film, winner of the Sundance Film Festival Grand Jury Prize, tells the story of the experiences of three of the "Lost Boys of Sudan," part of a group of 25,000 young men who fled the wars in Sudan in the '80s. All CDTC movies shown are free and refreshments are served.

In 1987 Sudan's Muslim government pronounced death to all males in the Christian south; 27,000 boys fled to Ethiopia on foot. Archival footage used in the film documents the 1,000-mile flight. In 1991, they were forced to flee to Kenya; 12,000 survived to live in a U.N. refugee camp in Kakuma, Kenya.

The film follows life in the camp, and follows three of the young men telling the stories of their experiences as they repatriate to the U.S.

AROUND TOWN

Prom meeting is Monday!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Enjoy!

Hi Cohasset, Happy St. Patty's Day Weekend to you. I hope that everyone is doing ok after another crazy weekend last week with a ton of beautiful snow. (I know, for many not the wording you would use but...it was pretty:) We then had a week of "balmy" weather and poof...the snow is gone and yes, flowers are springing up all over the place. We also welcomed Daylight Saving Time and having an extra hour of light each day has been nice. It always plays a bit of havoc with me for the first few days though, you too? Hoping everyone is all "reset" and we can now, look ahead to the First Day of Spring, March 20th! Enjoy your week Cohasset.

Prom meeting

This Monday evening (March 18), at 7 pm, the parents of CHS Class of '13 are invited to attend the Prom Committee Meeting being held at Cohasset High School in the Library. Volunteers are set-up and working in a number of different areas to pull this event together in an exciting, happy, secret way and more help is needed! Come on down and sign up for this amazing and once-in-a-lifetime event for our children.

Loomis Chaffee

Edward Culhane, a senior from Cohasset, was recently named to the High Honor Roll for the winter term of the 2012-2013 school year at The Loomis Chaffee School, in Windsor, Conn. Keep up the great work!

DeSales University

Thomson Jaffe, a theater major and a resident of Cohasset, was among more than 500 traditional day and adult evening students from DeSales University in Center Valley, Pa., who made the 2012 fall dean's list. Great news, Thomson!

Clarkson University

Hats off to Spencer G. Wakefield of Cohasset, a freshman majoring in business studies at Clarkson University, received the Theodore Sr. and Wanda McWharf Endowed Scholarship and the Advani Endowed Scholarship during the 2012-2013 academic year.

Spencer also participated on the Clarkson University club football team as a linebacker. The Clarkson University Golden Knights football club finished the 2012 season with a 4-3 record. The team was founded two years ago, and has since grown to more than 50 members. The club finished its 2010 season with a 1-win-5 loss record, and then improved to 3-3 in 2011.

Colby-Sawyer

Colby-Sawyer College has shared with us that Samantha JoAnne Lehr from Cohasset has been named to the dean's list for academic achievement during the 2012 fall semester. To qualify for the dean's list, students must achieve a grade point average of 3.50 or higher on a 4.0 scale while carrying a minimum of 12 credit hours in graded courses.

Samantha, a member of the Class of 2013, is majoring in exercise science.

St. Lawrence

Natalie G. Dignam of Cohasset has been selected for inclusion on the dean's list for academic achievement during the 2012 fall semester at St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y. To be eligible for the dean's list, a student must have completed at least four semester units and have an academic average of 3.6 (based on a perfect 4.0 scale) for the semester.

Natalie, a member of the Class of 2015, graduated from Cohasset Jr.-Sr. High School. Way to go, Natalie!

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

The Mr. Skipper contestants in tonight's pageant are: Ryan MacCarthy, Connor Goetz, Zack Washak, Alex Kent, Dallas Purcell, Jake Herth, and Drew Nahill. Who will be the next Mr. Skipper?

WHITNEY MALONE

Due to last Friday's unexpected storm, the Boys' Basketball Team played their semi-finals game against Bishop Connolly Saturday afternoon in Taunton. Although the boys didn't take the win, they certainly played their best, tying up the game in the last two minutes of the fourth period after trailing behind Bishop Connolly for most of the game. Congratulations boys on an amazing season!

After a great end to the winter sports season, CHS students are ready for spring. Monday night, CHS held an athletics meeting for students and parents to introduce the spring sports season, officially beginning next Monday.

Tuesday, National Honor Society announced acceptances of new members. These students were notified of their acceptance by mail, as well as by a list posted outside Mr. Welch's classroom. Consequently, current NHS members participated in their last tutoring session at "Homework Club" at the library Tuesday night, as the new members will be continuing the program until the end of June. Congrats to the new NHS members!

In spirit of March Madness, CHS held a shortened Spirit Week this week, encouraging students to dress according to the given themes. Wednesday, students dressed up for "Jersey Day," appropriate for that afternoon's official Dodge Ball Tournament, a fundraiser run by and for the senior class. Over two weeks, CHS students of all grades prepared for the competition, forming their teams and planning out their unique team names, uniforms, and of course, strategies. After six teams were knocked out, the final two teams faced-off today during lunch.

Continuing the spirit, students dressed for "Color Wars" Thursday. While the freshmen were decked out in purple, sophomores in yellow, and juniors in red, we seniors wore our new senior class t-shirts and sported CHS colors navy blue, white, and silver. Today, all CHS students dressed in green, in spirit of St. Patrick's Day on Sunday.

Tonight, 10 handsome, intelligent, and humorous young men will compete for the title of Mr. Skipper at CHS. Held annually as a fundraiser for the senior class, the Mr. Skipper male pageant will also include a raffle for prizes from local businesses, such as Buttonwood Books and Toys, Mathnasium, Paperscapes, and many more! The show starts at 7 p.m. in the auditorium... Don't miss out!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Skippers Lax book ads due

Cohasset is fast becoming a hotbed for incredible lacrosse talent due to our legacy of strong youth and high school programs. More than 20 Cohasset High School boys and girls lacrosse players have gone on to become collegiate lacrosse players and there is no shortage of evidence that the momentum is continuing to build with each graduating class from Cohasset High School.

To showcase the talent among our current high school players and to raise funds to support the growing number of athletes throughout the town, the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters will produce the first-ever Cohasset Skippers Lacrosse book for both the girls and boys high school lacrosse teams.

This annual book will contain team pictures and headshots of each high school team player. If your business wants to support the coaches and the high school lacrosse teams by purchasing an advertisement, please email Elizabeth Naughton at: elizabeth-naughton@me.com for advertising specifications. All ads are due March 28.

Photo, clinic

Friday, March 22 at 4:30 p.m. – Cohasset High School turf field

A free 30-minute clinic coached by the Cohasset girls' high school team and led by the team's new coach – Kully Reardon – will follow the photo shoot.

GIMME SHELTER

This is Thomas, and what a natural he is! When you meet him, you will see why we think he is ready for Spring Training! This handsome, two-year-old boy has the most fabulous double paws and truly, with his little catcher's mitts, he could be signed tomorrow.

COURTESY PHOTO

This handsome, two-year-old boy has the most fabulous double paws and truly, with his little catcher's mitts, he could be signed tomorrow.

Thomas is a laid back and loving boy with awesome golden eyes. His handsome looks and gentle nature make him a wonderful choice for a loving person or family. He will make a great companion and is just waiting to have a chance to play with strings, chase rolling toys, curl up for long petting sessions, and let you hear his melodic and deep purr.

Certainly, as Thomas becomes comfortable with you, he shows his relaxed, calm and oh so loving side. It is a little difficult for him to be living in the shelter since he is new, was just recently neutered, and tends to be shy with the other cats. However, he does enjoy the attention and affection of our volunteers. Thomas is more of a people cat and will be very happy being the prince in his new home.

Please call Chris at 781-534-4902 for more information about Thomas and other available feline companions. You are welcome to visit with the cats at Open Hours on Mondays from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121. You can visit our website, www.hsar.org, to view other available pets in our shelter who are featured on Petfinder.com.

Just a reminder to those of you who have a cat, or know of someone who does, who needs spay or neuter services, our next spay day is Monday, March 25. Drop off time begins at 8 a.m. and your pet will be ready to return home later in the day. Call the office at 781-925-3121 to reserve a spot. Please leave a message with your name and number, age and sex of your cat and we will return your call with more information and details.

As we move closer, happily, toward Spring we know that it will mean the arrival of more kittens, and nursing mother cats. If you have a cozy space, experience with fostering, and would like to become involved in the shelter's foster program, please call or come by during Open Hours to fill out an application. All necessary food and supplies are provided to foster homes. If you can help with donations, wet and dry kitten food is needed now as we prepare for our new babies.

Thank you to all who have continued to be there for us with bottle and can donations was well as much needed supplies and fun items for the cats and kittens at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

Please join us for our Gimme Shelter fundraiser at the C-Note Music Club in Hull on Sunday, April 28th from 4 to 8 p.m. Food, music and fabulous raffle and silent auction items will make for a fun evening out and help our non-profit organization. We look forward to seeing all of our supporters.

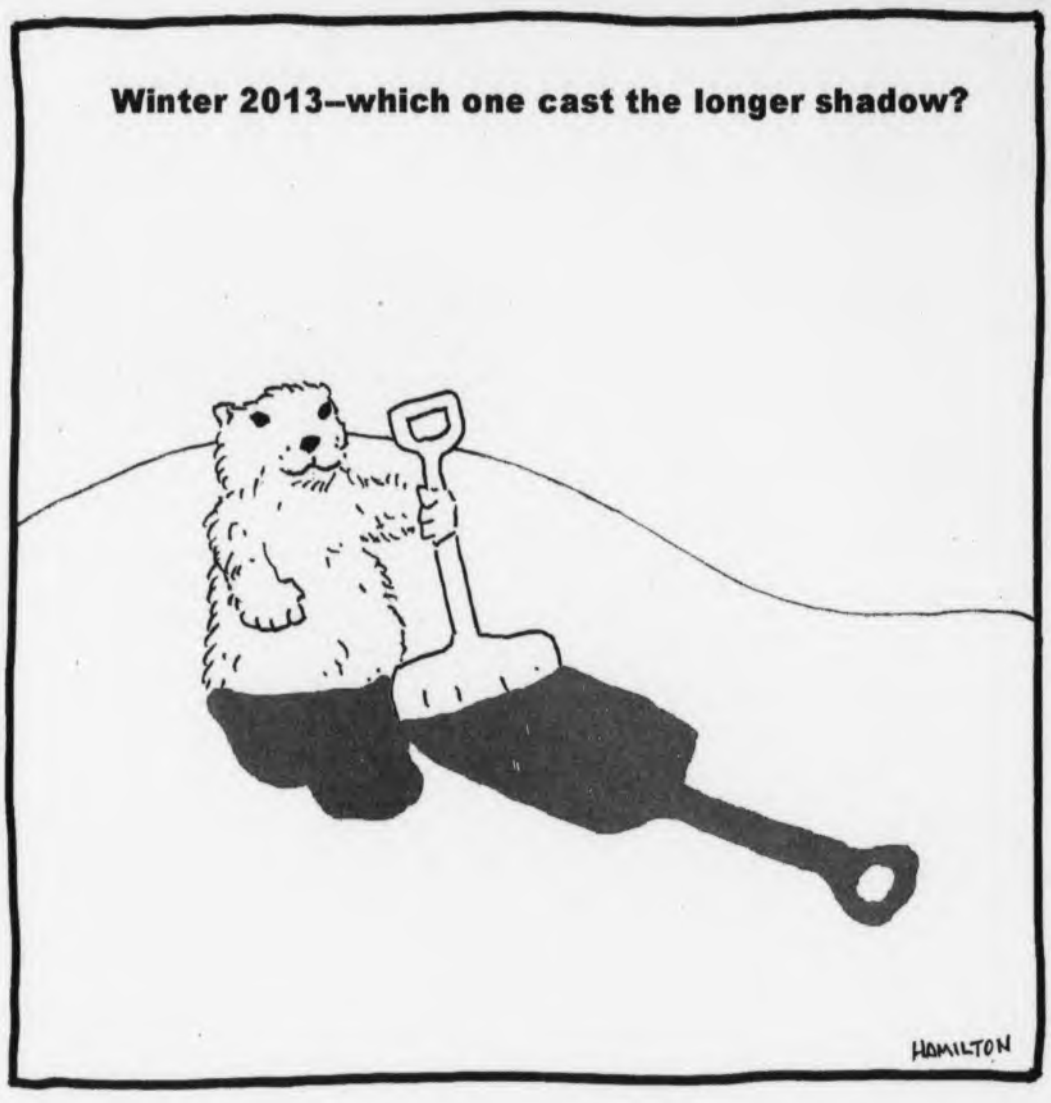
OUR VIEW

Scam attempt

We continue to write about the infamous "grandparent scam" that preys on senior citizens nationwide because it continues to surface right here in Cohasset.

This week we are proud of an 84-year-old Cohasset grandmother, who called police after receiving a call from someone claiming to be her grandson who was arrested in California following a car accident. He then said he needed bail money and that she would be getting another call shortly from an attorney with the details.

The scam, which has been around for several years, keeps resurfacing. Last fall in Hingham, a 75-year-old grandmother almost became a victim of the scam. Another grandparent scam attempt was reported just a week later here in Cohasset. Both scammers wanted money wired to them and claimed to be a grandchild calling for help from Peru.



The stories are always similar: a caller pretending to be a grandson or granddaughter is in trouble and needs money. They usually play on the sympathy of their potential victim asking the grandparent not to tell their parents they are in trouble. Sadly, some grandparents have wired the money and are out several thousand dollars.

It is believed that scammers are most likely calling random numbers until they happen to reach a senior citizen. The scammers' basic tactic is to pose as a grandchild and let the unsuspecting grandparent fill in the blanks.

However, in the recent Hingham case the scammer had the correct family name and nickname of the grandmother, information that was likely obtained through social media sites on the Internet.

In the most recent Cohasset case that occurred last week, the grandmother smartly did not share any personal information. She also called her grandson's mother right away and confirmed he was not in California but in his apartment in Boston.

If someone is scammed or thinks there is an attempted scam — they should notify the police right away. Please spread the word to your parents or grandparents so they do not become a victim. Red flags should go up should anyone ask you to wire them money.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt appreciation to town, friends of Kurt

My name is Christine Gritzan and I had the pleasure and privilege to live in beautiful Cohasset in the late 90s to 2008.

The last time I was in touch with the Mariner was in 2006 when my son, Kurt Gritzan, passed away from a rare childhood cancer, Ewing's Sarcoma.

I am writing to you today because this April marks the seventh year of Kurt's passing as well as some other "significant" life markers that I would like to share with you and your readers.

During his illness, several of Kurt's high school friends started the KRG 22 Team for Relay for Life at Cohasset High School. In the years to follow, Amanda Masotta continued on in this capacity and then passed the baton to Kristin Alexander, who now, as a graduating Cohasset senior, will serve again as the captain for the KRG 22 Team.

With assistance from Kurt's grandparents, family, friends, and several anonymous donors, our family has established the Kurt Gritzan Scholarship fund. Each year since Kurt's passing a monetary gift is given to a Cohasset High School senior – Hockey Player – for the "love of the game" in Kurt's memory. The scholarship is given, with others, on Awards Night. Again, as with Relay For Life, Kurt's core group of high school friends, Ben Masotta, Emily Coggins, Justin Alexander, Corbin Faber, and Colin Smith return each year to Cohasset to present the scholarship on Kurt's behalf.

Your town and your children continue to be a source of inspiration and joy for myself and Kurt's extended family. The friends we made there, the memories, the community support. I am truly grateful for everyday.

As I reach this seventh year marker, I just wanted to say "thank you" to all the wonderful people in Cohasset that made such a great difference in Kurt's life and continue to touch my life daily.

Christine Gritzan, Kurt's Mom

Gavel used to quiet disrespectful speaker

Among my responsibilities as Chairman of Cohasset's Board of Selectmen is the maintenance of open and orderly meetings. For the most part our meetings run smoothly. We are conducting the people's business and I strongly believe that anybody who wishes to be heard during our discussions should be heard. In addition, I have scheduled open public comment periods at the beginning and end of our public business throughout my chairmanship. However, to maintain order any chairman must insist that people not shout out from the audience, particularly when other people are speaking.

The only time I prohibited public comment was when we were holding a quasi-judicial hearing and Town Counsel advised that public comment was not permitted under the law. At that meeting, people were invited to speak during the public comment period at the end of the agenda.

While speakers are free to criticize me and others, they must do so in a respectful manner. At the bottom of every agenda is a statement that "Discussion during Board meetings should always be courteous and respectful..." No chairman should tolerate speakers demeaning or defaming others.

At our meeting on Tuesday, March 12, a speaker came before the Board and repeatedly violated these guidelines. Reluctantly, I had to gavel him down more than once.

The gavel, for those who have not used one, is very powerful. It really gets people's attention. In my almost six years on the Board of Selectmen, the chairmen have rarely used the gavel. The people of Cohasset are generally polite and respectful. On those occasions when the chairmen have used the gavel, it has been necessary. I hope its use continues to be rare.

Paul Carlson, 18 Old Coach Road

COMMENTARY

Let public be part of the process

TOM GRUBER

Second, there is no provision in the draft Town Manager Act for public presentation or input into the process of Town Manager selection.

A copy of Tom Gruber's letter to Christine Cunning, Chairman of the Governance Committee, was provided to the Mariner for publication.

I have read the recent draft for a revised Town Manager Act. Clearly, from the recent confusion and interpretation difficulties with the present act, changes need to be made. However, there are several points in the latest draft that all residents should think about very carefully.

First, is that the only exclusion from being appointed as Town Manager is that the appointed cannot have been selectmen within 15 months. Let's think about this. Is this restriction sufficient? I would contend that it is not. This restriction does not prohibit someone currently sitting on a board or committee (an insider) from being appointed as Town Manager. Yes, there may be people in this group who could potentially do the job but without additional restrictions, a group of insiders can be continually shifted around into the position of Town Manager without any outsiders even being considered. In fact, this is the situation that was recently done by the Board of Selectmen to fill the position of the last Town Manager until it was determined that the contract they had written for a Town Manager was illegal and was subsequently rewritten as "Acting Town Manager." This is one of the recent moves that caused a large furor among residents.

Second, there is no provision in the draft Town Manager Act for public presentation or input into the process of Town Manager selection. In the past, numerous candidates were reviewed and interviewed in order to develop a "short list." The resumes of these candidates were made known to the public and each appeared publicly at a selectmen's meeting where they were openly interviewed and the public could attend and possibly ask questions. This makes the entire selection process open and transparent. There are no provisions or requirements for "openness" or "transparency" in the proposed act. Of course, the Board of Selectmen seems to prefer this mode of operation, especially since their recently chosen candidates resume, education, and work experience have yet to be made public, and there was no public vetting prior to selection.

Thus, not only can insiders be selected as Town Manager, but also there is no requirement to make the candidate's education, experience and references public. Each of these is a serious problem, but in combination they form a fatal flaw in the draft.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Can you hear the robin sing?

JON BELBER

The birds are up early these days. And they can stay out later, naturally tweeting to celebrate as we know have the sunlight longer. With spring around the corner, the farmer is up early too to stoke the greenhouse stove – as the greenhouse grows fuller every day – and the fluctuating cold temperatures provide uncertainty for the seedlings.

One must provide consistency in the greenhouse. This task is easier when there is regulated heat, secure glass panels and an airtight growing environment. This is the goal, but not the case at Holly Hill Farm.

Hoop houses are the norm for the hardy seedlings as they germinate, search for sunlight and grow, gaining a firm hold on the healthy soil, establishing strong stems, true leaves and preparing for a happy, productive season.

If a hoop house or a house for growing greens is outside your back door or a nearby sunny window, then you know the seedlings need warmth, timely, consistent water and plenty of sunshine, real or artificial.

The days spent in the Holly Hill hoop house are a nice reprieve from the long winter, which may still drop more snow. In the hoop house, there is lively chatter, plenty of work to fill the trays with warm, fluffy soil and sometimes an old radio to accompany those sowing seeds and singing songs.

Come by and inquire if you wish to volunteer and learn about this great, organic effort.

The farmer is busy all year long, but this time of activity is eternally hopeful as the seeds are gently dispersed into their cells. The farmer considers germination rates, viability and a thoughtful, calculated gamble. Lately, even though we are supposed to be having greater amounts of sunshine, the sun seems all too hidden behind the grey clouds and not thoroughly heating up the space quite as much as we and the seedlings desire.

It is a good place to be, come March.

However, the outside world still beckons. So on go the muck boots to wade through melting snow rivulets to collect eggs, check for signs of perennial renewals and find a garden bed to turn. All this rain has us seeking more rain barrels to collect and harbor some of that water. There is also a desire to build new beds for young farmers who regularly visit the farm and would like a bed of their own to grow.

Outside there is always a chance to make compost. Restaurants, coffee shops and horses are just some of the neighbors who provide daily ingredients for making worms happy and compost richer. If beds are found, turned and prepped, then so we shall sow. Peas on St. Patrick's Day, perhaps.

At Teak Sherman Community Garden in Scituate, where folks plant a little extra for the food pantry, plots are almost all spoken for, as many have the need to put their hands in the soil and join this growing endeavor.

To quote a poet, if not for you gardeners, the Winter would have no Spring, and we could not hear the robin sing. Face head on and embrace the twists and turns of March, as if it was not enough to have to beware the Ides. Keep busy as we are in the right direction, planning for warmer days, with one ear open for the birds.

COMMENTARY

Open Legislature to Open Meeting Law

ROBERT HEDLUND

The Massachusetts Legislature needs to embrace real transparency and allow the public to witness the votes and deliberations that create the legislation that affects the Commonwealth, not just the end result.

The right to petition the government for redress of grievances is the bedrock principle of our civic institutions. The Commonwealth's Open Meeting Law is intended to protect this right. However, the Massachusetts Legislature remains exempt from the provisions of the law, leading to a system of governance that gives the impression of transparency while actually being opaque.

Because the General Court is exempt from the law, the Joint Rules of the Senate and House of Representatives set the standard for openness in our state government. Currently, the Joint Rules that govern openness state that joint sessions and committee meetings shall "be open to the public, unless a majority shall vote otherwise."

The result of this self-made rule is that Legislative Committees will often vote to go into an "Executive Session" before taking key votes, allowing them to exclude members of the public from debates and obscuring individual votes on key pieces of legislation from the public eye. While formal sessions of the Legislature (and the roll call votes taken during these sessions) are open to the public, many times these votes represent nothing more than rubber-stamps on legislation that has already had its fate decided during closed door "Executive Sessions" or closed-door party caucuses.

I have been a longtime supporter of expanding the Commonwealth's Open Meeting and Public Records Laws to encompass the Legislature, and have filed and supported dozens of bills to support this position over my legislative career.

The Massachusetts Legislature needs to embrace real transparency and allow the public to witness the votes and deliberations that create the legislation that affects the Commonwealth, not just the end result. This is especially important in an era of a near one-party monopoly in state government.

There are certain instances where the Legislature must take actions out of the view of the public for legal reasons, such as when deciding to purchase land that would weaken the state's bargaining power in negotiations. For this, and other reasons, many of my colleagues will certainly be reluctant to apply the Open Meeting Law to every aspect of the Legislature.

However, even if we cannot adopt the Open Meeting Law in full, the Legislature can still take important steps towards transparency. Recent examples of the legislative resistance to reform include:

• A Senate Republican caucus proposal to put all Legislative Committee votes online for voters to see what was adopted by the Senate but rejected by the House after a party line vote. This could be accomplished through changes to the Joint Rules, and would provide voters with important insights to the actions of their Legislators.

• A Senate Republican caucus proposal would have allowed members of a conference committee, which are appointed to resolve differences between Senate and House legislation, to file a minority report. This proposal would have shed light on the particularly secretive actions of conference committees, but was rejected along party lines in the Senate.

I support any measures that would increase transparency in the Legislature, and will continue to push for a change to the Open Meeting Law to remove the General Court's exemption. In the meantime, the Legislature needs to make immediate changes to the Joint Rules because constituents deserve to know how their elected officials vote when the camera is off.

Robert L. Hedlund, is the assistant minority leader in the Massachusetts State Senate. He represents Plymouth and Norfolk Counties, consisting of the towns of Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell and Scituate in Plymouth County and Cohasset and Weymouth in Norfolk County.

MS Walk, McCourt Ride are approved

Selectmen voted in favor of the MS Walk to take place on Saturday, May 4 (one weekend before the annual town election). The event was approved 4-1, with Selectman Martha Gjesteby as the dissenting vote. Gjesteby said that she would like to impose some limits on how many similar events can be held in town, cutting back on the ones that do not directly benefit residents or give back to Cohasset.

"I don't mind events that are for the town that the town can take advantage of," said Gjesteby. "There's too much assigned to our wonderful roads by every organization... I think we should be cutting down on some of these."

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson and vice chair Diane Kennedy pointed out that this event does not close down any roads, and is just a walk. Also, the event "has a history here; a number of residents benefit," said Kennedy.

The board also voted to approve the McCourt Foundation's Ride for Alzheimer's and MS on Sat., Oct. 5. The event is held every other year and involves a bike ride through Wompatuck State Park. The selectmen voted 4-1 for this as well, with Gjesteby voting against.

Kennedy noted that the new events application developed by the town's events committee, which she is part of, is quite lengthy and has a $250 fee, so the town is benefiting from having events in Cohasset.

FOR THE RECORD

Casting Sunshine on State House

GREGORY MATHIS

This week's special report focuses on why the State Legislature is not held to the same standards as local town government when it comes to the state's public record law and open meeting law.

We could all use a little more sunshine, especially after this long, snowy winter.

While we're guaranteed additional daylight now that we've turned the clocks ahead one hour and begin Daylight Saving Time, that's not the type of sunshine I'm referring to or the point of Sunshine Week, which began Sunday and runs through Saturday, March 16.

This year, as part of a group project, we're taking a closer look at how our State Legislature operates. Transparency has been a popular buzzword at all levels of government, including the state level. And while real efforts have been made to provide the public with more information about votes and spending in particular, the fact remains much still goes on behind closed doors or outside of the public domain.

This week's special report focuses on why the State Legislature is not held to the same standards as local town government when it comes to the state's public record law and open meeting law. Lawmakers are allowed to meet in private caucuses behind closed doors to discuss important matters relating to major bills and aren't required to release what would be considered public records for local government bodies.

Clearly there have been some positive changes over the years in state government, mostly as it relates to making information more accessible online. While state government agencies and elected officials have pledged to become more transparent in the way business is done at the State House, saying you'll be more transparent and actually being transparent is not one in the same. What they think we want or need to know, and what we actually want or need to know could be entirely different things.

Sunshine Week and the importance of open government isn't just our fight. Our goal is to make readers aware of the various laws designed to keep public information out in the open, but the success of Sunshine Week and holding elected officials accountable depends just as much on individual participation. You can make just as big of a difference as news organizations when it comes to keeping government on its toes.

All you need to do is be come passionate about something you believe in and engage in a discussion about an aspect of government or public records that is important to you. Whether you show up at a selectmen's meeting, a school committee meeting, or contact a state legislator, or write a series of letters to the editor demanding action from your governmental officials, the level of participation in this important ongoing discussion is up to you.

But whatever you do, please consider doing something. Don't stand on the sidelines and be an observer while being shut out from information you deserve from public officials and agencies.

While the Sunshine Week campaign sets aside one week a year to bring issues of open government and accountability to the forefront, it's one that everyone should be paying closer attention to throughout the course of the year. We'll do our part. Will you do yours?

RED LION

"Show some respect for the people who work for this town," said Carlson.

"Excuse my language, but I'm angry," said Ordelheide. He asked why someone couldn't call him if something like this were to happen again. Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy agreed that the billing system had been a problem in the past, but said the town is "getting on track." She suggested that the Board of Health send a certified letter a week or 10 days prior to issuing a cease and desist order.

"We can have that incorporated into the policy of the Board of Health," said Milanoski, adding that the Red Lion Inn and other businesses who had not paid their invoices were given a 30-day extension.

"They already had 60 days," said Carlson.

Kennedy said that the "important message" was how the town should "systemize" its billing methods moving forward.

Letter

In a March 11 letter to the Board of Selectmen, Ordelheide wrote: "Now on Monday of last week in the early morning hours according to the hotel manager the health inspector arrived with police and gleefully put papers on the doors closing the establishment

"I personally went to town hall. When I asked the health manager why he did not call us (we are talking $450) he said he did not have time. Instead he asked us to provide endless amount of paperwork, which we never had to do before. During the last 13 years of operation we never had a serious problem with the health department. Mr. Godzik [former health agent] was great."

Zemel responded in a letter addressed to the town manager that he did not call the inn because he sent written notices, which is standard protocol.

Last Monday, Zemel went to the inn, along with a constable, to deliver the order at 7:45 a.m. that day. He met with Ordelheide around 3 p.m. that afternoon. Ordelheide was asked to fill out paperwork and after doing so, the inn was reopened on a temporary operating permit. However, the owner had to attend a board of health hearing on Tuesday, March 12 and provide additional documentation.

Ordelheide appeared at the Board of Selectmen meeting later that evening to express his anger over the whole issue. The inn owner grew quite agitated, insulting Zemel and claiming that the health inspector had more time to call the press than to call Ordelheide and warn him of the impending closure. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski spoke up on Zemel's behalf, saying that the health inspector did not call the press.

The Mariner, Patriot Ledger, Boston Globe, and Cohasset opinion paper/blog TinyTown Gazette all ran stories on the Red Lion Inn last week.

Ordelheide wrote in his letter to the selectmen that he was "appalled" by the health agent and town manager, and warned that their actions "could result in multiple lawsuits against the town." During Tuesday night's meeting, he said he was "on the warpath against" both of them.

"The health inspector and town manager are on an ego trip, abusing their power gleefully, which hurts the town, our 80 employees, customers and other town businesses who profit from us being successful," Ordelheide wrote. "They are paid through our taxes and should do their utmost to help businesses instead."

The inn owner also said that he believed the health department was asking for them to fill out more paperwork than was required by law and that he would continue to abide by state law. Zemel responded in his letter that the applications business owners have to fill out are modeled on forms developed by the state Department of Public Health.

"Regarding the endless amount of paperwork, he [Ordelheide] appears to be referring to the application and plan review application forms, which are requesting more information than previous ones, purely because the previous forms were not in compliance with State Law, which clearly describes all information that must be provided on the application," Zemel wrote in response. "The only piece that goes beyond state law is requesting the email address(es) of the business and/or business owner(s)."

Communication

The inn's missed payments have been chalked up to a mistake and miscommunication.

Ordelheide explained that the inn missed permit payments while he was out of the country, and a manager mistakenly thought the invoices had been paid and threw them away. This employee subsequently ignored additional mailings from the Board of Health office.

"The poor girl didn't know," Ordelheide said of this employee, adding that she was not fired for this. The inn owner also wrote in his letter that Zemel had said the Board of Health forgot to bill 17 businesses in town in 2012.

"In November those invoices were finally sent out and we paid ours," Ordelheide wrote. "Supposedly invoices for 2013 were send [sic] out describing new rules by the health department in January. Since we had just paid the health department our employee might have not paid attention to it and accounting never got notice."

Zemel explained last week that the Red Lion Inn was the only one of around 60 food establishments in town that did not pay its permit fees on time, and this was after receiving a 30-day extension. However, a recent change in the health board's fee structure seems to have caused some confusion.

Zemel said that the board of health voted on a new fee structure during their Oct. 30 meeting; the schedule was effective Dec. 1 with bills due by Dec. 30, with an incremental percentage increase for delinquent payments. However, since Zemel said that many businesses were likely unaware of the new schedule, the health board decided on a 30-day period for late payments.

Businesses were first notified on Dec. 7 and then again on Jan. 15. If businesses failed to comply by close of business on March 1, permits would be revoked.

Zemel clarified this in a letter to Milanoski responding to Ordelheide's claims, also dated March 11. The health inspector drafted a cease and desist notice to the Red Lion Inn on Friday, March 1, which was served by a constable on Monday, March 4. Zemel noted last week that this had minimal impact to the business, which does not serve food on Mondays or Tuesdays. Milanoski said Tuesday that the health inspector was also cognizant of any weddings that might have occurred that weekend.

Milanoski defended Zemel for doing his job. "The health agent did what he is required to do—enforce the state program... It was handled appropriately."

The town manager added that the whole thing was actually a "low-key event" with just the health inspector and constable going over to the inn. Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that she saw a "whole fleet" of fire engines outside the inn that morning around 9 a.m., but Milanoski said it was for an unrelated matter. Gjseteby said she thought there had been a fire. The town manager replied the matter was coincidental and had "nothing to do with" the cease and desist order.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia said in a phone call that a training exercise took place at the Red Lion Inn that morning that involved several fire department staff members, along with two fire engines and an ambulance. This training was planned well ahead of time and was unrelated to the inn's shutdown. Silvia said that the department conducts similar training in "all the major properties" around town to prepare for a fire or other serious event.

Elections should be same day

KEVIN MCCARTHY

I am perplexed at Cohasset's decision to hold our local town elections on Saturday May 11, which is only 12 days after two hotly contested state primaries being held on April 30. While the cost savings of combining the two elections makes fiscal sense, particularly considering the state of our town budget, the more important and much bigger issue is what this decision says about respect for the voice of The People. Combining the two elections would obviously increase voter turnout. The larger the voter turnout the better for our Democracy. Irrespective of how the issues and/or candidates are decided at the ballot box, the more voters that express their will the more valid, legitimate and representative are the results.

Our elected and appointed officials should be actively jumping at the chance to increase voter turnout not suppress it by splitting important election dates for no good reason I have seen presented. In fact, I ask those who made the decision to hold two separate and closely dated elections in Cohasset, when many town and cities are combining their election dates on April 30, the following question: "What is the compelling public interest which is served by splitting Cohasset's town and state primary election dates that is so important that it overrides the clear democratic value of enhanced voter turnout?" And please don't try to argue that holding two separate elections, one on a Saturday in May, will somehow encourage more voter turnout. And really please don't suggest that we the voters are not capable of voting in town elections and state primaries on the same day. Nor that the prospective candidates need more time to get signatures; we are a small town and we know better.

Combining our town elections with the state primary elections on April 30 will save Cohasset money, always a good thing for fiscally prudent town management. And combining the town elections with the state primary elections on April 30 will increase voter turnout and further validate whatever the results, always a good thing in a Democracy.

Volume 368-
Report No. 13
March 8, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

ACTION ON LOCAL HOME RULE BILLS (H 2015)

House 29-126, rejected a new rule requiring all late-filed home rule bills to be reported out of committee for action by the full Legislature within 45 days. Home rule petitions are proposed laws that have already been approved by a local city or town but also require legislative approval prior to taking effect.

Supporters of the new rule said that these home rule bills are very important to cities and towns and should not be delayed.

Opponents said that all proposed bills a important and that making an exception for home rule petitions would set a bad precedent.

(A "Yes" vote is for the new 45-day rule. A "No" vote is against it.)

GIVE ALL BILLS A THUMBS UP OR DOWN (H 2015)

House 29-126, rejected a new rule that would require all bills to be given a favorable or unfavorable report by a committee. Current rules allow committees to do so but also give them other options including recommending a bill be sent to a study committee, essentially killing the measure.

Supporters of the new rule said allowing committees to recommend a study gives the committee too much power and discourages the full Legislature from voting on the bill.

Opponents said the committee cannot require, but can only recommend, that a bill be sent to a study committee. They noted the full House and Senate still have the option to agree or disagree with sending it to study.

(A "Yes" vote is for the new rule requiring a report. A "No" vote is against it.)

ALLOW 24 HOURS TO READ BUDGET AMENDMENTS (H 2015)

House 29-125, rejected a proposal increasing from 30 minutes to 24 hours the period given to legislators to read any proposed consolidated amendment to the House budget prior to debate and a vote on it. Representatives file dozens of amendments on the same general subject matter. Legislators who are interested in that subject are invited to a meeting, during budget debate, to pitch their amendment. A consolidated amendment that includes some of the individual amendments, is eventually drafted by the House leadership and brought to the floor for debate and a vote.

Supporters of the rule said these amendments are often 30 pages long and legislators are asked to vote on them while the paper is still warm from the printer or copying machine. They said that this system is anti-democratic and results in members voting blindly on something that they have not even read.

Opponents said the current 30-minute rule has worked well.

(A "Yes" vote is for the 24 hours. A "No" vote is against it.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

ON THE LEGISLATURE'S AGENDA - Thousands of pieces of legislation have been filed for consideration in the 2013-2014 Legislature. Here are ten interesting ones:

SCRATCH TICKETS (S 105) - Requires the Lottery to develop a second chance game that awards prizes for nonwinning scratch tickets, in order to encourage recycling and prevent the tickets from being littered in and around stores.

ADOPT-A-SENIOR (S 306) - Establishes a statewide Adopt-A-Senior volunteer program to assist seniors with snow removal and property or home maintenance services. Details include creation of a registry of volunteers.

BAN FORMER LEGISLATORS FROM LOBBYING FOR THREE YEARS (S 1505) - Increases from one year to three years after leaving their jobs, the "cooling off" period that former state employees and former elected officials, including legislators, must wait before going into the lobbying business.

SALARY CAP (S 1504) - Prohibits employees of any state authority from earning more than the governor, whose current salary is $137,315. State authorities include the MBTA, MassPort, the Health Connector and the Teacher's Retirement. The bill allows the hikes if the authority provides a 30-day public comment period and holds a public hearing.

UNDERAGE DRINKING (S 761) - Allows police officers to take into protective custody, with or without their consent, minors under 21 who have consumed alcohol.

FLAGS AT HALF MAST (S 1561) - Requires the state flag to be flown at half mast following the death of a police officer or firefighter killed in the line of duty.

PRISONERS PAY $2 PER DAY (S 1173) - Requires non-indigent prisoners to pay the state $2 per day to defray the costs of their incarceration.

SEX CHANGE (S 813) - Prohibits state funds from being used to pay for sex change surgery, laser hair removal or hormone replacement therapy for any inmates in the prison system.

PARKING ON A HILL (S 949) - Allows cities and towns to prohibit drivers from parking their vehicles on an incline unless they turn their front wheels diagonally against the curb in order to prevent the vehicle from rolling down. The proposal imposes up to a $300 fine on violators.

ABOLISH $25 FEE TO APPEAL SPEEDING AND TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS (S 713) - Modifies a current law that imposes a $25 fee on anyone who challenges a non-criminal traffic violation in court. The bill would waive the fee if the driver is found not guilty.

Candidate statements

Each candidate has had the opportunity to issue a statement on why he or she is running in the Town Election. These statements have not been previously published.

• Russ Bonetti: Bonetti currently chairs the Community Preservation Committee as a citizen at large. He is also a former member of the Government Island Study Committee; former chair of the Hagerty Property Committee that developed Mariners Park at the Town launch on Parker Ave.; and former member of the Harbor Health Committee where he helped designate the waters off the coast as a no-discharge zone. He has lived in Cohasset for 28 years and said that he religiously attends and participates in Town Meeting. Bonetti said of his decision to run for selectmen, "I believe that the job of a Selectman is to listen to the voice of the townspeople, and to do the best you can to see that their view is respected. I also feel that a Selectman should listen to the advice of the various boards in Town, to listen to their opinion and not try to influence their decisions in any way. I have utmost respect for Town Meeting votes and will carry out the will of Town Meetings whether I personally agree with that vote or not. Far too many townspeople, committees, and departments feel their voices are either not heard, or are ignored. This has to change, and if elected I will do everything I can to see that they are heard and respected. I will not shy away from voting on any issue because it may be controversial to some."

• Teresa Polhemus: Polhemus has served as a library trustee for three years. "I believe, as I'm sure most residents of Cohasset believe, that the Paul Pratt Memorial Library is one of the jewels of Cohasset, and for that reason I am running for reelection of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Board of Trustees. The Library has fantastic programs for residents of all ages, from children's programs, to the Homework Center, to the Sunday Author talks and computer literacy programs. I want to keep the Library open and accessible for all residents of Cohasset and am happy we were able to reinstate Sunday hours a year ago. The popularity of e-books and online services provides libraries with an opportunity to evolve with the changing times. We need to continue to meet the challenges that new technology presents, while understanding that public monies will continue to be limited. I think this is a critical time to help steward the Paul Pratt Memorial Library as it charts its course for the future. I hope you will support me in my reelection bid and continue to keep our Library strong."

• James Sandell: Sandell has been a Cohasset resident – and library supporter – for 40 years. As an architect, he has been appointed by several town boards over the years to work on various projects; he was architect for the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission, School Facilities Commission for the Osgood School, Town Hall restoration feasibility study (2008), and was appointed by the selectmen for the Design Review Board, among others. He believes that his experience as an architect will be an asset to the Board of Trustees. "As a practicing architect, I would be able to bring focus to any issues that are related to physical planning and use of the Library's spaces as well as any needed problem solving concerning the building itself; an ongoing concern. I would welcome this opportunity to be a part of this important organization," Sandell said. "I see one of the Trustees' fundamental responsibilities is to garner community support for this important institution. The other half of this equation is to ensure that the Library continues to provide a center for learning and enjoyment for members of the community of all ages. It is a symbiotic relationship."

• Elizabeth Kirkpatrick: "I am eager for the opportunity to continue serving on the Board of Health. As an environmental professional, I believe my knowledge and experience will benefit our community and contribute to a healthy and safe environment for our families."

• Virginia Najmi: Najmi currently serves on the Housing Authority, having been appointed by the Board of Selectmen in July 2012 to replace a former member. In her several months on the board, Najmi said, "I have taken an active role in educating myself on the State laws and administration of affordable housing. I have also acted as a liaison to the Harborview Residents Association, working with them to produce an updated Resident's Guide and an upcoming residents survey of physical facilities. My professional career included twenty-plus years in museums, working closely with boards of trustees. I specialized in long-range planning and coordinating planning for a variety of building and renovation projects, wrote numerous successful grants and also served as a development officer raising additional funds. One of my goals as a Board member is to help articulate a detailed long-range plan for affordable housing in Cohasset that can be used as a guide for achieving goals effectively. It could also help to increase public awareness of the evolving needs of the elderly, disabled and lower-income members of our community. When addressing the issue of affordable housing, I often think about the smaller town I grew up in. We may not know each other as well anymore, but I do believe the quality of life here still depends on looking out for each and every one of us. Affordable housing continues to be a very basic need for many in Cohasset and I am anxious to continue serving toward this end."

• Charles Samuelson: An incumbent Planning Board member, Samuelson said that his "general 'philosophy' is that stability, predictability and consistency are paramount when being applied to applications by developers and also when considering changes to the Zoning Bylaws. Changes should always be based on demonstrated long-term need and should be carefully considered. Cohasset is unique in that it is small in area and population, with a primarily residential tax base and with mostly small parcels that pre-exist zoning. We cannot always look to our neighboring communities or other, larger communities for examples of what is 'good for Cohasset' or what Cohasset can afford. We always need to keep in mind maintaining the 'character' of the town while protecting the rights of developers, investors and property owners," said Samuelson.

"The past few years have been punctuated by some significant events: the wind turbines, the Stop & Shop gas station, the development of the 'Cedermere' Beechwood property and the opening of Avalon to name a few. One of the challenges we face is Route 3A. This State Highway has a couple of primary and perhaps conflicting uses: local traffic taking advantage of local shops and businesses as well as commuter traffic from towns to our south. I hope we can find a way to accommodate both in a safe and effective way by starting out with a 'vision' of what the Town wants this corridor to be long term."

The bottom line for Samuelson: "I live here and choose to participate in town government because of what Cohasset is today and hope going forward we do what we can to keep Cohasset the small, beautiful, seaside town that it is."

BOYS BASKETBALL

Warriors to the end

Skippers battle to the final buzzer

By Tom Hinkley
The Patriot Ledger

Even in Saturday's 67-61 defeat at the hands of Bishop Connolly, the Cohasset boys basketball team displayed the type of championship character that carried it all the way to the Div. 4 South Sectional final.

Trailing by as many as 13 points in the third quarter, Cohasset (20-5) rallied behind its two senior captains, Christian Davis and Shane Haggerty, and mounted a furious comeback. The Skippers took a 58-57 lead with 1:38 left to play on a Davis three-pointer, but Bishop Connolly prevailed down the stretch with some clutch three-throw shooting.

"Bishop Connolly was hot early and hit their first six shots," said Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero, "but how 'bout the spunk and the stamina on my team? We just don't give up."

"I thought we were physically overmatched, but we kept hanging in there. That's what we do."

The loss denied Cohasset its second trip to the TD Garden in three years, and although the season may have ended in disappointment, Ruggiero was quick to call this year one of his most gratifying.

"I just told the boys that I've been coaching a lot of teams, and I'm not quite sure if I can remember a group of young men that I've felt so happy about seeing every single day when I came to practice," he said.

As successful as the season may have been for Ruggiero on the court, the season proved to be even more therapeutic for him off of it. He missed last season's playoffs after nearly losing his life in a car accident on the eve of the postseason.

"They were just a joy," Ruggiero said of his players. "They showed me that good things happen in life after I got the short end of the stick with the injury that I sustained. I'm just really excited for the success that they had and that I was able to be a part of that. I couldn't be happier about the success we had together, and I couldn't be sadder about the fact that the end result today just didn't come in our favor."

The bulk of Cohasset's roster (11 of 13 players) will return next season, but the two that are leaving – Haggerty and Davis – are huge pieces.

Cohasset is fast becoming a hotbed for incredible lacrosse talent due to our legacy of strong youth and high school programs. Haggerty was Mr. Everything, scoring 1,000 career points as a four-year starter, and Davis provided great leadership and poise at point guard.

Haggerty closed out his career with a 20-point performance against Bishop Connolly, and Davis finished by having the game of his life – 24 points on five three-pointers.

"Shane Haggerty and Christian Davis have been on the varsity for four years," Ruggiero said. "They lived through the only losing season we've had when we were rebuilding. Shane has been a starter for four years and is a 1,000-point scorer, and Christian is a spunky guy who just works at it. He's a ball of energy.

MARATHON WOMAN

Running for a cause

Cohasset resident running for cancer research

On April 15, Heather Reardon from Cohasset, Mass., will be running in the 117th Boston Marathon® to help conquer cancer as a member of the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge team.

Reardon, along with more than 550 Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge teammates from across the United States and around the world, will run Massachusetts' historic marathon route from Hopkinton to Boston with a goal to raise $4.6 million for cancer research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

One-hundred-percent of the funds raised benefit Dana-Farber's Claudia Adams Barr Program in Innovative Basic Cancer Research, which supports cornerstone science research in its earliest stages, providing researchers with critical resources to test their leading-edge ideas. Findings from Barr program research can provide novel clinical insights as well as the results necessary to seek additional federal funding.

Since its inception in 1990, the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge has raised more than $56 million for the Barr Program. Dana-Farber Trustees J. Wayne and Delores Barr Weaver founded the Barr Program in 1987 to honor Mrs. Weaver's mother, Claudia Adams Barr, who lost her battle with cancer in 1957.

In 1990, Dana-Farber was among the first charity organizations to be recognized by the Boston Athletic Association (B.A.A), which organizes the Boston Marathon. The Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge team offers its members extensive fundraising support, training guidance from Jack Fultz, the 1976 Boston Marathon men's champion, plus team training runs, and volunteer opportunities for non-runners. Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge runners who are not time-qualified for the Boston Marathon receive an invitational entry into the race.

Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge team members must meet one of the following fundraising commitments:

Invitational runners, runners who receive an entry from Dana-Farber have a fundraising commitment of $4,000.

Own entry runners, runners who have joined the DFMC after obtaining their own race entry have a fundraising commitment of $3,500.

To contribute to the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge, go online to www.RunDFMC.org or contact the Dana-Farber Running Programs office at (617) 632-1970 or dfmc@dfci.harvard.edu. Follow the DFMC on Facebook: www.facebook/marathonchallenge.

The Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge is one of many ways runners can support the life-saving mission of Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Participants can run on the official Dana-Farber team in the Boston Marathon, the Falmouth Road Race, and the B.A.A Half Marathon, or run in any race, of any distance, in any city, while raising funds for Dana-Farber and the Jimmy Fund. For more information visit RunDanaFarber.org.

About Dana-Farber Cancer Institute:

The puppet stars of "Avenue Q" pose for a group portrait during dress rehearsal at Cohasset Town Hall.

Q is for 'Quirky'

The Broadway musical "Avenue Q" may feature Sesame Street-like characters, but it's not your kid's puppet show. Adults love "Avenue Q," but as to whether or not it's appropriate for children— that's a little "fuzzy."

While the show uses puppets, the story is about real life: sex, drinking, surfing the web. "Avenue Q" tells the story of a recent college grad named Princeton who moves into a shabby New York apartment all the way out on Avenue Q. There, he meets a colorful cast of characters including Kate, the girl next door; Lucy, not the girl next door; Trekkie; and Rod the Republican.

"Avenue Q" won big at the 2004 Tony Awards, claiming the Tony "Triple Crown" for Best Musical, Best Book and Best Original Score.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is performing "Avenue Q" from March 8 through March 23 at the historic Town Hall Theater. The show features a cast of CDC veterans and newcomers alike hails from across the Boston area, and features puppetry training by Kevin Noonchester of the Avenue Q Puppet Camp in L.A.

"Nicky," with help from humans Mike Nakashima and Greg Webber, talks with Gary Coleman, played by Sonya Joyner.

"Although we have made good strides recently with our new ethics law and the Open Checkbook initiative we are always looking to improve. I think an area of improvement would be greater use of social media," he said.

Bradley said while the legislature is exempt from state public records and open meeting laws, some requirements of those laws do apply to them. "Our sessions are open and votes are public, usually reported weekly in this paper, our finance reports are on line and anyone can pull our ethics reports to see what we have for mortgages and other debts as well as savings," he said.

Bradley thinks it is appropriate for legislators to meet in private caucuses if there's a majority of members present. "It is important for us to be able to discuss some things privately since any decisions we may reach will ultimately have to be debated and voted on publicly," he said.

He explained that all committees' hearings start off open to the public but on occasion for various reasons some are subsequently closed.

"This could be a situation where a young crime victim is proposing stronger sentencing and would like to explain what happened to him or her but would rather do it without a packed hearing room," Bradley said.

Senate President Therese Murray, D-Plymouth, pointed to transparency initiatives enacted under her leadership.

The Senate unanimously passed an amendment to the Senate Rules in January that requires the result of all roll-call votes taken by the Senate be made available on the Massachusetts Legislature website within 48 hours after a vote is taken, Murray said in a statement for this story. While all roll calls are currently published on the Legislature website in the Senate Journals, this change will provide constituents with a more convenient and timely way of knowing how their senators voted and on what issues. This measure will go into effect by May 1.

In December 2011, in a joint venture with the House, the treasurer and the administration, the Senate launched a comprehensive online checkbook called Open Checkbook as a result of online transparency requirements the Legislature included in the state budget, Murray said. Open Checkbook allows users to monitor and review spending from many different departments and agencies, including the Legislature. Vendor details are updated every night, and the payroll and pension figures are updated every two weeks and every month, respectively.

While there have been advances made in terms of accessibility of information online, local representatives expressed concern with some public business still being done behind closed doors.

"The Massachusetts legislative body should have to comply with transparency guidelines the same as local communities and other government entities," said State Senator Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth. "There are important checks and balances that we just don't have and we should."

As one of four Republican state senators who face an overwhelming majority of 36 Democrats, Hedlund said that "one party rule" is only one cause of the problem. Much of the deliberating done by members occurs in committee meetings behind closed doors.

"Debate should take place openly where everyone can know what thinking process is behind decisions that are made," Hedlund said.

This year the opening business of the current legislative session was to address transparency issues according to Hedlund. Republican members urged more openness during deliberations, including posting roll call votes online within 24 hours of their occurrence. "You would think in this era of instant messaging and a 24-hour news cycle, that would have been an easy decision to make," he said.

At a glance

Transparency laws are meant to make government officials' actions and decisions open to the public to hold leaders accountable and ensure that citizens can play an active role in the democratic process.

Sunshine Week is an annual, nationwide initiative by news media and transparency advocates to highlight the importance of open government.

GateHouse Media newspapers and Wicked Local are participating this year with a look at transparency in the Massachusetts Legislature.

What is the Public Records Law?

State law says every record made or received by a government entity or employee is assumed to be public, available for anyone to view or copy, says a guide by the Massachusetts secretary of state's office.

There are exceptions – for example, personnel and medical files are not public records.

The public can request records from a state or local agency, whose records custodian must respond within 10 days. The custodian may charge a "reasonable" fee for searching, redacting, copying and refiling a record, the law says. Denials may be appealed to the state supervisor of records.

What is the Open Meeting Law?

State law requires meetings of government bodies to be open to the public, usually with at least 48 hours advance notice, according to the attorney general's office.

This includes city councils, boards of selectmen, school committees and most other local boards. It does not include individual public officials or employees, such as a mayor or a police chief, nor the state Legislature and judiciary.

Boards may discuss certain topics in private executive sessions. An employee's character, contract negotiations, litigation strategy or the potential purchase of property can be discussed in private, for example.

Such recommendations were defeated soundly, Hedlund said.

According to Hedlund, who has served 11 terms, the problem has not always been as serious as it is today. During his time in the senate he said he has seen times when transparency has improved and people had more access to the actions of the legislators. He said even the inclusion of televisions in the Senate has gone through various phases. Television was introduced in the senate several years ago, was removed and is now back.

According to a state comparison survey completed by the United States Public Interest Research Group in 2012, Massachusetts is considered one of seven leading states and the only state in New England that has established a user-friendly transparency website with comprehensive information on government expenditures, Murray said. According to the same report, Open Checkbook has saved $3 million in Massachusetts by eliminating paper, postage and printing costs associated with information requests by state agencies and paperwork from vendors and has increased the number of competing bidders for public projects.

In 2010, the Senate and the House jointly overhauled the state legislative website to provide easier access to bill information and a clearer window into state government for constituents and students, Murray said. The website provides detailed information about legislation, the state budget, biographical information for each legislator, upcoming State House events, legislative sessions and committee hearings. The new website also features access to Senate and House webcasts and provides an enhanced mobile site (www.malegislature.gov/).

LEGISLATURE

exempt from state public records and open meeting laws.

This means legislative committees can deliberate and vote on whether to advance legislation in secret, said Robert Ambrogi, an attorney and executive director of the Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Association.

Legislators also can meet behind closed doors in caucuses. That happened this winter, when at least 100 lawmakers gathered in a private meeting with advocates to discuss gun control, according to published reports.

"When any government body is doing the work of the public, closing the doors should be the extreme exception. It should not be the rule," Ambrogi said. "In the Legislature, it's often the other way around."

Legislation filed by state Rep. Peter Kocot, D-Northampton, would require lawmakers to put themselves under the microscope when it comes to transparency. Among other things, the bill would set up a special commission of state representatives and senators to examine "the practicability of applying the provisions of the public records and open meetings laws" to the Legislature.

The commission also would examine lawmakers' practices on making available to the public everything from records of committee votes to scheduling and notices of legislative hearings and sessions.

Common Cause of Massachusetts, the Newspaper Publishers Association and the American Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts helped craft the bill, though Ambrogi said he would have liked the commission to include people other than lawmakers.

Gavi Wolfe, legislative counsel for the ACLU's state branch, said applying the public records and open meetings laws in their entirety to the Legislature isn't necessarily the answer. He said he just wants both chambers to examine transparency seriously.

While the Legislature offers many details about bills online, transparency advocates want a better understanding of the lawmaking process.

"The process of legislating – the deliberative process, the committee process, the policy considerations that the Legislature is weighing – I'd like to see that become as public as possible, so people can understand and get involved in the business of policymaking in Massachusetts," Wolfe said.

While committees hold public hearings on all legislation, advocates complained they sometimes happen with short notice or late changes in schedule. Some committees have only a handful of members present and review a large number of bills with limited opportunity to discuss them in depth, critics said. After that, it can be hard to find out why a committee decides to advance a bill for a full vote of the chamber or to send it to a study committee, effectively killing it.

"The problem comes down to just not knowing the thought process to what the Legislature's doing," Ambrogi said.

Critics want more committee deliberations open or at least a record of a committee's thinking on the bills it reviews. That especially goes for conference committees, which hammer out differences in major legislation passed by both houses.

Pam Wilmot, executive director of Common Cause, also called for a record of how committee members voted to be posted online.

"You call and ask for the vote and they don't give it to you," she said.

Advocates said they recognize needs for some exceptions.

Wilmot said redacting private information from documents released to the public could be challenging for legislative offices with limited staff, for example.

Lawmakers also should be able to deal with issues of public safety or security, negotiations or other sensitive matters in private, Ambrogi said.

"I think that there is room, obviously, for executive session and closed-door sessions," he said. "But there needs to be more transparency throughout the process."

COMMENTARY

Let the sun shine in on Beacon Hill

PETER J. CARUSO SR.

In 1913, U.S. Supreme Court Justice and Massachusetts native Louis D. Brandeis proposed, "If the broad light of day could be let in upon men's action, it would purify them as the sun disinfects."

Massachusetts needs a good cleaning:

Massachusetts has 10 Exceptions to its "open" meeting law.

Massachusetts has 20 exemptions to its "public" records law.

Massachusetts has secret sessions to screen "public" employees.

Massachusetts has secret sessions to settle "public" lawsuits.

Massachusetts has impounded court cases of sex offenders (and others).

Massachusetts has a governor and Legislature with secret records.

Today, 100 years after Justice Brandeis's celebrated observation was made, transparency is a code word. School committees meet in secret to evaluate teachers. "Screening" committees interview superintendents. Selectmen meet in secret with town lawyers to settle public claims to be paid with public funds — but the public never knows for how much or for what because of a secret agreement. Some police departments keep two sets of logs on crimes and arrests. All of the above practices can be broken and the secrets come to light, but only if the people know enough to challenge these tactics and, more important, that they happened.

In 1851 by statute "all county, city, and town records and files shall be open to public inspection." Try that today. Better reach into your pocket and still wait ten days – it's the law.

In 1973, the Legislature enacted nine exemptions. Today, there are 20 reasons to deny access. But again, the governor and lawmakers are exempt from the public's seeing their records created with taxpayer funds.

It's OK in Massachusetts to violate the Open Meeting Law or Public Records Law, or keep the public and the media out of meetings and away from public records. It's OK because the penalty is a slap on the wrist.

Take a violating public body to court and you pay. If anyone believes that buried in the law are remedies, penalties, and court reimbursements to the aggrieved party, try and get them. In some states, violating the public's trust is a misdemeanor; in Massachusetts it's a ruler on a violator's knuckles ... maybe.

The public needs to know what public officials are doing, how they spend our money, what happens in secret sessions...

The media are especially affected by all of this. The public needs to know what public officials are doing, how they spend our money, what happens in secret sessions, and why is a court case impounded – for life. The press fights for these rights under the First Amendment, "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of the press..." No law means no law. Open means open meetings, and public means public records.

As we celebrate Sunshine Week, remembering the remedy Justice Brandeis proposed, we need to throw open the doors to our elected lawmakers on Beacon Hill and demand that they shed light where there is darkness, sunshine where there are shadows, and teeth to laws that allow, and actually promote, secrecy in our society.

I know this. I get the calls from citizens and the media who have been shut out. Remember the secrecy behind Willie Horton, the court action to open the Red Sox/Yankee bullpen brawl, motion to unearth superintendent "finalists," the local court battle to obtain a search warrant – all of these required a media ready and willing to fight to let the sun shine in.

Massachusetts needs a good dose of sunshine to cleanse the Open Meeting and Public Records Laws to a purity of a bright Cape Cod summer's day.

Let this light first shine on Beacon Hill.

How to hire cleaning help

Here are some common spring cleaning and maintenance tasks that you might hire a professional to do — and some guidance for what these jobs should entail and cost.

Air duct cleaning/HVAC maintenance: Before you hire someone to clean your air ducts and service your HVAC systems, check their credentials with a credible organization like NADCA, the HVAC Inspection, Maintenance & Restoration Association. A cleaning/maintenance inspection should include examination and cleaning of ductwork, including supply and air return ducts; cleaning of all supply registers, return-air grilles and diffusers; cleaning of supply and return-air plenums; and maintenance on various parts of the system. A typical cleaning should cost between $450 and $1,000 per system, depending on the services rendered, the size of the system, how easily accessible it is and how dirty it is, according to NADCA.

Window-washing: A typical window cleaning should include the inside and outside of all windows in the home, removal and cleaning of screens, and cleaning of all sills and tracks (which means they must open every window to fully clean it). You should expect to pay between $2 to $7 per pane, according to CostHelper.com.

Carpet cleaning: Typically, the cost of carpet cleaning is about 25 cents to 35 cents per square foot, according to The Carpet and Rug Institute.

DID YOU KNOW ...

Price ranges for homes

Prudential Real Estate has introduced a house pricing concept called Value Range Marketing. Originating in Australia, this method has the real estate agent decide a range that takes into consideration the price the seller wants, what the house is worth and what potential buyers might offer, such as a price range of $149,000 to $169,000.

This method is meant to bring in more prospective buyers, especially ones who may not be willing to pay the asking price but could afford to still pay something within the house's price range.

DECORATING TIP

Picture frames with pizzazz

Picture frames are a great way to display family portraits and your favorite memories while adding a little style to a blank wall. Repurpose old frames you have lying around the house to create a gallery wall with some pizzazz.

With a few coats of spray paint, you can take frames from mismatched to mesmerizing.

Spruce them up a bit more by using patterned papers as mats.

Reuse recycle remember

Non-plastic grocery bags are great — when you remember to use them

By Jeff Strickler
Scripps Howard News Service

Patrick Swanson has launched a covert operation to rid his house of reusable shopping bags that his wife keeps bringing home from the grocery store. He brings a bag over to a friend's house and, when no one is looking, "forgets" it there.

"The idea of the reusable bag has merit, but my opinion is that the majority of people forget to reuse them," the St. Paul, Minn., resident said. As a result, "they pile up. ... We never reuse them. In fact, I think we have more 'reusable' bags in our closet than the old paper and plastic kind."

Swanson is far from alone in wondering if reusable bags sound better in theory than in practice. There's an increasing pushback against the bags, with critics arguing that when you factor in the way the bags are used — or, in this case, not used — they actually have a larger carbon footprint than the plastic variety.

But members of the green movement still staunchly believe in them, arguing that the cloth versions keep landfills free of millions of plastic bags, which can take up to 1,000 years to decompose.

Beyond the grocery store

Even among naysayers, support for reusable bags continues to grow: 39 percent of grocery shoppers own them, according to a recent study by McOrr Research.

But are shoppers using the bags enough to make them worthwhile? The UK Environment Agency recently concluded that a cotton bag has to be used 131 times to equal the environmental impact of producing one plastic bag.

"Yes, there's energy embedded in the making of those bags," conceded Madalyn Cicoi, a waste-prevention and recycling specialist for the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency. "The goal is, once you get the bag made, to get as many uses out of it as you can."

Of course, they don't help the environment if they're piling up in a closet.

Some people who end up with a stockpile of bags find alternative uses: stashing Christmas decorations in them, using them to organize hobby gear or turning them into overnight bags.

"That's a big issue ... getting people to remember to put the bags back in their cars ... and then remembering to bring the bags into the store with them. Just having the bags isn't enough. People aren't going to use them if they're not convenient."

Nancy Lo, waste reduction and recycling for the Hennepin County (Minn.)

Making a habit

But lapses of memory hamper the bags' use.

"That's a big issue for us, getting people to remember to put the bags back in their cars after they unpack their food at home and then remembering to bring the bags into the store with them," said Nancy Lo, who works on waste reduction and recycling for the Hennepin County (Minn.) Department of Environmental Services. "Just having the bags isn't enough. People aren't going to use them if they're not convenient."

Some grocery stores are posting reminder signs in the parking lot and on their doors. Hennepin County, for example, is making available free "Don't forget the bags!" window clings.

"I have a sticker in my car to remind me to bring reusable bags into the store, because I would often forget," said Mia Olson of Bloomington. "But eventually it becomes habit-forming."

Sometimes, however, even the best intentions go awry. Laura Toledo of Minneapolis admitted that even though she and her husband try to keep bags in the trunk of their car and put a couple of spare ones on a hook by the kitchen door, they still occasionally arrive at the checkout stand empty-handed.

Rather than buy even more bags, they have a backup plan.

"If we do forget our bags, we'll take plastic at the store and reuse them at home," she said. "We never throw them away right when we get home. We're trying to save the environment in as many ways as possible, even small ones like this."

Faucet technology worth gushing over

ROSEMARY SANDEZ FRIEDMANN

A few weeks ago I wrote that I was in the market for a new kitchen faucet and that the search was on for the best I could find. Also mentioned was that I'd report my findings. Well, I am now the proud owner of a Delta Touch2O Technology kitchen faucet. What is that technology? Read on.

First of all, it is great fun, but let's talk about what it does. The faucet has a conventional on/off handle. But the Touch2O Technology allows you to touch the faucet anywhere for it to turn on, then touch the faucet anywhere for it to turn off. And I do mean "anywhere." You can touch the handle, you can touch the base, you can touch the end, you can touch anywhere in between and the water starts to flow. And your touch can be very, very soft — it works. Your touch can be strong — it works. Same goes for turning the faucet off. You adjust the water flow by adjusting the on/off handle just as you would without the Touch2O Technology. You adjust the temperature of the water by adjusting the on/off handle, also.

You know how your smartphone responds to your touch? The Touch2O faucet does the same. It has a water-saver shutoff feature, too: If you should happen to leave the faucet on for four minutes, it automatically shuts off.

The advertisements show how the faucet works when you have messy hands. But until I actually experienced it, I didn't realize how great the touch feature was. Messy hands? Use the back of your hand or your elbow or forearm to turn the water on. In addition to being a handy thing, it also helps prevent the spread of dirt and cross contamination.

Another bonus: Unlike infrared sensors, outside factors such as lighting conditions, skin and clothing color, and mirrors or reflections do not interfere with the sensing capability. You don't have to worry that you are just placing something in the sink and the water will turn on without you wanting it to.

I am very happy with my new toy. Did I mention that it was fun to use?

Cohasset equestrienne at the top of her field

Kendall Fiori, a senior at Cohasset High School, has had an outstanding year with her appaloosa mare, Sassy Story. Their journey together began during February vacation 2012 when Kendall and her mom, Arlene, took a road trip to Republic, Ohio to the Rusty Miller Show Horse Stables. It was there that they fell in love with Sassy and two weeks later Sassy was on a trailer heading to Marshfield, Mass. to join the their barn family.

Soon thereafter, Sassy and Kendall began their journey together. Kendall belongs to the ApHC (Appaloosa Horse Club) where they show English, Western, saddle seat, and bareback in all pleasure and equitation classes. They also show Hunter in Hand, Showmanship and Trail classes together. Kendall has been training at Peak Performance Equestrian Center for the past 6 years, with owner and trainer Alexandra Peak and trainer Jennifer Adams.

The year has been full of accomplishments for the Cohasset equestrienne and Sassy, including many championship awards in a range of shows and classes including three year-end challenge trophies from the South Shore Horsemen's Council: "The Lopenator" Youth All-Around Challenge Trophy, for accumulating the most points as a horse and rider team; "My Kinda Cowboy Challenge Trophy" for accumulating the most points in the Appaloosa Division; and "The Joy Cup Challenge Trophy" awarded for accumulating the most points in Junior Showmanship. Kendall also was awarded the "Over All High Point Pleasure Ring Trophy," awarded to an individual for accumulating the most points for the 2012 show season.

In July 2012, Kendall and Sassy went to the 65th Appaloosa Nationals Youth World Championship Show in Tulsa, Okla. where Kendall received two "Top Ten World Champion" titles competing in classes with over 50 other exhibitors from all over the world in her age group, 16-18.

On March 2nd, Kendall attended the Massachusetts Horsemen's Council awards banquet where she was awarded 4 more Champion year-end awards! Looking forward to graduation on June 8, Kendall is planning on traveling to Ft. Worth, Texas in July to the Appaloosa Youth Worlds, and doing the ApHC circuit and SSHC shows again this year.

COHASSET RECREATION

Summer Xtreme heats up summer fun

Program is for students in grades 6-9

Calling all thrill seekers, artists, social butter?ies, athletes and laid back boys and girls to sign up for the Summer Xtreme Program. Cohasset Recreation is pleased to once again offer this program to those entering grades 6-9 in the fall of 2013. In the past students have come not only from Cohasset but also Hingham, Hull, Marsh?eld, Norwell and Scituate.

"We are excited about the continued collaboration and strengthening of cooperation between all of our neighboring towns," says Ted Carroll, Cohasset's Recreation Director.

Most traditional town programs are geared towards the younger set, the solution is Summer Xtreme, offering students entering grades 6 through 9 an opportunity to stay active and have fun via ?eld trip destinations around the region, ranging from theme parks and paintball ?elds to adventurous outings like kayaking on Lake Cochituate which abuts Framingham, Natick, and Wayland and features a small tunnel that leads the young kayakers underneath the Mass. Pike.

This Summer's overnight week includes visits to Canobie Lake Park and Water Country. At Summer Xtreme the groups are kept small so that counselors can get to know each student and ensure the best possible experience

The program meets four days a week, Monday through Thursday at Cohasset High School, with ?eld trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays (except where noted.) On Mondays and Wednesdays the group of approximately 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders, and social activities. The program is supervised by experienced Recreation Department counselors and directors. Fee of $113 a week includes a Summer Xtreme shirt and bag. "Summer Xtreme offers the bests of both worlds. It provides kids the independence they are looking for while hanging out with new and old friends from different towns. Most importantly, it does so in a fun and safe atmosphere," according to Carroll.

Summer Xtreme Program Director Michael Curtin has been a middle school teacher at Quincy's Atlantic Middle School for 20 years where he has taught math, science and technology. Curtin also worked for Quincy Recreation for that same amount of time, overseeing after school and gym programs. He has been a sports specialist during summer recreation in Quincy and Co-recreational director for three summers at Great Harbors Resident Association in Falmouth where he operated the swimming pool, organized activities for adults and children and ran tournaments.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 25, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Congratulations, Lamb. This is the week to finish your project and then bask in your well-earned approval. (And if you like, you also can say "bah" to all those detractors.)

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The bold Bovine could find a new opportunity too intriguing to be ignored. But don't charge into it. Go slowly so you see how things develop as you get more involved.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might try to soften your stand on that important issue. A little more flexibility actually could get you what you're looking for. A new friend enters the picture midweek.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your inner voice is on the mark when it advises you to tackle that family problem now! The sooner you're able to come to terms with it, the better it will be for everyone.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Someone reveals important news about a longtime associate. But before you decide how to deal with this information, make sure it's reliable, and not simply self-serving.

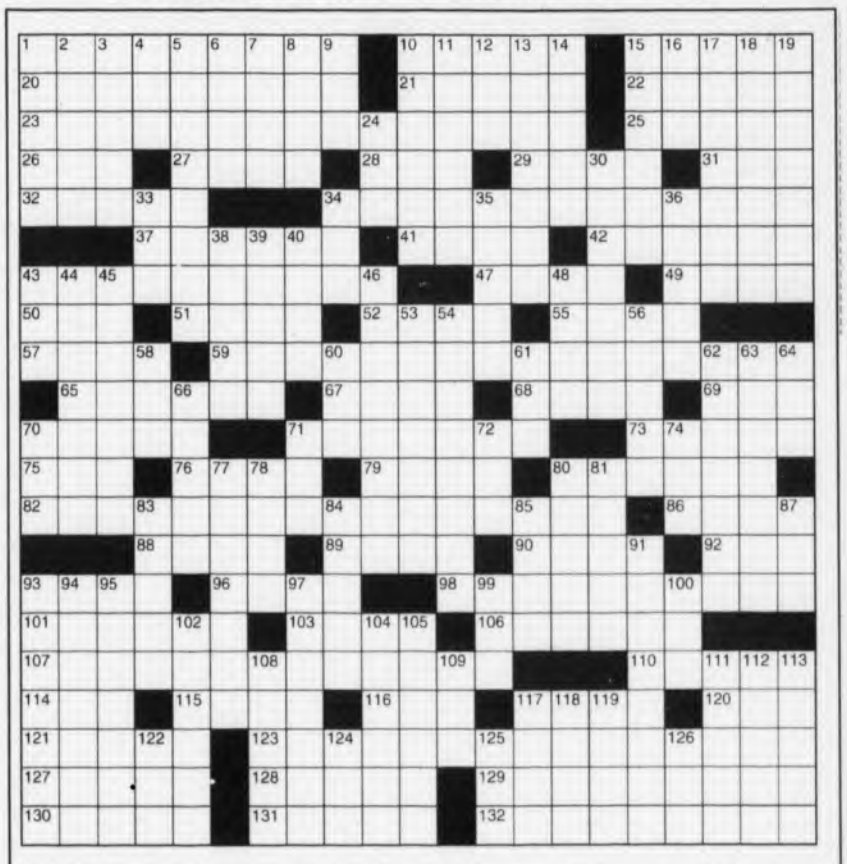
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Some intensive soul-searching early in the week can help you reach a decision by week's end that should please both you and the other person involved. Good luck.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The possibility of a career change is intriguing. Learn more about what it can offer and what it cannot. Weigh everything carefully. And ask questions.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Work is your priority this week as you try to make up for lost time. Expect help from someone who cares about you. Things take a welcome turn by the weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A health problem causes some anxiety early in the week. But prompt medical attention soon eases everyone's concerns. Enjoy an arts-filled weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) As much as you might resent it, a changing situation could require you to adjust your plans accordingly. The good news: An associate agrees to cooperate.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That old problem is finally resolved, just in time for you to take on a new work-related project. This one could be the super door-opener you've been looking for.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The early part of the week presents some difficult hurdles. But once you get over them, you can start to focus on matters that are more important to you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are respected for your honesty and your dedication to doing the right thing, no matter how difficult that might be.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Citizen of the Year

Helping to make Cohasset a better place

Philip Lehr is Citizen of the Year

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Philip Lehr smiles when he admits to not being a true Cohasset "townie."

"I was born in Weymouth not at Cohasset Hospital," says the lifelong resident with a smile.

For those who may not know, Cohasset Hospital was housed in the large, white house across from the library on Ripley Road.

A sense of humor is one of many qualities that has endeared Lehr, 58, to Cohasset – but it has been his service to the town and community that has earned him legions of friends and universal respect.

Helene Lieb describes her friend as a "role model in civic engagement."

Another friend Chris Oddleifson points out that "Cohasset is a better place for our children, parents and seniors because of his caring actions."

Whether his 50 years of involvement in scouting, serving as a youth sports coach, work with the Appalachia Service Project, or keeping Wheelwright Park shipshape – Lehr quietly goes about making a difference. For his many years of community service, Phil Lehr has been named the Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year.

A committee consisting of myself (editor Mary Ford), Deputy Police Chief William Quigley, Glenn Pratt, David Farrag and JoAnne and Woody Chittick met at the Cohasset Mariner office in downtown Hingham on a recent Sunday to pore over the 16 nominations received from dozens of individuals.

"It is really important to give back," says Lehr, adding he is deeply honored by the recognition.

A true family man, Lehr met his wife JoAnne Lehr in the most creative way. Attending classes at Northeastern University at night, Lehr would go into the university to swim before class where JoAnne was the lifeguard. "I pretended to be drowning, pulled her in and she got mad – but the rest is history," Lehr says.

Community service runs in the Lehr family. Lehr's father Arthur, known as the "Mayor of Wheelwright Park," was Citizen of the Year in 2003.

Cohasset schools launch new station

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When lightning is about to strike, Cohasset students could be the first to know.

The Cohasset Middle-High School recently installed a brand new, state-of-the-art weather station that not only helps the schools and community plan sports and activities in advance, but also comes with an educational component for students.

The WeatherBug weather station boasts a high-definition camera, lightning sensor and web-based software. WeatherBug operates the largest weather observing and lightning network, including neighborhood-level weather stations located at over 8,000 schools, public buildings and recreational locations throughout the country that provide live weather data around the clock.

The WeatherBug Schools Program supports science, technology and math curriculum in schools around the nation. Cohasset middle and high school students are already using the system, which launched last month, in classes from science to statistics.

Athletic Director Ron Ford hosted an open house on Monday, March 18 to introduce the weather station to the public and press. Joining him in a tour around the building to see how the station works was WBZ Channel 4 meteorologist Joe Joyce, a Cohasset resident.

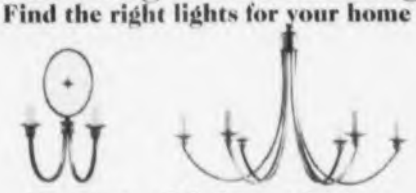
WBZ is now a media partner for Cohasset's weather station. When Cohasset implemented the new weather station, it became part of the WeatherBug station network, a total of 50 stations, according to Joyce. WBZ can now show Cohasset's station as part in the channel's weather reports.

"It's a useful tool to show the current conditions in our area," said Joyce. The meteorologist also said that of all the other WeatherBug stations, Cohasset schools have one of the best cameras.

Ford said that bringing the WeatherBug Schools Program to Cohasset was a collaborative effort between the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF), the project's primary donor, along with the South Shore Playhouse Associates (the Music Circus), Cohasset Soccer Club and Cohasset Youth Lacrosse.



Ford explained how the new weather station helps the community better plan activities and events. "We've always had issues with severe weather and lightning on the fields... On the weekends, with soccer or lacrosse, the biggest issue is [that] lightning and thunderstorms could come in, and no one is clearing the fields... The biggest piece is safety."

The WeatherBug station, which is mounted on the school roof overlooking the athletic field with a video monitor in the lobby, can tell whenever lightning is within a six-mile radius, said Ford, making it easier to clear the fields before lightning strikes the area.

A Great Time to Be at UMass Boston

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

On a gray, windy, and rainy day last month, I saw signs of spring at the University of Massachusetts Boston, as elected officials, UMass President Robert Caret, members of the Board of Trustees, and our campus community joined me to break ground on the newest state-of-the-art academic building to be constructed on our campus.

When it is completed in 2015, this new building will house teaching laboratories, studio space and recital venues for the fine and performing arts, a theater, study and lounge areas, a café, and 26 classrooms. The building will follow the opening in fall 2014 of a new Integrated Sciences Complex, which will provide classroom, laboratory, and research space for our students and faculty.

What these buildings mean to our community is nothing less than the fulfillment of a promise we made to our students, faculty, and staff to provide them with facilities that match their talent and potential. They are steel-and-concrete symbols of our continuing growth and ever-increasing excellence.

Now is a wonderful time to join the community of nearly 16,000 students and more than 1,000 faculty members at UMass Boston.

If you're planning for college, or know someone who is, I'd like to remind you that UMass Boston's application deadline for new freshmen is April 1. (The deadline for transfer students, excluding some programs, is June 15.) And if you've applied and been accepted already—congratulations!—our annual Welcome Day for accepted students will be held on April 6 at our Campus Center.

Our students choose from among 67 bachelor's programs and 15 undergraduate certificate programs, 44 master's and 19 doctoral degrees, and 41 graduate certificate programs. They finance their education with the $141 million in financial aid that we award each year, including $48 million in waivers and grants, and the recently implemented Boston City Scholarship, which awards $1,000 each year to Boston Public Schools graduates who achieved a 3.0 GPA or higher in high school and maintain it at UMass Boston.

And to build their own bright futures, they take advantage of our stellar faculty, our small classes, the opportunities we provide for internships and hands-on research, our rapid development, and our commitment to diversity and access.

I hope you will become part of the buzz on campus. To learn more about applying to UMass Boston, visit umb.edu/admissions or call us at 617.287.6000.

Best day of your life: Winning Mr. Skipper.

Best vacation: Going to the British Isles with the school.

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite holiday: Mr. Skipper.

Favorite junk food (or meal): Any type of Chinese food.

Best book (or magazine): "The Great Gatsby."

Best movie (or actor): "Aladdin."

Best TV show: "Lost."

Best music, group, or artist: Whoever is Aladdin.

Pet peeve: Dropping the globe I danced with in the Mr. Skipper contest.

Fun fact: I practiced that dance for 24 hours straight one day.

Goal: To perform that dance in front of the "world!"

Person you'd most like to meet: Aladdin.

Biggest worry: Dropping the globe.

Best part of Cohasset: Watching people participate in Mr. Skipper.

In keeping with tradition, the Mariner caught up the newly crowned Mr. Skipper this week, Ryan MacCarthy. Ryan's talent performance put him over the top. Dressed in white, he walked to the front of the stage holding a ball painted like a globe. He sat on the edge on the stage examining the globe, and began to ponder the meaning of life. After experimenting with some poetry and being unsatisfied with the results he finally settled on talking about "a whole new world" and then proceeded to dance, with the help of another student, dressed in black, with the globe never losing contact with his body. He and his partner danced around singing "Whole New World" from Disney's Aladdin showing off their acrobatic skills and flexibility. At the end of the song and dance, Ryan presented the globe to the judges. PHOTO/K A MACDONALD

Fox Run land purchase

An item in last week's article on Fox Run warrants clarification.

Private property on Fox run, two parcels off Forest Avenue known as the "Breadencheese" swamp, is being purchased by the Cohasset Conservation Trust (CCT) using $100,000 in Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds: $50,000 from the CPA's Open Space Sub Account and another $50,000 in undesignated CPA monies.

The CCT will hold title on the land, and will not, as the article stated, give the land to the town as a gift; the town will own the conservation restriction. The 34-acre property is currently privately owned by the White family.

Should police be EMTs?

Discussion planned for last night's meeting

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A discussion on a memorandum of agreement (MOA) between the town and police union was postponed when the Tuesday night Board of Selectmen meeting was canceled. Also up for discussion was the public safety budget and organization chart.

Selectmen rescheduled for last night (Thursday). The Mariner goes to press Thursday morning and publishes on Friday. The police contract discussion was scheduled to take place at last night's meeting. Look for more on this issue in an upcoming print edition of the Mariner, and check: wickedlocalcohasset for updates.

The MOA has generated some controversy, as it will add monetary stipends for new specialist duties in the police department. Officers earn stipends depending on their level of specialty. Level one specialists include detective, court prosecutor, communications specialist, detail and overtime assignment; these pay $1850 per year.

The new specialists in the contract are:

- Level two specialist, who is an EMT or firefighter one; the pay for this position is TBA
- Level three specialist is a first responder/AED; this pay is also TBA.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that while the contract has already been ratified between the selectmen and the police union and the New England Police Benevolent Association, Local 66 (NEPBA) — the specialist stipends, notably that of the first responder, is still conceptual and not a done deal.

"It's a concept. Before any concept is implemented it requires the police and board of selectmen to agree on what the dollar value is."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski

"It's a concept," said Milanoski. "Before any concept is implemented it requires the police and board of selectmen to agree on what the dollar value is."

The contract has been signed by the town manager, Board of Selectmen, and the state director of the NEPBA. However, the stipend amounts for the level two and level three specialists are still blank.

Milanoski explained that the total amount for the stipends would have to fall into the $10,000 range, as that is the amount that exists in the budget.

While the topic has sparked debate in online blogs and commentaries, Milanoski said that he believes training police officers to be first responders makes sense from a public safety standpoint. The new specialty will "provide better life-saving support to people of Cohasset, so first responders have a higher level of training," said Milanoski.

This is an idea to explore "potentially down the road," he added, to "encourage our police officers to become EMTs... We currently have two police officers in the department that are trained as EMTs. When they respond to a medical incident, they have a higher level of training than those who are not EMTs."

Police officers are often first on the scene of any given incident, Milanoski continued. "Those first few minutes can be critical to saving someone's life; we want to provide additional public safety support during those first few minutes. When the paramedics come, they can take over the case."

Online commenters are also speculating about unrest in the fire department over its union contract. Milanoski addressed the rumor mill.

"I think, unfortunately in negotiations with the fire department, as we've seen through blogs, there are a bunch of rumors and exaggerations happening. Things are being created out of thin air that don't exist on paper anywhere," he said. "There's a lot of confusion out there."

However, he reiterated, "there is no agreement on any additional stipend or EMT stipend approved. It's just a concept at this point. There is $10,000 in the FY14 budget that potentially could support funding people that receive their EMT certification, but that has to be approved by the unions and the board of selectmen."

The Fiscal Year 2014 budget maintains the "status quo" of the public safety department seen in the current fiscal year budget; meaning, there is no police chief or police department head. Deputy Chief William Quigley will continue working as Acting Chief. (Former Police Chief Mark DeLuca was suspended

Loading zone violations continue on Depot Court

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The loading zones on Depot Court continue to be problematic for delivery vehicles because of motorists parking there during restricted hours.

There are two loading zones: the one near Dooley's is restricted to commercial vehicles only all the time. The larger, loading zone near Constitution Park by the Community Center is restricted to commercial vehicles only on Mondays and Fridays.

Police are looking at adding markings to the pavement to make the loading zones more visible once the weather improves. Signage at the sites explains the restrictions.

The purpose of the loading zones is to allow commercial vehicles to make deliveries to village businesses, restaurants and shops without blocking Depot Court which is the route emergency vehicles use to get to Sohier Street and then Route 3A.

Police are continuing to ticket violators, Deputy Police Chief William Quigley said.

Arrest

A 40-year-old Mechanicville, N.Y. man, who has ties to Cohasset, is facing assault charges after he allegedly pulled knife on a 54-year-old Cohasset man who lives in the Harborview Apartments, police said. The alleged victim reported the New York man came to his door wearing a trash bag over his head with the eyes cut out and holding a knife at around 1:50 a.m. on Tuesday (March 12).

The man allegedly wielding the knife was intoxicated and allegedly made threatening gestures at the Cohasset man., who called 9-1-1. The man with the knife took off but police caught up with him in the parking lot of the complex. Police said he was carrying a trash bag in one hand and had his other hand in his pocket. Police said he did not comply with orders to remove his hand from his pocket and was ordered to the ground at gunpoint. Police recovered the knife and placed him under arrest on charges of assault by means of a dangerous weapon and armed assault during a burglary. Police explained that once the suspect crossed the threshold of the apartment, it constituted a burglary. The two men are not related but they know each other, police said. The New York man was held overnight at the station and was arraigned the next morning in Quincy District Court.

Forged checks

A 64-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Saturday (March 16) that she found four of her personal checks had been forged and cashed since the beginning of the year for a total of $2400. She discovered the fraud when she received her bank statement. The checks were made out to her daughter but her daughter did not know anything about them. The woman suspects the person responsible could be her daughter's estranged husband, police said. Detectives are investigating.

Towed

Police had a 1997 Jeep Wrangler with revoked registration due to insurance cancellation towed following a traffic stop at 6:07 p.m. on Tuesday (March 12) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). The operator was a 33-year-old Marshfield man, police said.

Erratic driver

Police filed an immediate threat with the Registry of Motor Vehicles asking the RMV to revoke the license of an 87-year-old Cohasset woman who was observed driving erratically in an unregistered car around 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday (March 12).

A witness notified police after seeing the car driving on the wrong side of the road in rainy conditions. Police pulled the car over and believe the elderly woman, who appeared confused, was suffering from dementia. Police said her license is still active and she had taken car, which is no longer registered and was parked in her driveway, onto the roads.

Checks out

Police investigated a report of a suspicious vehicle with loud exhaust at the end of Parker Avenue last Wednesday (March 13) at around 9:30 p.m. Police said there were two teens in the Jeep and the driver checked out fine.

Maximizing community preservation

Resident presents suggestions to CPC

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee met on Monday, March 11, their first meeting of 2013. The agenda was quite robust, with several potential projects to discuss funding and a presentation from resident Howie Altholtz, an attorney who has been outspoken on a few CPC projects that were approved by Town Meetings last year.

Altholtz was a prominent figure at many CPC meetings in 2011 and 2012, disapproving of the CPC's funding a church window restoration program at First Parish, which Altholtz argued violated the separation of church and state. This project was approved by the May 2012 Annual Town Meeting. The December 2012 Special Town Meeting voted in favor of floor repairs at the Historical Society building, which Altholtz said was a misuse of CPC funds.

After numerous email exchanges, the CPC invited Altholtz to come to a meeting and express his concerns. Altholtz came with a list of suggestions to help "maximize the value of the community preservation act [CPA] to Cohasset." He thanked the CPC for inviting him to meet with them, and said that he appreciated what the board does.

The attorney explained that he has researched the CPA thoroughly, along with dozens of other town's processes. The CPA is a state law that was enacted over 10 years ago, setting set the stage to increase the amount of historical preservation, open space, affordable housing, recreational facilities, and other community enrichment projects. There are currently 148 Massachusetts communities that have adopted the CPA. The funds come from a 1.5 percent surcharge on Cohasset property taxes with some level of state match. The CPC is required to set aside 10 percent of its revenues, excluding the state's matching funds, for recreation, open space and affordable housing in particular.

Altholtz said that he was an early supporter of the CPA when it was adopted and has been in favor of "every grant but two over the last 10 years" that Cohasset's CPC has approved. However, Altholtz said of the Act, "It's not without its controversy and can always be improved, particularly in time of tight budgets and great need."

The attorney explained that, in his opinion, CPA funds should be prioritized to pay for projects that involve town property and the widest benefit to taxpayers — in other words, projects that give back to the public and don't serve only "private interest groups."

Altholtz also stated that while historic preservation is important, "It is a balance and we should not protect the past at the expense of the future... or for example focus on obscure artifacts of interest to a small group of preservationist buffs, to the exclusion of critical community needs.

"The past is important," he concluded, "but not more than the future."

Altholtz then read off a list of suggestions to the CPC members, some of which were met with some debate or skepticism (see sidebar). CPC chair Russ Bonetti informed Altholtz that the CPC is in the process of holding public hearings and meeting with other boards, something the attorney suggested. However, Bonetti did not feel that the committee should hold public hearings — and have to advertise in the newspaper — every time they hear a request.

In regards to the type of projects the CPC funds, Altholtz said he was glad to see that the board was looking at many town projects on that evening's agenda. Bonetti responded that there were "nothing but town projects," adding that the CPC "publicized that we've been looking for town projects."

Bonetti also said that many of the suggestions Altholtz made are tasks that a CPC administrator — a paid full-time employee in many towns — could accomplish. Cohasset's committee is comprised solely of volunteers.

"In a lot of towns, they have a paid administrator who handles" these matters, said Bonetti. "This is strictly volunteers."

Altholtz responded that his suggestion list, so far, is "just a nice wish list... We can be smarter than the Act."

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Upcoming CPC projects

The CPC reviewed and approved a number of requests during their Monday, March 11 and Wed., March 20 meetings:

- A request from Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre for $75,000 to preserve Town historic records;
- Request from the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Director Jackie Rafferty for $20,000 to digitize historical documents;
- $23,000 for library roof repairs to the weathervane and cupola; insurance will cover some of the costs;
- A request from the PSO Deer Hill Playground Committee for $60,500 to contribute toward the $160,000 playground project, which will pay for equipment and wood chips; CPC will also cover half of the future costs, less income and contributions;
- $15,000 to re-roof the harbormaster's shed with "Coast Guard red" shingles.

The CPC also heard a few requests that were tabled:

- A request from the Recreation Department for $65,000 to replace the lights on the basketball court behind the library;
- The Town Hall renovation project: the town was asking for $450,00 for full design bid documents; chairman Russ Bonetti said after reviewing the drawings from a recent study, which CPC paid for, that there are still a lot of questions to be answered, and he was concerned that the project has not had any public hearings; Bonetti said he thinks the project is not ready for prime time but would be good for next year's Annual Town Meeting.

Suggestions to maximize the value of the CPA to Cohasset

Howie Altholtz presented the following suggestions to the CPC:

- Improve the CPC website with more information: Priorities, criteria, past projects, projects in progress, etc.;
- Survey town needs and resources to include all boards, hearings, open space plan, Master Plan;
- Develop a community preservation plan;
- Establish basic criteria for projects—require widespread community benefit, public property;
- Be cautious about repeated grants to the same groups;
- All project reviews should be conducted as public hearing to ensure maximum public exposure and benefit;
- Votes should occur at the next meeting after a presentation; often, news from that meeting is the first the public learns about a particular project;
- Article presentation at Annual Town Meeting... will maximize town participation;
- Comply with Article 26, Section 2 of the state constitution; no grants to religious institutions;
- Get creative on the side of public projects, not private interest groups: "Member status" benefits for townspeople from private groups, which receive funding;
- Require Financial Disclosure Statements from private/non-profit applicants; if there is an income-producing component, the town should share revenue;
- If property is sold, require return of funds to the town;
- Projects should comply with Public Bidding Laws.

In Milanoski's public safety organizational plan, Fire Chief Robert Silvia is overseeing the entire public safety department's administration while Quigley and Assistant Fire Chief John Dockray are handling day-to-day affairs.

"We're not going to have any changes for the rest of this fiscal year, and we're establishing the budget to keep the same process going for next year," Milanoski explained.

Selectmen's meeting postponed due to weather

Town Hall closed Tuesday; other boards met

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said in a phone call that she was angry the meeting was canceled, and thought the weather was not a good enough excuse.

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Tuesday, March 19 Board of Selectmen's meeting was canceled and Town Hall was closed due to inclement weather, according to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. The selectmen meeting was rescheduled to last night (Thursday, March 21 at 7 p.m.) (The Mariner goes to press Thursday mornings).

Milanoski made the call early Tuesday morning, when Cohasset schools were also canceled.

"When the weather report came out this morning, there was heavy snow; we already had eight inches. The afternoon was going to turn into freezing rain," Milanoski said Tuesday. "That's what weather reports were saying this morning and why school was canceled. From a public safety standpoint, we determined we would cancel Town Hall as well."

Other board meetings, including the Advisory and Capital Budget committees, took place as scheduled. These boards met at the High School and not Town Hall; Advisory met at 7 p.m. in the community room while Capital meets in the library, also at 7.

The Thursday selectmen's agenda was the same as the original March 19 agenda, discussing the public safety labor contracts, budgets and organization charts; reviewing the draft warrant for the upcoming Annual Town Meeting (April 22); and a monthly update on town finances. The meeting took place after the Mariner's deadline.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said in a phone call that she was angry the meeting was canceled, and thought the weather was not a good enough excuse.

"I'm really concerned all this stuff is going on, canceling the meeting when the weather was fine," said Gjesteby. "There didn't seem to be an urgent [reason] for canceling. We have Town Meeting in a month; we've got to do the budget."

Gjesteby said that she did not even know that Town Hall was closed Tuesday until she heard it from a neighbor. She then called selectman chair Paul Carlson to confirm. Gjesteby attended Tuesday's Advisory meeting and said the weather was better by then. "It was only raining."

The selectwoman suspects that the weather was not the true reason for the meeting's cancelation.

"It wasn't because of the weather, it was because of other things they were doing," Gjesteby said. She also said that while the town manager is allowed to cancel a selectmen meeting, he should have polled the board.

Gjesteby said that Milanoski and Carlson made the decision together to cancel the meeting.

Carlson confirmed this in a phone call and said that when he and the town manager spoke around 6:30 on Tuesday morning, the weather looked bad and they did not know that other boards would go ahead and meet.

"At the time the weather forecast looked pretty awful — eight inches of snow and a lot more precipitation in the afternoon. We didn't know if there would be ice or not, and the schools were closed and other departments were closed. It seemed like a good idea at the time," Carlson said of canceling the meeting.

Grant is a go for Route 3A corridor study

The Mass Dept. of Transportation is expected to complete a corridor study of Route 3A by September 2013.

An area to be reviewed extends from the Cohasset Greenbush commuter rail station to North Scituate's Henry Turner Bailey Road.

Cohasset Planning Board vice chairman Clark Brewer applied for and received a service grant from the Boston Regional Metropolitan Planning Organization. Brewer said that the Planning Board's regional coordinator, Barry Keppard of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, was instrumental in getting the grant approved.

Other the next few months, the Planning Board will hold public hearings and solicit feedback from residents, property owners, public safety officials and other stakeholders in considering the MassDOT's recommendations for improvement.

Happy spring

Happy Spring 2013 Cohasset! I know it doesn't quite feel or look like it yet but, spring has sprung, at least in print anyways. Give it a little more time and before you know it, plants will be blooming, warm air will be here and winter will once again be a memory until next time.

LIFE AT CHS

Snow days adding up

WHITNEY MALONE

Next Wednesday, the High School Concert and Jazz bands will perform at "All School Band Night," accompanied by the Deer Hill and Middle School Concert Bands.

Spring is finally here! This week at CHS was unusual, having had yet another snow day. As of now, students will be in school until June 27th. (Let's just say it's a great year to be a senior!)

Due to the storm, 10th grade ELA Long Composition MCAS was moved to Thursday and the ELA MCAS was moved to today and next Monday.

On Tuesday, student council members stood by the main entrance before school to encourage students ages sixteen and over to donate blood. The American Red Cross organizes a number of blood drives at the school throughout the year, so there is always an opportunity to donate and help others!

Thursday night, students recently accepted into National Honor Society received their membership cards and pins at the NHS Induction Ceremony. Current and new members enjoyed a reception before the new inductees were called to the stage and recognized for their leadership, academic achievement, and service in the community.

Next Wednesday, the High School Concert and Jazz bands will perform at "All School Band Night," accompanied by the Deer Hill and Middle School Concert Bands. This is the last band performance before "Arts Night" in May, so I encourage everyone to come out and show support!

As May 24th draws nearer, and more and more college acceptances are coming in, it's getting harder for most seniors to concentrate on their studies. While we are all anxious to graduate, the idea of leaving CHS and each other is bittersweet. For everyone else dreading the idea of being in school until June 27th, don't worry; at least we have another day off next week for Good Friday!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Osgood PSO Scholastic Book Fair Fundraiser

The Joseph Osgood School Parent School Organization, PSO, will host its Scholastic Book Fair Fundraiser from 2 to 7 p.m. Thursday, April 4, at the Joseph Osgood School, 210 Sohier St.

The book fair will offer specially priced books and educational products, including new releases, award-winning titles, children's classics, adult books, and current best-sellers.

Attendees can also help the school build classroom libraries and the school library by purchasing books for teachers through the 'Classroom Wish List'.

OUR VIEW

Citizen of the Year

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, it is our pleasure to announce that Philip Lehr is our Citizen of the Year.

Cohasset is lucky that Phil, 58, a lifelong resident, chose to stay in his hometown where he has raised four children with his wife JoAnne,and where he continues to make a difference in so many small and large ways.

Over the years Phil has embraced Cohasset life through the Boy Scouts, Appalachia Service Project and Pumpkin Patch, quietly maintaining Wheelwright Park, serving on building committees for various projects, as a youth coach and more. In fact, it is hard to find some part of Cohasset that Phil has not contributed to.

Phil's congenial personality, sense of humor and his generosity of spirit have endeared him to old and new friends alike.

Perhaps Phil's most public contribution is coordinator of the Pumpkin Patch where he orders the pumpkins and designs the Patch layout on Wheelwright Park. The yearly design is always a well-kept secret – until the Patch opens and an aerial photograph is published in the Mariner! In Phil's office at Lehr & Barnes Insurance, his walls are decorated with aerial photos over the 10 years of Pumpkin Patches – an important fundraiser for the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project.

During the interview for this week's story, Phil was gracious in accepting the honor, which will be formally presented at a reception this spring. He said he was truly flattered to have been selected and is pleased to join such a fine group of Citizens of the Year. (Phil is the 20th annual Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year).

While nominations were open, dozens of individuals or families took the time to propose a citizen or group for the annual award, detailing the nominee's contributions to help make this town we all love a better place.

Glenn Pratt, JoAnne and Woody Chittick, David Farrag and Deputy Police Chief William Quigley joined editor Mary Ford this year in serving on the Citizen on the Year selection committee. They met on a recent Sunday afternoon at the Mariner office in downtown Hingham to pore over the nominations and reach a decision. Careful consideration was given to all the wonderful nominees this year.

Merle and Joan Brown said Phil's dedicated community spirit has helped make Cohasset a better place for people of all ages. Helene Lieb describes Phil as a "role model in civic engagement." Taffy and Jeff Nothnagle put it simply by saying "he is a man of utmost integrity."

Nancy Roach may have put it best in her nomination: Not only does Phil provide leadership around town in many events but he is also a good neighbor. "If we asked for help or assistance, Phil is right there to help out," Nancy wrote. "We have known the Lehrs for more than 30 years. Phil is known as Uncle Phil to our dogs, Hank and Zoots. You may see them out walking with him while he is clearing the trails on Sunday morning. Spring to fall he even mows a path between houses to lower the tick risk."

With this award, the Cohasset Mariner offers recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie stars with envy, when the real hero is the local police officer, firefighter, parent, teacher, church leader or government official.

The annual Citizen of the Year Award is our way of taking our hats off to those among us who go that extra mile without asking for anything in return but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

COMMENTARY

Don't limit candidate pool

KEVIN MCCARTHY

This week I attended the Cohasset Governance Committee public hearing on changes to the Town Manager Act. The Governance Committee is clearly working very hard and effectively to help revise the Town Manager Act, which we will all ultimately vote on at Town Meeting. The issue regarding only excluding selectman from being appointed Town Manager was again discussed. The current draft of the revised Town Manager Act provides that the only exclusion from being appointed Cohasset Town Manager is that the appointed person cannot have been a selectman within 15 months. I agree with this one restriction but I do not agree with those that propose we expand the restricted Town Manager candidate pool to include restricting town employees, town committee volunteers and/or appointees who may wish to apply for or seek the job of Cohasset Town Manager.

Why should Cohasset limit its potential pool of Town Manager applicants by restricting/excluding people who now or have worked for Cohasset or served on a town board or committee? I know of no public or private organization that has a policy of prohibiting current employees or volunteers from seeking the highest or any position in the organization. In fact, quite the opposite, most organizations take pride in developing internal talent and encourage promotion from within.

Excluding current employees, board and committee members from consideration as Town Manager would deprive Cohasset of access to a pool of talent comprised of people who know the town well, are known by people in the town and who have volunteered or chosen to work for the town. I'm not saying we should only consider employees, board and committee members. I am only saying we should consider them along with anyone else in the world we wish to consider, without restriction and in an open and transparent process – with the exception of anyone who has been a selectman within 15 months.

Apparently some fear that allowing town employees and volunteers to apply for the Town Manager job creates an unfair and nefarious "insider track" to the Town Manager position. I have no such fear. With an open and transparent process there will be plenty of eyes monitoring and commenting on the selection of a new Town Manager. As well, I am very confident our local press and bloggers will report thoroughly on the selection process for a new Town Manager. Freedom of the press and free speech is alive and well in Cohasset and that's a very good thing.

We have enough difficultly getting people to volunteer to work on town committees and boards without adding the political and personal stain on all such people that they are not to be considered for the top spot as Town Manager because they are presumed guilty of benefiting from favoritism and/or suspicious insider dealings. Really now – who wants to volunteer for such a label and/or work under those conditions? Working for Cohasset or volunteering as a member of a town board or committee is a source of pride; we should not make into a Scarlet Letter.

FOR THE RECORD

Put your spin on special report

GREGORY MATHIS

The weather will eventually get better, although in New England, and especially southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod, there is no guarantee we'll be enjoying spring-like weather any time soon just because the 2013 calendar tells us the official start to spring was March 20.

Come to think of it, in the past we've gone the entire spring without any spring weather and just made the leap from winter to summer around the beginning of July.

But the weather will eventually get better and when it does more people will be taking to the streets on their bicycles.

May is Bicycle Safety Month. Some may associate the initiative with parents and local safety officials outfitting youngsters with appropriately sized helmets and safety equipment, instructing them on what to do to keep their bikes functioning safely and properly, and the importance of observing the rules of the road.

These are all good lessons not only for children, but cyclists of all ages.

In light of Bicycle Safety Month, we'll be working with WGBH, the public broadcasting television and radio station out of Boston, on a project that takes a look at the increase in bicycles on the road, as well as the number of incidents and accidents as a result of that growing population.

The working title for the project is "Right of Way: How cyclists, drivers and pedestrians share our changing roads."

We know from our regular coverage that this can be a hot-button issue no matter what seat you sit in.

Back in late February, our Wicked Local Cambridge colleagues reported that a driver in a Jaguar got out of his car and slapped a cyclist in the face. Following a back and forth encounter on the roadway, the cyclist reportedly tapped the window of the car to tell the driver to share the road. A witness reported the Jaguar driver got out of the car to take a swing at the cyclist.

This might be an extreme example of the tension that exists between motorists and cyclists in general, but incidents and accidents seem to be more common and that's part of what we'll be looking at in our upcoming special report.

We'll also be looking at the changing landscape as it pertains to cycling, both from a commuting and recreational standpoint. Many communities have dedicated resources and finances to improving or building infrastructure to better allow for sharing the roadways. Bike paths, bike lanes and other improvements have helped with some safety issues, but is enough being done in your community? And if so, what measures have been taken?

As we finalize our story budget for this special report, we'd like to hear from you. Part of the bigger picture story will certainly focus on anecdotes from avid cyclists and frustrated motorists, but we also want to hear from recreational cyclists who ride for fitness and from those who use their bike to commute. In addition to what we hear from you, we'll be looking at local cycling clubs, local state parks or recreational areas that are popular with cyclists, as well as examining what the rules of the road are – for both motorists and cyclists.

Help us put your spin on this Bike Safety Month special report by contacting me at gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

Citizen of the Year

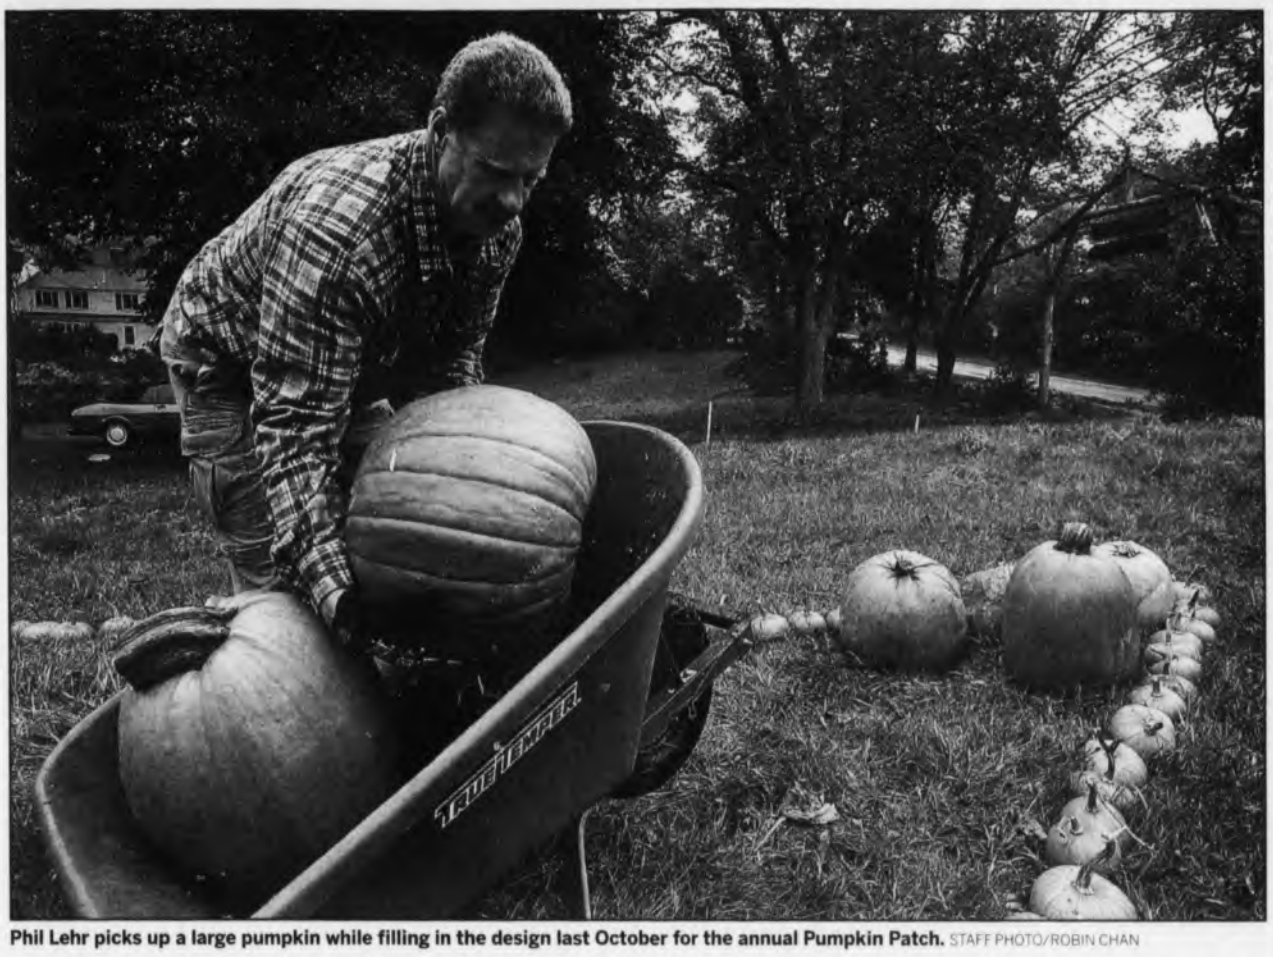
"My dad was a great mentor," Lehr recalls. "He taught you by doing and did not have to say a whole lot."



Phil and JoAnne have four terrific kids: Robert, 28, Rebecca, 26, Samantha, 22, and Victoria, 20.

The kids have made their mark athletically, academically and in turning out to be caring people. As an example, Robert put his life on hold two years ago to be with his grandfather during the last six months of his life.

Taffy and Jeff Nothnagle put it simply: "The Lehrs' four children are among the nicest, empathetic young people we know and that comes from both their parents."

Phil Lehr is perhaps best known around town for the annual Pumpkin Patch at Wheelwright Park, which is a fundraiser for the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project.

Lehr creates the design of the Pumpkin Patch, which always has a Halloween theme, and which is a well-kept secret until the pumpkins are unloaded and laid out. In his office at Lehr & Barnes Insurance, Lehr is surrounded by aerial photos of 10 years of patches taken by Margo Cheel, who, not surprisingly, also nominated him for Citizen of the Year.

The list of Lehr's volunteer contributions is amazing. Interestingly Lehr graduated in the first class of EMTs in Massachusetts under Nixon's Manpower Development Act in the early 70s. He assisted in many accident scenes, skating injuries and a drowning.

The Lehrs are active in the Second Congregational Church, which sponsors Cohasset ASP, and Phil Lehr describes pastor Gary Ritts as one of his best friends.

Merle and Joan Brown noted that Lehr has been fully engaged in ASP in many ways, as an organizer, fundraiser and center leader. On the annual ASP trip each center has 35 students and adults that work on the houses in West Virginia, Virginia or Kentucky for a week each summer.

"Phil brings to all participants his vast construction background, helping to train many with the skills needed to repair the homes," the Browns wrote.

Margot Cheel put it simply in her nomination, "He is one of those special people of Cohasset who truly cares about the community, quietly serves, helps others and offers his creative talents in many ways."

The Nothnagles said for Lehr's "positive influence on the young people through Troop 28 Boy Scouts and Cohasset ASP, we are extremely proud and honored to nominate him for Citizen of the Year."

In fact, giving back seems to come naturally to Lehr, who enjoys working with young people most of all.

"Having a positive effect on youth for a better future is very rewarding for me," he said.

Thank you, Mr. Jones!

The Mariner wants to join with all the students at Deer Hill —who submitted nominations for Tom Jones, retired custodian at their school, for Citizen of the Year — in thanking Mr. Jones for his many years of service to the school.

This year's committee considered all 13 nominees including Mr. Jones for the annual award very carefully.

While the committee does not make its decision based on the number of nominations received for an individual, we wanted to give Mr. Jones special recognition this year because in an unprecedented show of support, Mr. Jones, received 80 nominations – all individually filled out nomination forms or by separate letter – from fourth and fifth graders.

While Mr. Jones was not selected for this year's award – The Mariner wanted to highlight a few of the comments his devoted students made in their nominations.

- He loved all the kids and we loved him too – Carlton.
- He was the best janitor EVER! – Sophia.
- I loved Mr. Jones because he is a kind and caring man. He put all his time and effort into making our school the school it is now. – Emma.
- He made sure our school was clean and without him, our school would be a mess. — Ava.
- He was very devoted to our school and our country. — Isabel.
- He was the first to get there and the last to leave. He took his job very seriously. —Teddy
- He would cheer you up when you were sad. — Jessica
- He is hardworking, kind hearted and inspired kids to have a great day. – Tess.
- He would always make kids laugh and joke around. – Taylor.
- He was a great janitor because he taught kids how to be a good citizen. – Tegan.
- He made the school clean and safe and is one of my best friends in the world. – William.

Many fine citizens nominated for annual award

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Mariner received 13 nominations from literally dozens of individuals for the annual Citizen of the Year Award. A selection committee consisting of David Farrag, JoAnne and Woody Chittick, Glenn Pratt, and Deputy Police Chief William Quigley, joined editor Mary Ford in poring over the nominations at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday and selected Philip Lehr for the annual award, which started in 1993.

The decision was unanimous, although not reached without considerable discussion about the other very deserving candidates including:

- Cohasset emergency response workers: the hearty souls who worked tirelessly to clear the roads, provide assistance to the vulnerable, and bring services back to normal after the recent snowstorms, Super-storm Sandy and Tropical Storm Irene. Departments include: DPW, fire and police, facilities management, school department, Department of Elder Affairs, Emergency Response Team, Board of Health, Town Nurse, Harbormaster, Water Department, Sewer Department, Building Department, Housing Authority and all the many, many volunteers who actively assisted.
- Jane Corry and Moira Stansell for their compassion, creative and steady leadership at the Cohasset Food Pantry. Jane and Moira are the warm and caring face of the food pantry, quick with a hug, with a query about the status of family members, and with encouraging words for the discouraged. They have taken the increase in food pantry clientele in stride and keep the community aware of the pantry's growing needs.
- Daniel G. Evans for the outstanding work he has done serving on a wide spectrum of Cohasset committees and causes, always devoting a great deal of time, thought and talent to each. Most importantly since 2007, he has served as Town Moderator, often being elected with the most votes of any candidate on the ballot, a good measure of the esteem in which the town holds him.
- Sheila Evans, who served the community for more than half a century. As a library trustee for 45 years, she spearheaded two library building programs and helped raise $1.7 million from private donors for the present Paul Pratt Memorial Library. She founded the Cohasset Library Trust and was a member of the School Facilities Committee for 10 years. She served on search committees for the high school principal and town manager. She was committed to public service and the town, always ready to put in the effort and step up to a leadership role.
- Jacqueline Dormitzer for making a significant historical contribution to our town. As author of the Third Narrative History of Cohasset, she worked closely with the committee to meet the publication date and then went on to compile two anthologies, also published by the town; then a guidebook; and finally the Origins of Cohasset covering the geology and Native Americans in our area. This is a huge body of work from one person!
- Casey Gildea for his outstanding dedication to both his family and the town. Casey has served as a board member and league representative for SciCoh, the Scituate-Cohasset youth football program. Also for being the self-appointed caretaker of Meetinghouse Pond during the winter providing a safe and fun skating experience for children, As soon as the ice freezes, he brings out two hockey nets and a spotlight for night skating and then shovels away at the ice and snow until the pond resembles a real rink.
- Martha Gjesteby for her service on many town boards and committees for many years and for always staying on top of the town's operation. She had the interest and courage to run for selectman during a time of turmoil, jumping into the fray at such a difficult time.
- Tyler "TK" James Kelly for his many good deeds including his charitable activities at St. Anthony's including playing Santa Claus in the annual Christmas Pageant, caroling at Sunrise, working in the soup kitchen and knitting for the homeless. He is also a devoted teacher of religious education. While an athlete at CHS, Tyler was a role model for his teammates and was also a terrific student both in high school and college. He also went on many Appalachia Service Projects, repairing homes for those needing a hand.
- Fred Koed for serving Cohasset with dedication to duty week-in and week-out for more than 20 years. A longstanding member of the Board of Selectmen, Fred has represented an ever broadening constituency with open-mindedness and fairness.
- Tom Jones, beloved custodian at the Deer Hill School who retired in January, for serving the community through the school system for 35 years. He worked throughout the school helping the teachers, staff and students. He taught the students to respect their school and that helping one another is important. He also had his own way of rewarding a student who performed above what was asked for or expected. The best reward were Tommy Tokens that were brought back to the classroom where the student was recognized for his or her outstanding work.
- Nelson C. Pratt for his more than 50 years of contributions to Cohasset as a Boy Scout leader, Sunday school teacher, and Civil Defense Director.
- Jill Rosano who works tirelessly and has the respect of the residents at 60 Elm St. What she did during the recent blizzard to take care of 60 Elm was impressive. Her knowledge of all the people that live there and their whereabouts were vital to their safety during that storm.

Cohasset Middle-High School unveiled its new, state-of-the-art weather station with an open hour and tour this week from Athletic Director Ron Ford and CBS Boston WBZ Channel 4 meteorologist (and Cohasset resident) Joe Joyce.

The weather station was funded with donations from the Cohasset Education Foundation, South Shore Playhouse Associates, Cohasset Soccer Club and Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. The WeatherBug program equips students with a better understanding of meteorology.

WEATHER

Calling himself a "weather junkie," Ford said his life revolves around what the weather is going to be. The new weather station helps him plan ahead, but also comes with a teaching component for the classroom.

"I hope teachers jump onboard," said Ford.

A few already have. Middle school science teacher Bob Erlandsen and high school statistics teacher Laura Humphrey were both using the WeatherBug to teach lessons on Monday morning. Erlandsen's students were tracking the upcoming snowstorm, which hit Cohasset on Tuesday, while Humphrey's class was working on standard deviations in temperature based on the live weather data they were watching on their computer screens.

"They're using very relevant data which is very helpful to me," said Humphrey. "I love to use it in statistics class. We used to use data from other cities; to have our own data is exciting... Whoever set up the educational component did a great job."

Joyce gave Erlandsen's class a weather briefing based on the WeatherBug data and predicted a delay or cancellation for schools on Tuesday (it ended up being a snow day).

UPDATE

Fired TM requests town docs from Superior Court

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"These requests will bring this to light not only on the events surrounding my case, but on other important matters for the citizens of Cohasset."
Michael Coughlin, former town manager

Former Town Manager Michael Coughlin, who filed suit against the Town of Cohasset in December 2012, filed an information request with the Norfolk County Superior Court seeking several town documents on March 14, 2013. According to Coughlin, the documents he requested will aid him in his lawsuit.

Coughlin, who was fired by the Board of Selectmen last March from the town manager post after only six months on the job, is seeking reinstatement in his suit. The selectmen at the time cited Coughlin's failure to communicate properly with town board members and officials as a factor in the decision to remove him without cause. Resident Michael Milanoski was appointed as Acting Town Manager and will continue to work for the town through December 2013.

Coughlin is represented by attorney Harold Lichten of Lichten & Liss-Riordan, PC. In December 2012 Lichten filed a whistleblower lawsuit against the town. The complaint named four current selectmen (Paul Carlson, Leland Jenkins, Diane Kennedy and Fred Koed) and one former, Ted Carr, who was chair at the time of Coughlin's removal, along with Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio.

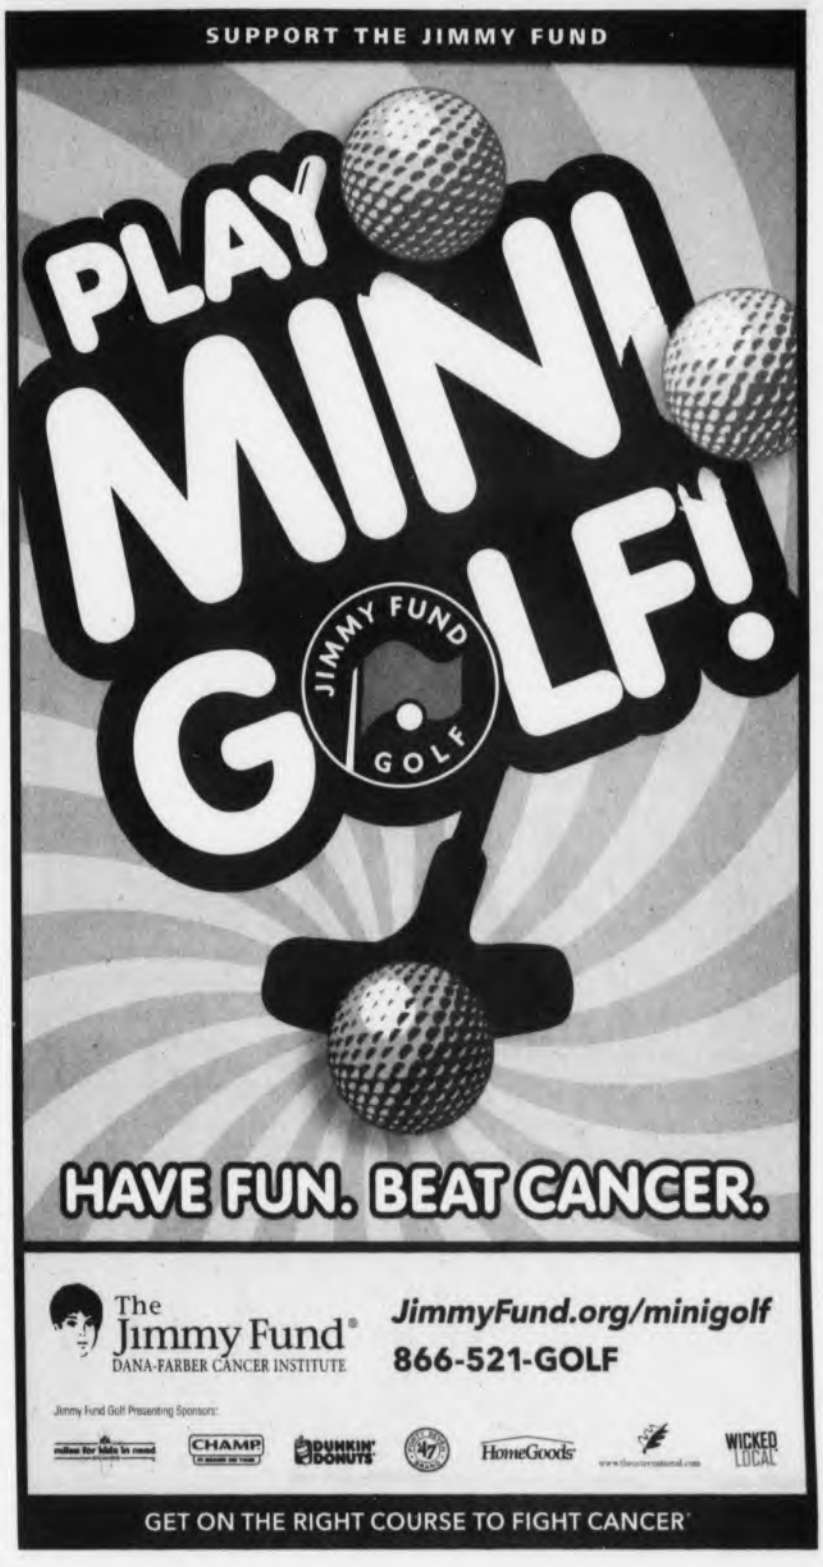
Coughlin through his attorney filed a Civil Action No. 12-01944 last Thursday requesting information pertaining to his lawsuit, including one document with 14 requests for any documents, correspondence including emails, notes, minutes and executive session minutes from the town of Cohasset that relate to the suit; a second document lists 12 requests for documents, correspondence, emails and phone records relating to Coughlin and DeCaprio.

Coughlin said that the town has 30 days to turn these documents over. He said in an email to the Mariner that the information he has requested for his suit will help to shed light on what's been happening behind closed doors in Cohasset government.

"The Open Meeting Law is the cornerstone of transparent and honest government. Cohasset is plagued by a government being conducted behind the scenes on the electronic devices of a select few," said Coughlin. "These requests will bring this to light not only on the events surrounding my case, but on other important matters for the citizens of Cohasset."

Statement

Coughlin issued a statement explaining why he has filed suit, the issues involved in his suit, and what he hopes to accomplish.



"On day one, I faced three challenges — Cat Dam, the move to railroad a water concession contract without proper vetting, and opposition from officials who held the law, viewed ethics and the public's right to know with contempt.

"On Cat Dam, discovery will demonstrate a pattern of unethical behavior between E-20 [Environmental 20] and government officials including members of the Board of Selectmen including records demonstrating that a leader of a private group was guiding the legal position of the town.

"On the Water Concession, the e-mails, conversations and records will demonstrate questionable ethics conduct, questionable relationships and outline the moves to remove me simply because I sought to enforce applicable laws and ethics standards.

"Perhaps most importantly, the discovery will confirm on a wide scale as Selectmen Lee Jenkins once admitted in public about himself, that many officials in Cohasset don't care about the law in their conduct of governmental business.

"To that end, my lawsuit seeks to bring all of this to light in the hope that a new Board of Selectmen can go forward in a manner that truly respects the people, recognizes what happened to me and others needs to be corrected and forever end the contempt that some officials have for the public's right to know."

TOWN ELECTION UPDATE

Race surfaces for selectmen seats

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Four citizens have put their hats in the ring to run for the Board of Selectmen, which has two open seats. Two of the candidates have returned their nomination papers so far.

Bill Burnett, director of the Cohasset Triathlon, pulled papers for the board of selectmen on Tuesday. Last week, Russ Bonetti, chair of the Community Preservation Committee, announced that he, too, pulled papers. Incumbent Leland Jenkins pulled papers on the first day they became available last month, as did Steve Gaumer, who currently chairs the Capital Budget Committee.

So far, Jenkins and Gaumer have returned their signed papers, making their run official.

Thursday, March 21 was the last day to pull nomination papers for the Town Election. Filled out and signed paperwork is due back to the Town Clerk's office by Monday, March 25.

The following folks have also pulled papers so far, as of Thursday morning:

- For the School Committee, which has also has two three-year positions, Jeanne Astino (incumbent) and Mary McGoldrick (incumbent Linda Snowdale is not running for her seat);
- Library Board of Trustees (three seats for three years): Sarah Pease and Teresa Polhemus (incumbents), James Sandell;
- Board of Health (one three-year seat): Elizabeth Kirkpatrick (currently filling seat vacated by longtime member Steve Bobo);
- Cohasset Housing Authority (unexpired term for one year): Virginia Najmi (incumbent), James Sheerin;
- Board of Assessors (one three-year position): Elsa Miller;
- Planning Board (one five-year full member and one three-year associate member): Charles Samuelson (incumbent) running for the full position, Joseph Regan for the full term, and Michael Dickey for the associate membership;
- Recreation Commission: Kimberly Mulcahy;

Dr. Michael Gill Scholarship announced

Bracelets in the colors of CHS (also appropriate for Scituate and Hull High Schools) are available for sale at a price of $40/each to benefit the fund

A scholarship fund has been initiated in recognition of the approximately 34 years of service and dedication provided by Dr. Michael P. Gill to the Cohasset Middle/High School community. Gill retired from CMHS last year.

Formation of the scholarship was announced during the graduation ceremony for the CHS Class of 2012 by co-valedictorian Maggie O'Grady. "Dr. Gill has embodied the 'pal' part of principal by showing genuine concern for each student, O'Grady said during her graduation speech. "He has known each student who was fortunate enough to walk through the doors of Cohasset Middle/High School by name; has attended, it seemed, every athletic and other extra-curricular event. 'D Gill' as he's been affectionately named by the student body, has gone far above and beyond the call of duty," said O'Grady. "The recipients of the Dr. Michael Gill Scholarship, beginning with the CHS Class of 2013 will embody the principles of our Principal, including acceptance by a four-year college with preference to the field of education. The awardees will be have demonstrated character including a dedication to their classmates and the school as a whole."

Contributions to the scholarship fund can be made at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank on Main Street. Bracelets in the colors of CHS (also appropriate for Scituate and Hull High Schools) are available for sale at a price of $40/each to benefit the fund. The bracelets are made of high quality solid sterling or sterling/platinum plated and Swarovski beads, designed in a one-size-fits-most 7.5, but can be made smaller or larger upon request. Bracelets are available at Willow Salon, Spa and Shoppe on Ripley Road, or can be ordered by contacting Laura O'Grady at lauraogrady@comcast.net.

Volunteers to serve on the Scholarship Board are being sought, to review scholarship applications.

Faber wins debut and Liberty League honor

Skipper star at Union College with Anders Goetz

Former Cohasset baseball and football star Jamie Faber pitched seven innings of one-hit ball striking out four batters en route to a 9-2 victory for Union College over Sewanee at the RussMatt Invitational Sunday morning in Florida, and also played first base for the Dutchmen.

Faber started two games at first base and made his first collegiate start on the mound last week.

Against Wittenburg, Faber started at first base in the second half of a doubleheader, registering a two RBI double in a 4-3 loss. On the mound against Sewanee, Faber tossed 7 innings, striking out four and walking just one batter. He just allowed one hit and allowed no runs in his first collegiate start en route to the 9-2 win against Sewanee.

Faber pitched efficiently as he just allowed one runner on a walk in the seven innings he pitched, and got a little help from former Cohasset teammate Anders Goetz, who had an RBI single for

In the sixth inning, Goetz padded Union's lead with a RBI single and scoreda run.

The Dutchmen will will host St. Lawrence for back-to-back doubleheaders on March 23 and 24.

Cohasset kids help U12 Elite to title

Maeve Humphrey and Annie Pyne and on champion squad

The Hanover Mariner

The South Shore Select Girls U12 elite team traveled to Richmond, Virginia this past weekend and came home champions at the prestigious Jefferson Cup tournament. The tournament had teams traveling from as far south as Georgia and as far west as Ohio to play and see how they stacked up against the competition.

Cohasset players Maeve Humphrey and Annie Pyne were members of the team.

Select played four games and won all four with out allowing a goal in any of the contests. Outstanding defense and the play of goalkeeper Kaelin Logue was the key to the tournament that saw quite a few low scores and tightly contested games. Select started out on Saturday against the eventual third-place finisher HBC Impact from Long Island NY. Kira Maguire scored the first two goals of the game in the first half as the defense led by Annie Pyne and Sam Smith thwarted opponent opportunities with heads up plays along the back line. Select controlled the play in the second half and got a late goal from Gabby DelPico made it 3-0 as she drilled a shot into the top corner to end all doubt about the contest.

The sun came out for the afternoon contest that saw Select match up against the NJ Force Crush. The Crush came into the game ranked 5th in the nation at this age group. The game was close throughout the first half as Fiona Kane and Maeve Humphrey had great opportunities to break the scoreless deadlock in the first half but outstanding play from the Crush goalie kept it scoreless at half time. The second half was more of the same but constant pressure from forwards Julia Varasso Eve Montgomery and Daley Tilden wore down the defense and produced numerous corner kick opportunities. Finally on the fifth corner kick opportunity, Kelly McNeil tapped the ball to Hannah Vogt who blasted the ball in the net to give Select the 1-0 lead with just over five minutes to play. The Crush never got a great scoring opportunity as the defense of Lexi Grazioso kept them at bay and set up a game Sunday morning that was for the right to go the finals later that day.

In less than ideal conditions due to rain and wet fields, Select took the pitch against Casa Casa from Maryland. Select was firing on all cylinders and took the

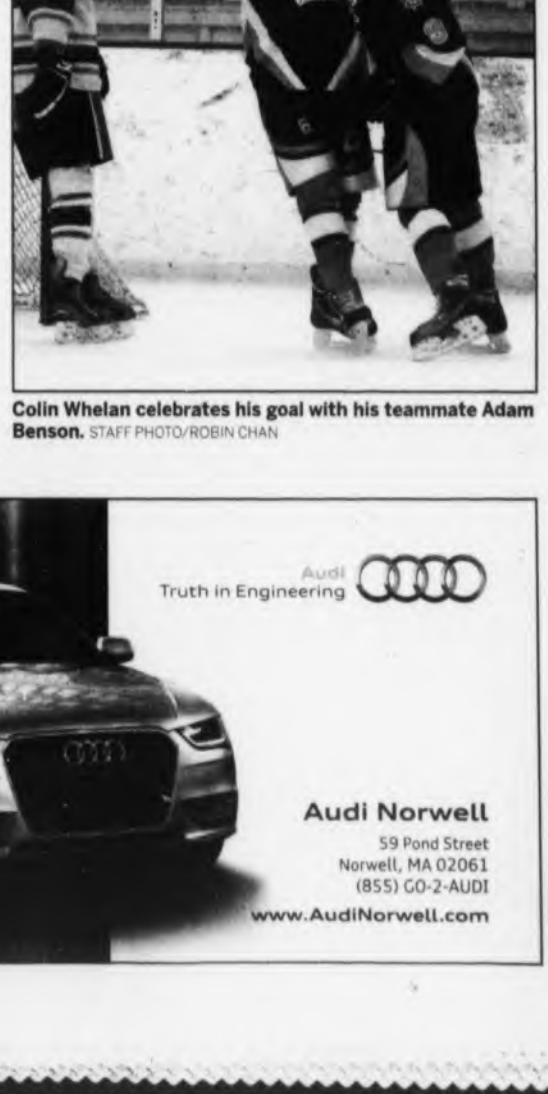
Skippers named All-Stars

Lund, Doonan and Benson earn South Shore League honors

The Cohasset Mariner

Chris Lund, Terence Doonan and Adam Benson have been selected as 2012/2013 South Shore League All Stars.

The players are honored, but in a note from Lund to the Cohasset Mariner, the three players would trade the All Star accolades for a trip to the Boston Garden, which is a goal they consider unfinished business for next year.



The goal should be a reasonable one, as the Skippers have 15 returning starters next year from a team that qualified for the MIAA Tournament.

Doonan and Benson shared a high potent line with junior Chris Cohen. (All three are returning.) Lund was a shut-down defenseman - paired with his brother, sophomore Michael Lund.

The first doubleheader will be Saturday, March 23 at 1:00 p.m. while the following match will be on March 24, starting at 12:00 p.m.

Goetz, a sophomore, is hitting .250 with an RBI in five games.

He recently sent a message to fans.

"A freshman on our baseball team here at Union College named Justin Lloyd has recently been diagnosed with stage three cancer in his intestine," Goetz wrote. "He is a great ball player and he is a really good kid. All of the guys on the team love him and we are doing anything we can to help him through this.

We have bought 1,000 rubber bracelets that say "Lloyd-strong" on them. If you are interested in buying them, they are $3 a piece. All of the proceeds will go to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute where Justin is being treated."

as we entered the tourney as the underdog.

In the tourney, Cohasset knocked off No. 3 seeded Hingham (11-3) to get to the semifinals and a match against a 12-2, No. 2 seeded Marshfield squad.

Cohasset won that game and advanced to the finals against top-seeded Whitman, who checked in at 13-1.

Cohasset lost by 3 points in the final, showing just how tough this team was.

While many opponents had 30 girls trying out for their teams, only 10 girls tried out for Cohasset and all of them made the squad.

The team was Margaret Curley, Brooke Conroy, Deveney Curry, Bella Farren, Carly Ford, Molly Greer, Maggie Hoffman, Bridget Macmillan, Sarah O'callaghan and Brianna Picot. The head coach was Jared Curry. He was assisted by Ken Greer and Paul Farren.

LACROSSE

Writing a book

First-ever Cohasset Skippers Lacrosse Book being written

Cohasset is fast becoming a hotbed for incredible lacrosse talent due to our legacy of strong youth and high school programs. More than 20 Cohasset High School boys and girls lacrosse players have gone on to become collegiate lacrosse players and there is no shortage of evidence that the momentum is continuing to build with each graduating class from Cohasset High School.

To showcase the talent among our current high school players and to raise funds to support the growing number of athletes throughout the town, the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters will produce the first-ever Cohasset Skippers Lacrosse book for both the girls and boys high school lacrosse teams.

This annual book will contain team pictures and headshots of each high school team player. If your business wants to support the coaches and the high school lacrosse teams by purchasing an advertisement, please email Elizabeth Naughton at elizabethnaughton@me.com for advertising specifications. All ads are due March 28.

Represent Cohasset girls' lacrosse as a town and take a picture with the high school lacrosse team. Come dressed in your Cohasset lacrosse uniforms or Skipper colors – blue and white – and join the photo shoot for inclusion in the first-ever Cohasset Skippers Lacrosse book poster.

Friday, March 22 at 4:30 p.m. – Cohasset High School turf field

A free 30-minute clinic coached by the Cohasset girls' high school team and led by the team's new coach – Kully Reardon – will follow the photo shoot.

The boys will be on hand March 28 at 3:30 p.m. at the High School turf field.

Youth players are invited to warm up with the team after the photo shoot – pass, run and gain some game play tips and techniques from the players and coach – and are welcome to stay and watch the rest of the practice.

game to the opponent with constant pressure from the opening whistle. They outshot their opponents by a wide margin in the first half but were unable to break the scoreless tie. A perfectly placed penalty kick in the opening minutes of the second half by Brooke Jones gave Select the lead and they never looked back. In the next 10 minutes, DelPico quickly netted two more goals with piercing shots after slicing through the defenders. The 3-0 final was good enough to punch their ticket to the finals later that afternoon.

After a much-needed uniform change, the championship match up was set against the Dublin Eagles from Ohio. Select did not let the fact that they were playing against a team from Dublin (OH) on St Patrick's Day deter them from their goal of winning this tournament and completing the weekend with four consecutive shutouts. It was very wet and a steady rain accompanied much of the game, but the girls played tough throughout. Kira Maguire opened the scoring from her striker position with a pretty left footed kick into the lower right corner. Meg McDonough converted a penalty kick in the closing minutes of the first half to give the eventual champs a 2-0 lead. While the game was not in doubt in the second half the shutout streak was contested a few times. Logue stood tall in net, preserved the shutout and helped the team carry the championship trophy back to Hingham. The girls will next test their skills at Harvard University this weekend at the NEFC tournament in which they are the two time defending champions.

The line of Curtis Golden, Derek Benson and Kyle O'Brien will be back in Skipper Blue.

A championship hockey team requires a top goalie – the Skippers have two. Brendan Winn and Liam McHugh will keep the puck out of the net

This is a team loaded with talent all sharing the same goal: Garden or bust.

A few Cohasset wrestlers were also honored, this time by the MayShore League.

Greg Berubu (120), Sean Mavilia (126), Matt Froio (170), and Mike Livingstone (195) were all represented.

COHASSET RECREATION

Program is for students in grades 6-9

Calling all thrill seekers, artists, social butter?ies, athletes and laid back boys and girls to sign up for the Summer Xtreme Program. Cohasset Recreation is pleased to once again offer this program to those entering grades 6-9 in the fall of 2013. In the past students have come not only from Cohasset but also Hingham, Hull, Marsh?eld, Norwell and Scituate.

"We are excited about the continued collaboration and strengthening of cooperation between all of our neighboring towns," says Ted Carroll, Cohasset's Recreation Director.

Most traditional town programs are geared towards the younger set, the solution is Summer Xtreme, offering students entering grades 6 through 9 an opportunity to stay active and have fun via ?eld trip destinations around the region, ranging from theme parks and paintball ?elds to adventurous outings like kayaking on Lake Cochituate which abuts Framingham, Natick, and Wayland and features a small tunnel that leads the young kayakers underneath the Mass. Pike.

This Summer's overnight week includes visits to Canobie Lake Park and Water Country. At Summer Xtreme the groups are kept small so that counselors can get to know each student and ensure the best possible experience

The program meets four days a week, Monday through Thursday at Cohasset High School, with ?eld trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays (except where noted.) On Mondays and Wednesdays the group of approximately 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders, and social activities. The program is supervised by experienced Recreation Department counselors and directors. Fee of $113 a week includes a Summer Xtreme shirt and bag. "Summer Xtreme offers the bests of both worlds. It provides kids the independence they are looking for while hanging out with new and old friends from different towns. Most importantly, it does so in a fun and safe atmosphere," according to Carroll.

Summer Xtreme Program Director Michael Curtin has been a middle school teacher at Quincy's Atlantic Middle School for 20 years where he has taught math, science and technology. Curtin also worked for Quincy Recreation for that same amount of time, overseeing after school and gym programs. He has been a sports specialist during summer recreation in Quincy and Co-recreational director for three summers at Great Harbors Resident Association in Falmouth where he operated the swimming pool, organized activities for adults and children and ran tournaments.

To register, contact the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 or email recreation@townofcohasset.org. Applications are available at: cohassetrec.com

HAPPENING MARCH 28

PMC Kids Ride volunteer meeting

Children from ages 3 through 15 will push off on their tricycles and bicycles in the seventh annual Pan-Mass Challenge South Shore Kids Ride at 9 a.m., on Sunday, June 9. Peddling between 1/8 and 6 miles in DCR Wompatuck State Park, participants will raise funds for cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund. Registration is now open and riders can sign up at: kids.pmc.org/hingham.

Prior to the ride, a team of volunteers is needed to sign up for marshaling bike loops, monitoring bike routes, check-in, parking, set-up and clean-up. There will be a meeting for all volunteers at 7:30 p.m., on Thursday, March 28, in the Fearing room at Hingham Public Library.

"Every year, we are astounded by the number and commitment of our volunteers. There are people who come back annually and new faces who were touched by the cause and camaraderie from years before – which only underscores the fact we have to keep working to fund research for treatments and cures," said Lisa Patterson, co-chair PMC South Shore Kids Ride.

"We want to inspire the children to fundraise as much as they can while both having fun and learning about the importance of raising awareness and contributing to the battle against cancer that impacts far too many adults and children their own ages," said Jackie Temple, co-chair PMC South Shore Kids Ride.

Riders are required to raise $25 with hopes they will be able to reach out farther into their communities and raise at least $50. This year, riders who raise $250 or more will be honored as Heavy Hitters and receive a special gift from PMC with eligibility for a Heavy Hitter raffle for their hard work and dedication. In addition, PMC South Shore Kids will post riders' creative and effective fundraising campaigns on its site to provide other participants with inspiring ideas.

The South Shore PMC Kids ride attracts more than 450 young cyclists from South Shore communities and beyond. It is part of the larger adult PMC Ride effort to draw young cyclists into the Pan-Mass Challenge mission. Collectively, more than 6,000 cyclists between the ages of 2 and 15 ride between one and 26 miles, engaging in philanthropy and learning the value of working for the benefit of others. PMC Kids also promotes the healthy benefits of physical activity and athletic fitness among youth.

For more information about volunteering and rider participation, email PMC South Shore Kids Ride co-chairs, Lisa Patterson or Jackie Temple at pmchingham@comcast.net.

COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

Hello spring at Deer Hill School!

JAN TODD

Cohasset has enjoyed several days of warm weather. That sunshine has encouraged snowdrops, crocuses, and even the earliest of the narcissi to create a sensation. How amazing it is to find fresh color under leafless trees with piles of dirty snow along the roads. Intermittently, like last Tuesday when the schools had to be closed, fresh powder covered us. "Junior Gardeners," a Deer Hill after school activity, organized and run by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, marked the late winter/early spring New England weather with a three-pronged March meeting.

As usual, the meeting was held in the cafeteria. The snacks, provided each month by various parents, are always a welcome start for the 30 children, boys and girls from grades three, four and five. Then, down to business! CGCC has been running some sort of a junior gardening program since 1967. The program was disrupted for some years while the school was being renovated but was restarted in 2006 when a space was once again available. Depending upon the time of the year, there may be inside hands-on activities or if weather is cooperating there may be gardening to be done in the school's courtyard. Last year there was a huge push to improve the courtyard, around which the school had been built. Kennedy's Country Gardens contributed several large pieces, including a tree. The students planted bulbs and perennial plants. To mark the success of that program, run under Joan Carlo, the Massachusetts Federation of Garden Clubs awarded the Community Garden Club of Cohasset two awards, its top award for renewing the courtyard plus its top award in the state for the Junior Gardeners program.

Lee Jenkins organized this month's meeting. Using empty egg cartons, the students planted seeds in a starter medium. The seeds will grow tomatoes, basil and oregano: "A pizza planting," Lee aptly named it. While that activity was going on, Lee explained where the children should grow these seedlings, the difference between northern and southern exposures, and what to do at home to help the seedlings grow into sturdy summer plants. About eight other CGCC members moved amongst the students to help with any problems.

CGCC members help Will, Jack and friends to prepare a Pizza Planting.

A couple of fourth-grade students spoke about why they enjoy being a part of Junior Gardeners. One fellow said that he does not have a home garden so he enjoys working in the courtyard. Also, he mentioned that he values the way he has been taught to recycle plastic and other disposable items. "I make my parents happy when I bring home the things I do from here," he said. One of the girls added that her two favorite activities have to do with crafts or nature: "Junior Gardeners combines my two interests." She went on to say that now when she is with her grandmother in a garden on the Cape, she enjoys working amongst the daffodils, lilies, catnip and black-eyed Susan that they have planted together.

The second part of the meeting provided instant gratification. Each child made a terrarium. All of the students received a plastic bottle, which had to be cut in half to form a container. Then the soil was added, followed by a pink polka dot plant. There was discussion about how to care for this at home, plus consideration for its eventual size and the plant's needs. Following this activity, there was a trip outside to the courtyard to check out how the area would be coming out of winter and to see if any of their plantings from last autumn were popping out of the earth.

This year's program is being run by CGCC member Julie Hess, who has children in the Cohasset schools, and by Gail Saccone, who remarked how excited the children were when they met for Junior Gardeners, yet how well behaved and attentive they were. "I feel as if I am planting the seeds that will grow into adults who care for their environment and maybe even into future gardeners!" Confidently, happily, the students gathered coats and backpacks and left for home with great expectations for the contents of their egg cartons, pride in their terrariums, plus a surprise gift of wild flower seeds to plant in their own gardens.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF April 1, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Resist a confrontation with that irksome person. The matter will soon blow over anyway. Meanwhile, channel your high Arian energy into areas with more positive potential.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The innovative Bovine finds a creative way to resolve a sensitive domestic problem by midweek. A former colleague returns with an intriguing business suggestion.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) An unexpected critical statement from someone you trust could catch you momentarily off guard. But you soon recover your equilibrium and rise to the challenge.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel you can handle a new project on your own. But advice from someone with experience could help you avoid possibly costly as well as time-consuming obstacles.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Waiting for others to make decisions is difficult for the take-charge Lion. But by week's end, you should hear news that will help you regain control of the situation.

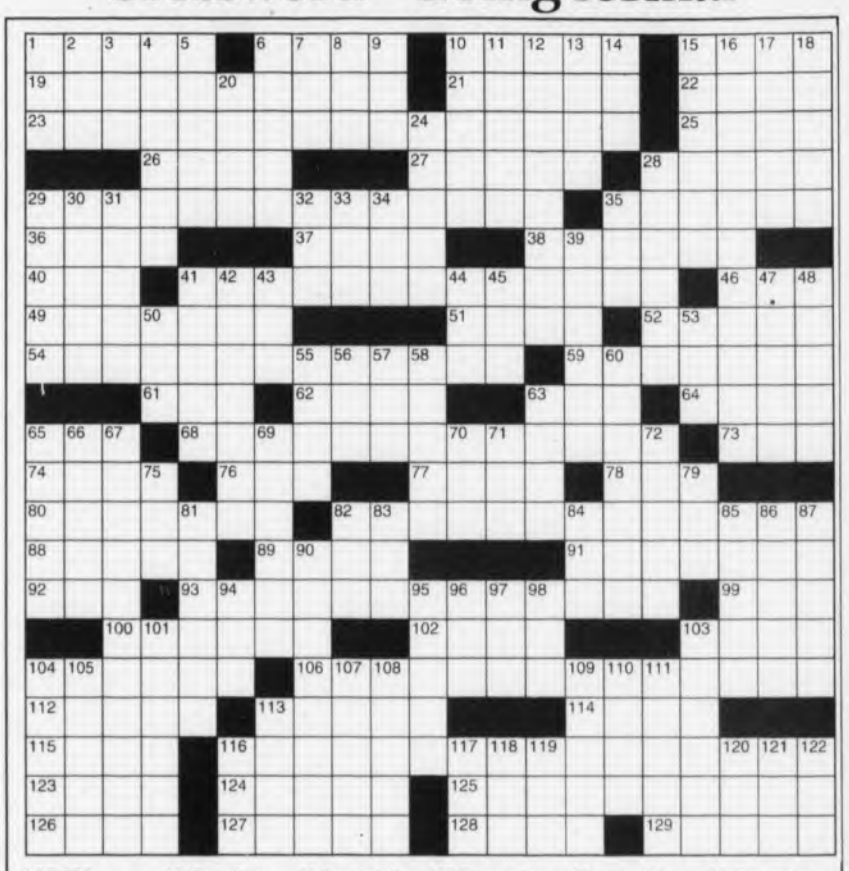
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your superjudgmental side could dominate the week unless you try to keep it in check. Otherwise you risk offending people, including some who are very close to you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect more information to come out about that possible career shift. Meanwhile, your loving concern helps someone close to you get through a worrisome period.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Despite an occasional setback, workplace pressures should continue to ease through most of the week. This would be a good time to plan that long-delayed trip.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sage Sagittarian quickly recognizes an opportunity when she or he sees it, especially if it's one you've been planning for. Take aim and go for it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Sea Goat's unique insight guides you as you check out a questionable situation. Your efforts should prove rewarding for you and your many supporters.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might want to pace yourself a bit more. Rushing could lead to serious slip-ups. Take more time to check out details you might otherwise overlook.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The best way to resolve those remaining problems is to ask others for help. They'll be happy to do so, especially when you agree to share the credit for a job well done.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

PUBLIC SAFETY

Fire, police contracts settled

Cohasset advertises for new police chief

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After two contentious meetings, one of which was scheduled after the Mariner's deadline last week, the Board of Selectmen and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski appear to be reaching an accord when it comes to the public safety budget and departmental structure. It was announced during the Tuesday, March 26 meeting that all of the town's labor contracts, including police and fire, had been ratified after a period of negotiations.

"It was a tough week getting to this because contracts are always challenging, but we have all of our labor contracts finalized," Milanoski said.

This required compromising on both sides, the town manager added, stating that the unions "have given away some benefits to the town for new hires, and it was overall a good negotiation year for the town and unions because everybody got a little bit. It also put all the unions on the same schedule; in 2015, we'll have the next round of negotiations."

The process to hire a new Police Chief is also underway. Milanoski announced that he has posted the Police Chief position. The police department has been without a chief since May 2012, when former Chief Mark DeLuca was put on paid leave. DeLuca's contract expired in January. Deputy Chief

Cohasset-based Cbay going strong

College student's company growing

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Nearly two years have passed since Cohasset native and college student Michael Filbey launched a business from his bedroom— Cbay, an online auction company that sells goods on a client's behalf and donates a portion of sales to charity.

Since its start in the summer of 2011, the business has expanded to an office space in the student activity center on Filbey's college campus, the University of Wisconsin-Madison, which Filbey won through a business competition at school. Filbey, Chief Executive Officer, also has a business partner, Chief Marketing Officer Mark Lindquist of Wisconsin. Both Filbey and Lindquist are 21-year-old juniors and say that Cbay is what they want to do full-time after graduation.

It seems like they are well on their way.

So how does Cbay work? If you've got stuff to sell that's worth over $75, but lack the time or know-how to get it sold, Filbey and the Cbay crew can take it off your hands. While you could go with a consignment shop or eBay, Filbey assures that he can sell it for more.

The Cbay profit breakdown is 60-20-20: the client takes home 60 percent of the sale, while the

TOWN ELECTION:

Five way race

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Five Cohasset residents are running for two seats on the Board of Selectmen in this May's Town Election, four of whom are current or former town officials. The election takes place Saturday, May 11 at Town Hall.

Incumbent Leland Jenkins is running for his second term. Also running: Steve Gaumer, current chair of the Capital Budget Committee; Russ Bonetti, current chair of the Community Preservation Committee; Karen Quigley, former selectman; and Bill Burnett, director of the Cohasset Triathlon. All five candidates turned in their signed nomination papers to Town Hall by the Monday, March 25 deadline.

Current selectman chair Paul Carlson is not running for reelection. Of his decision not to run again, Carlson said in a phone call, "When I ran for reelection in 2010, my wife and I decided I would do two terms. I've learned it's good to keep my promises to my wife. I've done six years, and there are some other things I want to do now."

Carlson thinks this year's selectmen race is "going to be interesting. There are a lot of different candidates; voters have a real choice."

Bonetti, Gaumer, and Jenkins have issued statements on why they are running for selectmen, which have been printed in previous editions of the Mariner. Burnett and Quigley both issued statements this week.

POLICE BEAT

3A accident takes off side-view mirror

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to a two-car accident at 10:17 a.m. on Saturday (March 23) at the intersection of Route 3A and Pond Street. Police said a 1999 Ford van had stopped at the light waiting to make a left onto Pond Street when a 2006 Chevrolet sedan attempted to pass on the right and took off the van's mirror. The 63-year-old man operating the Chevrolet was cited for passing on the right. A 21-year-old Dorchester man operated the Ford.

Erratic operation

Over the past week, there were five log entries from callers reporting erratic operation of another vehicle. Police say a big help is when the reporting party can provide the make and color of the vehicle and direction of travel.

Police notify Scituate or Hingham if the vehicle being driven erratically is headed in their direction along Route 3A which is three miles long in Cohasset.

Police said about 75 percent of the time when an erratic operator is reported the offending motorist is "distracted" and not impaired by alcohol or drugs. Drivers are distracted by talking on cell phones, texting, using their GPS, adjusting the radio and even drinking coffee or eating. Distracted motorists can face a fine of $100, police said.

Harassment

Cohasset police served a harassment prevention order last week for the Norwell police against at 61-year-old Cohasset man, who was harassing a 19-year-old employee of a pizza establishment in Norwell while he was at work.

School zone

Police had the car belonging to a 38-year-old Norwood man towed after he was stopped for traveling 35 in a 25 mph school zone on Sohier Street at about 7:25 a.m. on Friday (March 22). Further investigation revealed the motorist had a suspended license.

Police have been beefing up patrols in school zones due to speeding complaints.

Calling 9-1-1

If there is an emergency, call 9-1-1, officials say. When a caller dials 9-1-1 from a home phone or landline, the address comes up on the screen. Emergency personnel can track a cell phone signal. This adds a level of protection should the caller be incapacitated or unable to talk.

For routine questions, other inquiries or reports – such as for a dog barking or parking complaints – callers can call the police at 781-383-1055 or 781-383-1212. The business line at the fire department is 781-383-0616.

Parking stickers

With spring officially underway and summer approaching police remind residents that parking stickers are required at Sandy Beach, Wadleigh Park, Government Island and at the end of Parker Avenue where the town boat ramp is located.

Parking without a valid town sticker can result in a parking ticket and fine of $25, except for Sandy Beach where the fine is $50. Fines can be paid at the selectmen's office at Town Hall.

Dog bit dog

The animal control officer is investigating a dog-on-dog bite that was reported on Stevens Lane at about 1 p.m. on Friday (March 22). Police said a loose dog from Highland Avenue Ext. bit the other dog, which had to be transported to the veterinarian. Police said the owner of the dog that did the attacking could be responsible for the veterinary bill.

Icy roads

Police officers often notify the DPW when a road is icy or icing up. The log often contains entries where police alert the DPW to poor road conditions at night.

TOWN MEETING PREVIEW

Meals/hotel taxes are back on the table

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After discussion last Thursday, the Board of Selectmen decided to have both taxes appear in the same warrant article with two separate votes: Part a) for the meals tax, and part b) for hotels.

Third time's a charm?

That could hold true for new meals and hotel taxes in town.

Next month's Annual Town Meeting will give Cohasset residents a chance to vote once again on whether they would like to instate a local options meals or hotel tax. The issue has been defeated twice at previous town meetings, including the May 2012 meeting.

Selectman Leland Jenkins said it was "embarrassing" to bring this matter up again after it has failed twice on the Town Meeting floor. However, he said if the funds were directed toward an intended purpose, "you can maybe convince me" to vote for it.

After discussion last Thursday, the Board of Selectmen decided to have both taxes appear in the same warrant article with two separate votes: Part a) for the meals tax, and part b) for hotels.

A majority of the selectmen were more in favor of the meals tax than the hotel tax because with only two hotels in town, they felt the hotel tax would not make as large an impact. Also, they felt it would put an unfair strain on only a small group of local business owners. The meals tax, however, was considered to be a small, incremental increase.

If approved by Town Meeting, Cohasset would enact a 0.75 (three quarters of one percent) increase over what the state already gets (6.25 percent). This raises the statewide tax to 7 percent for people dining out, with the town keeping the additional 0.75 percent. Factoring in this increase, a $40 restaurant bill generates $2.80 in meals tax, out of which the town collects an additional 30 cents. The hotel room tax would be for 6 percent.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski estimated that combined, the meals and hotel taxes could bring in between $100,000 and $200,000 of new revenue to the town. The selectmen wanted to see language in the Town Meeting warrant that would state the intended use for the revenue, such as stabilization funds to put toward the new senior center building project.

The selectmen voted 4-1 to recommend the meals tax to Town Meeting (Jenkins voted against), but voted a negative vote of 0-5 in support of the hotel tax.

Decades-long hunt for fugitive rapist is over

Massachusetts State Police arrested one of the state's most wanted fugitives, a convicted rapist who had been on the run since 1978 and was found living under an assumed name in Gorham, Maine. The decades-long manhunt ended shortly after 9 p.m. Wednesday (March 27).

Gary Allen Irving, who is now in his 50s, was taken into custody at his home at 9:15 p.m. The arrest was made by the Massachusetts State Police Violent Fugitive Apprehension Section with the assistance of Maine State Police and Gorham, Maine town police.

Information developed in recent days led MSP troopers to Maine. The defendant was held overnight and was arraigned as a fugitive from justice in a Maine courtroom Thursday. The process to rendite him to Massachusetts began yesterday. Irving was convicted of three Norfolk County rapes in 1978, one of which occurred in Cohasset, but the start of his sentence was stayed by a judge. Irving fled during the stay of sentence.

Massachusetts State Police put Irving on the Top Ten Most Wanted list years ago and have been actively seeking him for decades.

The investigation by the Violent Fugitive Apprehension Section was aided by the State Police Detective Unit assigned to the Norfolk District Attorney's office.

"Det. Lt. Greg Lennon has been working with members of the State Police in sharing information along with Irving's case file, I am sure this played a large part in putting Irving back behind bars where he belongs," Cohasset Acting Chief William Quigley said.

Social Host Law presentation

On April 4, at 7 p.m., CMHS is sponsoring a presentation titled "Be a Parent, Not a Pal and It's All About You." This is a multimedia program designed by attorney Richard P. Campbell and the law firm of Campbell, Campbell Edwards & Conroy to educate students, parents, teachers and members of the community about the Social Host Law, and to illustrate the legal consequences of allowing those under the age of 21 to possess alcoholic beverages.

During the presentation, attorneys will tell the stories of victims of the consequences of underage drinking as well as of the hosts who have been prosecuted under the Social Host Law. They show what happens when good kids make bad decisions and well-meaning parents who think that they are providing safe havens for their children and children's friends painfully discover that these havens are not safe after all. They discuss the liability of social hosts when civil actions with millions of dollars at stake rapidly follow criminal prosecutions. They give new perspectives on the question, "Mom, Dad, can I have a party here at the house? Some of my friends will be drinking, but since I'll collect all of the car keys, we'll be safe, and everything will be all right."

remaining 40 percent is split between Cbay and their choice charity, Wellspring. This week, the company celebrated a significant milestone — reaching the goal of raising over $10,000 for Wellspring. On Wednesday, the number hit $10,098.

Clients can choose to list their wares on Craigslist or on Cbay's own online storefront, a new service the company offers. If they are already savvy with a certain other online auction site, clients can fill out an online form and submit pictures of their items directly to Cbay.

"It's a good option for people who have the technological know-how but don't have the time or inclination to sell something themselves," explained Lindquist.

Cbay has also partnered with Michael's Moving Company to offer discounted delivery service, eliminating the worry of shipping massive items like furniture.

People who opt to buy or sell with Cbay "have peace of mind" that they are working with a "credible seller," said Filbey. "We're passionate and focused on providing the best selling experience for the client."

While Cbay's current focus is local, the young entrepreneurs have a national vision. Sales from Cbay support the Wellspring charity in Hull, but the company could soon partner with national groups, such as the American Red Cross. Filbey said that the client base has already expanded outside of Cohasset and other South Shore towns to include other parts of New England; Cbay has also garnered some interest in New York.

It's quite a leap for a company that Filbey started in his parents' Cohasset home. Now, Filbey has Lindquist as a partner and two marketing interns: Ayzada Bengel and Mohsin Khan, both students at U-W Madison.

This begs the question: How does the Cbay crew keep up with a flourishing Massachusetts operation from their Midwestern headquarters? Simple — they have local help from a South Shore volunteer.

Tim Smith, a Scituate retiree, learned of Cbay through the Mariner's 2011 article, and offered Filbey his services — three days before the Cbay founder was about to return to college. Filbey said at the time that he was hoping to pass the torch to a local high school or college student. That was before Smith arrived.

"He came to my doorstep and said he read the article in the paper and wanted to help," said Filbey. "I sat down with him, gave him an overview of what Cbay is and trained him to work with clients and take pictures of the items they want to sell."

With Filbey away at school, Smith provides the primary interface between Cbay and its clients.

"We don't know if Cbay would have lasted without him," said Lindquist.

Smith said that he read the article on Cbay after his wife, who works at Wellspring, gave him a copy. He said he was looking for "something to do instead of sitting on the beach" post-retirement. He also wanted to find a way to help charity.

Smith and Filbey have a good system. "Mike emails me the client's contact info, and I get in touch with them and arrange time to take the pictures."

Smith enjoys his working relationship with both Filbey and Lindquist. "They're unbelievable," the retiree said of the two young entrepreneurs. "They have a lot of energy. It's fun to work with them."

Filbey said that while Cbay is Cohasset-based, a majority of their clients reside in Hingham. The small company is trying to expand its clientele by partnering with local real estate agents, who can ask their moving clients if they would like to sell any items, especially furniture. Cbay also partners with local clutter coaches.

Lindquist, who joined Cbay in January, has been charged with "scaling and growing the business." He was responsible for a direct mail marketing campaign to search out new clients.

"We send cards to people who are moving," said Lindquist. "It's been a really good market to go after."

"Everybody faces that problem when they're moving — what am I going to do with all my extra stuff?" explained Filbey. "Once the proven model is successful, we'll leverage the success to work with different real estate agents in Massachusetts."

Another initiative that could help Cbay get the national attention the guys are hoping to achieve is a potential partnership with the American Red Cross. Filbey said that he and Lindquist were planning to attend a meeting in the Cambridge branch this week — which just so happens to be the charity's second largest branch in the country. If the partnership pans out, Cbay would donate a portion of its sales to the Red Cross.

The Red Cross "is the number one charitable brand image," said Filbey. "Partnering with them would be generally good because it lends credibility to something someone hasn't heard of... If someone like that trusts Cbay... it will hopefully help us expand throughout Massachusetts and beyond."

Lindquist added that the Red Cross's reputation speaks for itself — 92 cents for every dollar earned goes directly toward helping people.

It's clear the two entrepreneurs are equally passionate about helping people while growing their budding business.

"The goal is to grow the company to the point where both Mark and I, and potentially an intern or two, can go full-time with Cbay," said Filbey. "There's a lot of work before that can happen. I'm logging 20- to 50-hour weeks."

Lindquist said that in the business plan he's currently writing, it says, "Mark will do anything to get out of working in corporate America," he said with a laugh. However, he takes his role at Cbay seriously. "It's making a difference," he said of working there. "Everything you do goes directly to helping someone. I'd much rather do Cbay when I graduate than anything else."

They're dreaming big, but Filbey is thinking positive.

"I'm very confident in the opportunity out there," he said. "How many people are moving, how many need a service to get top dollar for their furniture and high-end items... I'm confident in the top-notch service we have."

LIFE AT CHS

Yearbook info sought

WHITNEY MALONE

For seniors, the yearbook is a final chance to catalog all the memories and experiences from the past four years...

Having today off from school for Good Friday, there was much less activity at CHS this week.

Wednesday, high school band members were excused from their last period classes for a final practice before that night's "All School Band Night" concert. The excited Deer Hill Concert Band members, some playing for their families for the first time, were the first band to perform. Following the new instrumentalists, the 6th Grade and the 7th/8th Grade Concert Bands played their rehearsed pieces, before the High School Concert Band performed. The night also included a combined piece played by the High School and Middle School Bands, a rendition of "American Salute" from the High School Band and Cohasset's Rusty Skippers, as well as a collective performance from all bands of "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

At lunch this week, the yearbook staff, headed by Ms. Giuliano and Ms. Emond, took pictures for this year's student clubs and teams, including the Debate and Math Teams, the Spinnaker Staff, and Volunteer Club. For seniors, the yearbook is a final chance to catalog all the memories and experiences from the past four years, so it's important to hand in your senior pictures and write-ups before it's too late!

With days missed from snow and hurricane days, the end of the academic quarter has been pushed back to April 12th. Unbelievably, there's only one more school week until April vacation. (Can't say that it's much needed after this winter!)

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High. Her column runs weekly during the school year.

Carillon on Chronicle

The Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's Church will be featured on the WCVB-TV (Channel 5) nightly newsmagazine program Chronicle on Tuesday April 2 at 7:30 pm.

Anthony Everett, who anchors the nightly newsmagazine program, and his cameraman spent several hours last December filming the 57 bells in the tower and listening to Christmas carols in the courtyard below.

more value,
more flexibility, more reasons for cities and towns to choose Blue.

Cities and towns continue to save with Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts. In fact, over 75% of municipalities in Massachusetts are already managing their healthcare with affordable new plan designs from Blue Cross. And members get more choices than from any other local competing provider.

Blue Cross gives cities and towns the peace of mind that their employees are covered by an industry leader. A 75-year history of customizing health plans based on individual budgets enables Blue Cross to create plans that can help realize savings for municipalities. Unlike plans from the GIC, you're not locked into a multi-year contract, which means you can continue to customize your health coverage to meet ever-evolving business needs. Blue Cross will even work with you to design proven, cost-effective wellness programs tailored to your community's specific challenges and goals.

GIMME SHELTER

Portia is a pretty girl!

PAULA J FATERSIK

Since she is so young, Portia will be anxious to play and spend time with you and she will seek your gentle hand for head and cheek rubs. COURTESY PHOTO

There is a very never-ending list of complimentary words to describe this week's feature cat, Portia. Like her Shakespearian namesake, Portia is intelligent, gracious, determined, and one of the most beautiful lady cats on earth. This enchanting one year-old recently delivered and nurtured a litter of kittens. Though she is still just like a kitten herself, she cared for them and protected them patiently with a mother's love. This week, Portia had her surgery and now it is her turn to be loved, pampered and babied. She deserves all of that and more.

Upon arriving at the shelter, Portia was immediately friendly and inquisitive. She was showing and asking for affection even though everything was new to her. Perhaps she has missed the attention of a loving family recently, but it certainly won't be long before someone comes to her side to protect her and care for her with gentle petting and sweet words.

Portia's large green eyes are stunning and, as she is quite petite, they are a beautiful and expressive sight. Paws tipped with white and a pretty white bib and tummy make her markings even more special. Her silky fur is dramatically shaded with creamy coffee, and black stripes that creates such an interesting pattern. Add a long tail with beautifully fluffy and soft fur and you can become captivated by appreciate all that this adorable young girl has to offer.

Since she is so young, Portia will be anxious to play and spend time with you and she will seek your gentle hand for head and cheek rubs. It is fun to watch her explore, and then keep looking back and returning for love and encouragement. Like her kittens, she is still learning and needs love and support. This is one very special cat who deserves the best forever home. With a single or family, she will complete a home and fill it with her sweet personality and exquisite beauty.

Portia's large green eyes are stunning and, as she is quite petite, they are a beautiful and expressive sight.

Please come for a visit with Portia at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

How do language and culture shape one another?

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

When a big name fellow like Tom Wolfe claims a book to be the "most important and provocative anthropological fieldwork ever undertaken," even casual readers take notice. Cohasset is fortunate to have the subject of this acclaim, Daniel L. Everett, as the next speaker of "Sunday AuthorTalks" on April 7, at 4 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Everett will speak about his most recent book, "Language, The Cultural Tool," in which he argues the long held theory of Noam Chomsky's that language is an innate part of humanness and that it's embedded in our genes. However, Everett's premise is that humans invented language just as they invented tools, and as such, language can be lost or reinvented.

Everett has done over 30 years of field research among the indigenous societies of the Americas. He says the purpose of his book is "to inform and debate" his central question, which is how do language and culture shape one another? Drawing on motifs such as the Greek myth of Prometheus and the Hebrew myth of Babel, Everett's fresh analogies take us out of the laboratory and into the curious realm of human experience and culture. One New York Times reviewer said that Everett has written that rare thing— "a warm linguistics book."

Daniel Everett's remarkably long and rich curriculum vitae reveal a genuine Renaissance man who must rarely sleep and is driven by the passions of his curiosities. He has authored countless papers on his topic and been awarded a number of prestigious awards for his research. Both NPR and its sister station in the UK selected his previous book, "Don't Sleep, There Are Snakes," as one of the best books of 2009. He is also an ardent filmmaker and musician. As a young man Everett was a missionary in the Americas; he has a PH.D. in linguistics and has taught classes and chaired departments in universities around the world. He is currently dean of arts and sciences at Bentley University.

He says the purpose of his book is "to inform and debate" his central question, which is how do language and culture shape one another?

A wine and cheese reception will follow Everett's talk, where his book will be available for purchase and signing. Admission is free, but seating is limited. To ensure a spot, reserve a seat online at cohassetlibrary.org or phone the library at 383-1348 ext 1 or pick up a ticket at the library's circulation desk.

Note: "Cohasset Reads Together" author Dennis Lehane will speak about his book, "The Given Day," on May 5. Pick up your tickets now at the library and watch for upcoming programming announcements throughout the month of April.

Sunday AuthorTalks is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and the Cook Estate. Bruce Sinclaire, owner of A Taste for Wine and Spirits, donates the wines for post-talk receptions.

ELECTION

Karen Quigley

Quigley pulled nomination papers last Thursday, March 21, the last day they were available. She is calling her campaign "A Return to Reason."

Quigley wrote the following statement: "I am launching my campaign to return to Cohasset's Board of Selectmen based on a simple, fundamental premise that I believe is the bedrock upon which a community is based. I believe it's time to return to a culture that respects the law, respects Town Meeting vote, and respects our employees and our citizens. It's time to return to a climate where reasonable people can disagree and still reach reasonable decisions.

"Financial stability is a priority, and can be resolved while considering the human side of the equation. The mindset that every problem has a bottom line and once you solve the bottom line you solve the problem is shortsighted and only creates more problems.

"We need to find reasonable solutions to meet the needs of our seniors and our schools, to maintain and repair our infrastructure and continue to provide quality services at Town Hall.

"We must restore people's confidence in Town Hall. I have the background and experience to join in creating a solution that will return Cohasset on a path to a positive future. I intend to demonstrate to the voters of Cohasset that I represent a realistic and positive option in the upcoming election."

Bill Burnett

Burnett is running for election for the first time, and issued the following statement: "I am pleased to announce that I am running for a seat as a Selectman for the town of Cohasset in the upcoming election. After much thoughtful consideration and with the support of my wife, Sigrid, I have decided to enter into the race this year.

"As many of you understand and have experienced, it takes commitment and dedication to compete in any race, athletic or political. I am committed to Cohasset and to acting on behalf of the citizens in preserving our town while making needed improvements to keep in pace with the changing times. I bring a dedication to work the hours needed and to bring about improved communications and relationships between the town officials, administration and the citizens they represent. There are many tough issues and difficult situations that need to be addressed in our town. We need someone committed to the town, the schools and the valuable resources of Cohasset."

Also running

The School Committee also has two open seats, and two citizens are running: current chair Jeanne Astino, and Mary McGoldrick. Current member Linda Snowdale is not running for reelection.

The following folks have also pulled and returned papers (although according to the Town Clerk, not everyone's papers have been certified yet):

- Library Board of Trustees (three seats for three years): Sarah Pease and Teresa Polhemus (incumbents), James Sandell;
- Board of Health (one three-year seat): Elizabeth Kirkpatrick (currently filling seat vacated by longtime member Steve Bobo);
- Cohasset Housing Authority (unexpired term for one year): Virginia Najmi (incumbent), James Sheerin;
- Board of Assessors (one three-year position): Elsa Miller;
- Planning Board (one five-year full member and one three-year associate member): Charles Samuelson (incumbent) running for the full position and Michael Dickey for the associate membership;
- Recreation Commission: Kimberly Mulcahy;
- Sewer Commission: William McGowan.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Sleepy election, no more

One thing is for sure – the Selectmen's race in the annual Town Election is going to be the most hotly contested one in years.

There is an unprecedented five people running for two seats. Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson is not seeking a third term. Incumbent Lee Jenkins is seeking a second term and he will face off against, Russell Bonetti, Bill Burnett, Steve Gaumer and Karen Quigley.

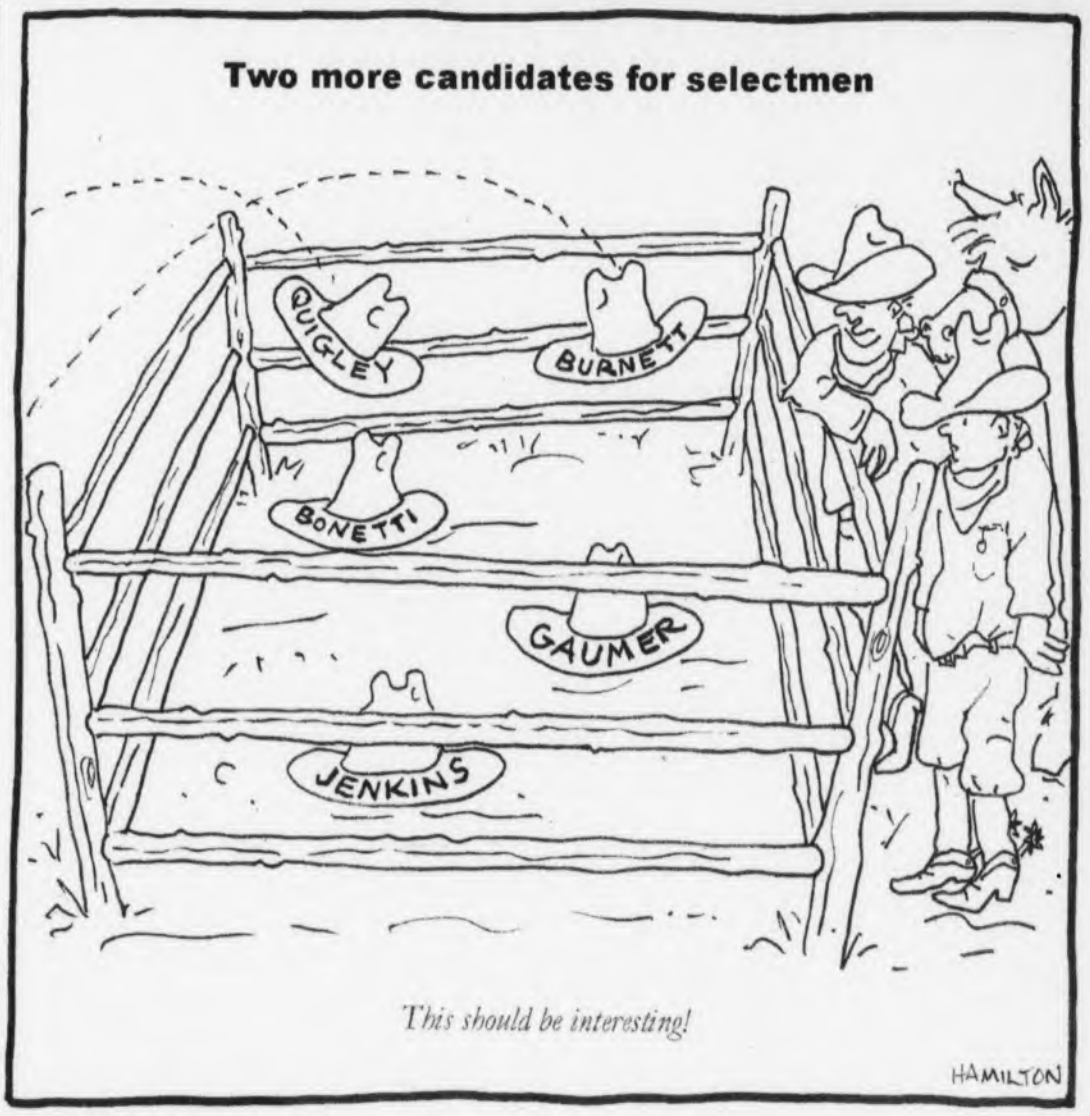
As in keeping with our tradition, we will pose a Question of the Week to local candidates in contested races.

Starting next week, we will feature selectmen candidates' answers to the Question of the Week. Responses should be brief — no more than 250 words — and must be received by noon Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

The following is the first Question of the Week for the Board of Selectmen candidates:

Saturday, May 11 could turn out to be a beautiful spring day that could affect turnout. Why should Cohasset residents care about the selectman's race or which candidate gets elected?

Candidates should reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com; by fax at 781-741-2931. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Wednesday deadline.



We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words) per week, from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers or short statements on issues.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

Candidates should not use their responses to the Question of the Week or their submission to the candidates' corner for personal attacks.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com

All candidates opposed or unopposed are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies. There is no word limit on formal announcements but if the text is overly long, it could be held a week or two for space reasons.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Startled by fee at transfer station

A copy of this letter was provided to the Cohasset Mariner.

Dear Members of the Board of Selectmen:

I am writing to you regarding a matter that took place at the Cohasset Transfer Station on Saturday, March 16, 2013.

My husband, Pat Plante, took some used kitchen cabinets and placed them in his utility trailer, which he attached to his non-commercial Dodge van to dispose at the facility.

The gentleman working the scales gave Pat a slip, (see copy enclosed) said the weight was 2,240 pounds and charged him $448.

My husband almost had a heart attack – but paid the amount – inquiring about the tremendous cost!

Pat called Carl Sestito on the telephone, and Carl stated that the fees had increased! Neither of us were aware of this exorbitant increase in the fees, and in our quest to find out what is going, on, have only learned that yes, the fees were increased, although we were not aware of this, and there is no signage at the transfer station to notify the residents.

The Town of Scituate charges $120 per ton; and the Town of Hingham charges $120 per ton. However, the Town of Norwell charges only $75 per ton for non-commercial vehicles.

Please advise when this fee was increased and by what authority!

Maria A. Plante, 18 Grace Drive

Kind, caring helpers appreciated

On the snowy day of Tuesday, 19 March, my wife and I both had midday medical appointments. Our driveway had not been plowed, but there were only about 3 inches of new-fallen snow, except at the S. Main Street end where the plows had cleared the street entirely, with edges of 6 or 8 inches of plow-packed snow.

I went out to stand in S. Main Street to watch or halt traffic so my wife could back the car up fast enough to scrunch through the plowed snow. Walking through 3 inches was easy enough, but the deeper heavy snow was another matter. Each step was hampered by weight and balance, and nearly through the plow snow, I lost my balance and fell forward on the street, out of the snow, on hands and left knee. Then I was shocked to discover that my right leg was not strong enough to alone lift me up. While I was planning to move my left knee forward to help lift up, a northbound car stopped and a young woman came over to help. She was attractive but slender and I thought gracious but perhaps not strong enough to lift my dead weight – still 200 pounds at age 84.

But then, a snowplow southbound stopped to help, and another northbound car stopped, and behind him, an unmarked Cohasset police car stopped, and I was soon on my feet. They all had singly reacted to a sudden surprise need for aid to a stranger. When the snowplow driver got back to his truck, he plowed out the end of the driveway, so all was well.

Naturally, I am sincerely grateful to the four Samaritans who aided me, an unknown stranger. (I am not proud at being the feeble old geezer). Nonetheless I think it deserves a wider Cohasset audience.

The four spontaneous aiders actions are a clear signal of a high level of neighborly concern and civic virtue in Cohasset. They, particularly, can be approving and proud of their actions and the rest of Cohasset can share as well, even in this minor incident.

James A. Mullen, 337 S. Main St.

Remembering my friend, Walter Sweeney

To the People of Cohasset:

To those who remember him or were his friend, I share your grief for loss of your beloved Walter Sweeney. To me, he has always been larger than life. As one of his childhood chums growing up I knew well his energy, his astonishing competitiveness, his legendary athletic ability and his beautiful heart. I have been part of some Walter stories, listened to many and have told some myself to the entertainment of all.

As the youngest of the colorful Jerusalem Road Sweeney clan, Walter had much to overcome and much to prove. His competitiveness no doubt was due in part to his brothers, all gifted athletes in their own right. He went to college, was a fabled football player there and had a storied career in the NFL as one of their all-time greats.

For much of his life and indeed throughout much of his career he fought the demons of drug and alcohol abuse both personal and institutional. Through it all though, he maintained the Sweeney charm, wit and spirit. Walter you are a true Cohasset Favorite Son whose athletic exploits thrilled us and made us proud of our small town. I consider myself honored to have been your friend. I will miss you Walter. Thanks for the memories.

Enjoy your day, whatever the weather

LOUISE SMULLEN

In just about a month it will be time to hang the hummingbird feeders out to welcome our tiny guests back from the south.

Happy Easter to all. What will the weather bring? Snow? Rain? Or will the sun shine brightly? Whatever the weather, enjoy your day. Hopefully the storms of winter have passed. Having grown up in New England I do like to see a little snow, maybe an inch or two to cover winter's drabness. However, it won't be long before we see the gold of daffodils and forsythia, tulips in all colors of the rainbow and those trees topped with a riot of pink blossoms. In just about a month it will be time to hang the hummingbird feeders out to welcome our tiny guests back from the south.

At the first luncheon in March, Angela Cowgill gave us a demonstration of Zumba exercise. This is similar to aerobics but leans more toward dance and can be adapted to be done while seated in a chair. Angela has a class of Scituate seniors and will conduct one here if enough people sign up.

Two fourth grade classes from Deer Hill School have joined us for lunch. It is always a pleasure to have them visit.

On March 13, the Cohasset Police Association hosted a traditional corned beef and cabbage dinner in honor of St. Patrick 's Day. After the meal, Mr. DJ entertained with a quiz show. Teams of two men and two women from the audience took part. Each had a mike and buzzer as in "Jeopardy." Multiple choice questions were asked and the first to hit their buzzer got to answer the question.

The annual Valentine Tea had to be rescheduled because of the great blizzard. It will now be a "Springtime Tea" and will take place April 2 in Bates Hall at the Second Congregational Church at noon. Come enjoy tasty tea sandwiches and delightful desserts. A vocalist will entertain with familiar melodies. Looking forward to seeing you there.

Assault weapons vs. children's safety

ELISA CASTIGLIONI

Universal background check is essential. It's the minimum of what we can aspire to have, given that we live in a civilized society and not in a country at war.

On Sunday my husband and I celebrated our daughter's sixth birthday. A happy day. A party full of friends. Happiness and friends are exactly want you want for your child, as they often come together.

Yet a side of me was sadder that ever. And the same was for my husband. We kept thinking of the parents who this year won't celebrate their child's birthday. We thought of Newtown.

Twenty children and six educators were killed in five minutes with an assault weapon. Right the kind of arm that the Congress didn't include in the plan to reduce gun violence. Some congressmen are not sure that banning military weapons will reduce gun violence. Well, this massacre wouldn't have happened with a handgun. Every policeman can explain you why.

The solution suggested by the Congress to the problem of mass-shooting is universal background check. It's like giving a cup of water to hydrate the body of someone dying of pneumonia. "Here have some water." Yet what the patient needs are specific medicaments.

Universal background check is essential. It's the minimum of what we can aspire to have, given that we live in a civilized society and not in a country at war.

Even Sylvester Stallone said that no one needs an assault weapon to hunt or protect his family. (He used more colorful words than mine to express himself.)

The weapon used to kill the Newtown Angels should be banned legally and morally. If the Congress doesn't act now, I ask you: when?

How can we keep on living as if nothing happened?

I can't.

That's why I write about gun control. Writing smoothes my pain. Knowing that someone will read my words and will agree with me on this makes me feel less lonely.

Big newspapers don't talk a lot about gun control. The editor of an important parenting magazine just told me "enough with article on gun violence." I agree: enough. Yet as long as gun violence will be part of our daily life, we have the moral duty to write and publish articles on this topic.

Then there are community papers like the Cohasset Mariner and Hingham Journal who are never tired of keeping our attention focused on what matters. To them I am so grateful.

I moved to Cohasset six months ago and I have been living in the US for six years. I am Italian, as some of your ancestors were. Maybe your grandma was from my hometown.

Today I'll write to the Congress. Again. Even if, like your grandma, I am not American. I'll write, as I love this country. I love children. I want happiness for them. For all of them. I want play-dates and birthday parties and math night at school. I want a society free from gun violence. Free from assault weapons.

I'll write as this problem is not just about American laws. It is about humanity. It is about who we are. The Roman Emperor Marcus Aurelius wrote in his memoir, "The measure of a man is the worth of the things he cares about."

Well, If we don't care about our children's safety and future, we are very very little persons. Minuscule, worthless beings. Bugs with i-phones and computers and credit cards.

The Congress needs to hear your voice. Your voice counts. We have few weeks before the Congress is back to work in April. By then the daffodils will be in bloom. In the language of flowers, they mean rebirth.

Public scolding did little for informed discussion

RALPH DORMITZER

The statement inflamed passions already evident in the room and made impossible a dispassionate discussion of the merits or lack thereof of a public safety department.

The selectmen's meeting of last Thursday, March 21, was disturbing to watch. On the agenda was a discussion of the budget, organization charts, and the public safety labor contracts. The room was packed. Immediately on convening the meeting, Paul Carlson was asked by Fred Koed for permission to read a prepared statement. The statement was six pages long and took about 5 minutes to read.

In it Fred expressed ignorance of two provisions in the new collective bargaining contract for the Cohasset police department that had been negotiated on behalf of the selectmen by the acting town manager and signed by Fred and the other selectmen on Jan. 12, 2013. The two provisions authorized potential stipends to police officers who became trained as either emergency medical technicians (EMTs) or Firefighter 1s. No funding had been negotiated for the stipend, so the funding column in the contract read "TBA."

Fred's position was that he had no knowledge that those provisions were in the contract he had signed; that the town manager had failed to alert him of these provisions; and that the public policy implications of the potential changes had not been discussed. I take him at his word that he is sincere in these assertions. Fred implied that it was the acting town manager's fault that he had no knowledge of the two provisions – in spite of having signed the contract himself and having been in many executive sessions that discussed the public safety collective bargaining agreements.

Legitimate or not, it was a complaint that one would normally have addressed in a one-on-one with the town manager, not as a public scolding, particularly because Fred admitted that it was a failure of his own stewardship of town affairs. One would expect that a selectman would read an important collective bargaining agreement before signing it. With regard to the public policy implications, Fred was correct, yet the reorganization of the police and fire departments into a public safety department had been discussed by the BOS in public many times, and there was general agreement on its implementation and the details with regard to structure and functions. In fact, the training of policemen as EMTs is unquestionably in the public interest. The police are often the first responders on emergency 911 calls and equipping them with the skills to save a life is perhaps the most obvious benefit that could result from the change to a public safety department. A case could also be made for training police in basic fire safety procedures, although the argument for the extensive training required to be a Firefighter 1 is not, in my view, obvious. It is also viewed by the firefighters as a serious overreach by the police department.

Fred's prepared statement, therefore, did not result in an informed public discussion of the merits of a public safety department. The statement inflamed passions already evident in the room and made impossible a dispassionate discussion of the merits or lack thereof of a public safety department. It did not reflect well on Fred and it impugned the integrity of the acting town manager. It also had the regrettable effect of making more difficult the acting town manager's ongoing negotiations with the firefighters' union. The result was an unproductive meeting which was disturbing to those who watched it and those who participated in it.

FAMOUS PLACES

Pope Francis and Buenos Aires

MARY KENNEDY

On Monday, March 13, 2013, white smoke billowed above the Sistine Chapel, signifying the election of the 266th pope of the Roman Catholic Church. In the long line of popes stretching almost 2000 years, Francis is the first non-European of the modern era, the first Jesuit, and the first from Latin America where 460 million of the world's 1.2 billion Roman Catholics live.

Jorge Mario Bergoglio was born in Buenos Aires on Dec. 17, 1937, the first son of Italian parents. His father, Mario Jorge, a railway worker, disgusted with Mussolini and the rise of Fascism, had emigrated from Italy in the mid 1920s. The capital of Argentina was a reasonable choice. Between 1870 and 1914 over 2 million Italians, including his future wife's family, had arrived in Buenos Aires, more than half the number immigrating to the U.S. After World War I thousands more Italians boarded ships to sail more than 6,000 nautical miles to a country that welcomed immigrants.

Today, Portenos – as these capital city citizens are called – like to joke among themselves that they are descended from "people who came off boats." The very first to arrive in 1536, Spanish explorers seeking gold (as always), named the tiny settlement Nuestra Senora de la Santisima Trinidad de los Buenos Aires (Our Lady of the Blessed Trinity of Good Airs). Europeans have been landing here ever since.

Sometimes called the Paris of South America with its wide boulevards, attractive parks, and rococo decorations on public buildings, the city's makeup seems more Italian than Spanish in customs and traditions. Italian architectural influences abound in government buildings, the opera house (Teatro Colon) and especially in the Palacio Barolo, designed by a 19th century eccentric Italian architect so enamored of Dante's Inferno that he used the storyline in the building's structure.

Spanish, of course, is the national language, but here it's spoken with an Italian rhythm, lively hand gestures often punctuating words. Italian names far outnumber Spanish in the phone book. Today, in fact, those of Italian descent make up almost 60 percent of the population. Portenos have often been described as "Italians who speak Spanish and think they are English."

One of the city's distinctive neighborhoods, La Boca, (The Mouth), once the bawdy port area, is now known as ' Little Italy." It's also the birthplace of Argentina's national treasure, the tango. With origins from African slave culture and gangster folklore, it was first danced by burly men in bordellos to music popular with Italian immigrants. Considered scandalous, condemned by the church, the tango gained respectability only after Parisian high society adopted the dance in the 1920s. Then it swept the world, and nowhere today is it more passionately performed than here where it was born. In 2009, UNESCO declared tango part of the world's cultural heritage.

So it is that we now have a new pope of Italian descent, a citizen of Argentina who has lived all his life (so far) in Buenos Aires, the cosmopolitan capital, often called The Paris of South America. And, according to one recent report, Pope Francis is also fond of tango music.

FOR THE RECORD

Still here after all these years

Many of our journalists have been in the local newsgathering business for a long time, starting with newspapers well before the Internet changed everything.

GREGORY MATHIS

A few years ago, in the early stages of writing my weekly For The Record column, I wrote about local radio spots being aired by boston.com taking jabs at our "wicked local" network of hyperlocal websites, calling our use of wicked "annoying."

The ads also tried to convince folks that they were your local source for news.

Around that same time, Patch.com sites started sprouting up in Massachusetts communities, many of which fall within our footprint. Patch is owned and operated by AMERICA On Line (AOL).

Needless to say the future of news – online and in print – revolves around being able to connect locally. And big companies like The New York Times Company – current owner of The Boston Globe and boston.com – and AOL have ventured into the hyperlocal web space we navigate.

Full disclosure, our Wicked Local websites and local community newspapers do fall under bigger umbrellas. Collectively, our division of GateHouse Media New England covers most of Eastern Massachusetts from the North Shore to Cape Cod and out through the MetroWest area. We roll up into GateHouse Media, which is a national company with daily and weekly newspapers and community and regional websites all over the country.

But the corporate layering doesn't prevent us from being wicked local, despite what some of our competitors might say. The fact of the matter is many of our journalists have been in the local newsgathering business for a long time, starting with newspapers well before the Internet changed everything.

There has been incredible consistency and retention at many of our key editor and local reporting levels over the years. Personally, I've been in the local community journalism business for more than 27 years covering the South Shore, and now Cape Cod. Many of my colleagues have been covering towns in our footprint for decades as well and live here too. The journalists I work with are not only committed to local community coverage, but have the experience and the local knowledge to bring the most comprehensive and accurate reporting possible.

For many of us, we worked for the local newspaper you read when they were still family-owned. We've seen those family-owned newspaper companies sold to big national companies like the former Capital Cities/ABC Inc. and Fidelity Investments, then more recently to larger local media companies such as Enterprise News Media or The Boston Herald.

The journalists and the ideals of local journalism, however, have remained remarkably in tact through those changes and transactions.

In fact, the Wicked Local website brand was born before GateHouse Media came into the picture, with the launch of Wicked Local Plymouth back in the mid-2000s. Wicked Local Wareham and Wicked Local Duxbury followed. The Wicked Local branding then expanded at the end of 2006 when GateHouse Media entered the Massachusetts market.

It's clear the competitive landscape has changed dramatically and continues to change. But it's also clear – despite what other national media companies want you to believe – Wicked Local and our community publications remain as local as ever.

We have been meeting with residents and discussing the ongoing reforms that I have been helping to accomplish in Cohasset. At the March 21st Selectmen's meeting we successfully completed all of our union contracts in time to take to Town Meeting. This is in compliance with the Bylaw that I initiated in 1995 while a member of the Advisory Board that requires all contracts to be completed 30 days before a town meeting. Before that time we were discussing contracts in the minutes leading up to the opening of town meeting. I am pleased that our Acting Town Manager has begun leading us down a road to efficient and effective management of our resources but we still have quite a way to go. HELD THURSDAY, MARCH 21

Marathon meeting airs police, fire contract dispute

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Sparks flew during last week's Selectmen's meeting as Selectman Fred Koed and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski each came with prepared statements over how the police contract has played out.

There was plenty of drama during the marathon meeting that went into the wee hours of the morning with a late executive session. The chief dispute: how informed must the town manager keep the selectmen when it comes to contract negotiations and structural changes in departments? Furthermore, what is the role of police officers and firefighters, and should the two ever be cross-trained?

During the Thursday, March 21 meeting, Selectmen heard a fiscal year 2014 budget presentation from Milanoski that included the public safety departments, police and fire, and discussion on the union contracts for each.

While the fire contract was still being negotiated with the local firefighters' union at the time, the police contract had been ratified (The fire contract was subsequently ratified pending Town Meeting approval as is the case with union contracts).

However, an item in the contract on stipends for specialty training was flagged by selectman Fred Koed as something he claimed not to notice in his initial review of the contract.

The contract states in Article 5 that police officers can be paid stipends for undergoing additional training to become a first responder, EMT or firefighter one. However, Acting Police Chief William Quigley pointed out that all police officers are already first responders by law.

In the Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) between the town and police union, "Level One" police officer specialists include detectives, court prosecutors and communications specialists, among other specialties. Those who become certified in these areas received stipends of $1850. "Level Two" specialists are an EMT or "Firefighter One," while "Level Three" specialists are described as "First Responder/AED." In the contract, neither Level One nor Level Two specialists have stipends attached; the pay for each is listed as "TBA" (To Be Announced). However, Milanoski said that there is $10,000 in the budget to fund the stipends.

According to sources, the controversy brewing between the public safety departments and the town is this: while neither police nor firefighters seem to be opposed to the idea of police officers receiving EMT training, both sides are adamant that they do not want to do the other's job. In other words, they are not in favor of a singular "public safety" department wherein there is little or no distinction between firefighters and police officers. Rumors to this end have been circulating in online commentaries, social media sites and blogs over the past few months.

Milanoski tried to make it explicitly clear that he was only talking about EMT training, not cross-training police officers or firefighters.

Folks in the audience, which included several firefighters and other town employees, begged to differ that EMT training was the real issue on the table. Koed also challenged Milanoski on this point several times, stating that cross-training appeared to be a reality because the position of "firefighter one" exists in the police contract, which has already been signed.

"You're talking about public safety officers — that's not what I'm talking about," Milanoski said in response to Koed. "That's where this big hullabaloo is coming from. I'm not saying we're gong to have a public safety department; that's where the fear is. I'm focused on EMTs only."

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis stated, "Every word in a contract has meaning," and explained that Cohasset's Town Manager Act gives the town manager authority to negotiate contracts without selectmen approval. Cohasset tradition has allowed the selectmen to review and sign contracts, however. In this case the selectmen did sign the police contract.

However, Koed said that while he could support the notion of training police as EMTs, he was not in favor of approving something that had not been publicly vetted before, with only a few weeks to go before Town Meeting (April 22).

"It could be the greatest idea in the world," Koed said to Milanoski. "But we've got to have public meetings to vet" these issues. "It's very important to me — this is the policy setting board of the town. You're supposed to check in with us now and then. The five of us [the selectmen] have input, but this is the first time I'm hearing about it... I might as well be a potted plant."

Several public safety personnel on both the police and fire side of the house said during a Tuesday, March 26 discussion that they were in favor of EMT training and stipends for police officers. However, most felt that the potential impact on future budgets should be studied before implementing the practice (see related story).

The selectmen adjourned to an executive session to discuss the fire contract around 11 p.m. By midnight they were still in discussion. The Mariner learned that the meeting came back into open session and ended between 1 and 2 a.m. The selectmen voted to approve a clerical contract and. the police lieutenant's contract. It was announced during the March 26 selectmen meeting that the fire contract was also ratified (see related story).

Town employees question their jobs

Tension mounted during a discussion on the Town Hall organization chart, which involves moving several employees around. While Cohasset's Town Manager Act allows the town manager to reconfigure town departments, some took issue with his proposed changes. However, selectman Fred Koed noted that an acting town manager is not supposed to reorganize the entire town.

Mary Snow of the Dept. of Public Works said that Milanoski was "putting the cart before the horse," as the town employees had not agreed to any changes.

Koed said that if the town employees are unhappy with the proposed changes, the selectmen should listen to them. "Morale is important to this board."

Selectman Leland Jenkins responded, "Employees don't run this town... We run this town."

Koed interjected, "We should listen to what they have to say."

An awkward moment arose when an employee, who was in the audience, asked Milanoski about her job, which is losing hours and benefits. The employee, Jennifer Ferrick, is currently on maternity leave and found out that her 35-hour per week position (public safety department secretary) was being reduced to 19 hours with no benefits; this was after already having her hours cut from 40 last year, she said. She said that she has been working for the town for 14 years.

Milanoski said in a phone call Thursday that the public safety secretary position will now be 25 hours per week, and the employee will still receive retirement benefits.

Ferrick's position is currently being covered by Jennifer Oram, Assistant to the Town Manager, who was Cohasset's Acting Town Manager for a month in the summer of 2011, before former Town Manager Michael Coughlin took the helm in August that year.

In a March 15 email to Milanoski, also sent to the selectmen, Oram indicated that she did not want to remain working in the public safety department. Milanoski is proposing a position called Public Safety Manager that he would like to appoint Oram to starting in July 2013, the start of FY14. The salary is $16,000 lower than total wages Oram currently receives, which she said would be a 20 percent reduction in pay. Oram has been working in the town manger's office for seven years and said that she is better suited for the Assistant Town Manager/HR position, since she has received HR training.

Oram wrote that if she is to be transferred to the police and fire departments, "it seems only fair that this transition is a lateral one and my pay rate, including my stipends for my additional duties, would remain intact."

She concluded her letter asking for a formal job description for the public safety manager role, and a written explanation on "why you think the Assistant [Town] Manager position isn't a natural fit for me."

Milanoski said the discussion with Ferrick about her job was not appropriate for a public meeting and should take place in executive session. He wrote in a March 22 email to the Mariner that Oram's current position, Administrative Assistant to the Town Manager, is the same grade and step as the proposed Public Safety Office Manager – Grade IX, Step 10 – and has the same salary.

Both selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Diane Kennedy said during the meeting that they did not like the title "Assistant Town Manager" and were not in favor of the position, which Milanoski also proposed. Gjesteby also said that she did not like what was happening to Oram's job, stating that Oram works hard for the town.

Milanoski said Thursday that while the organization chart is still being finalized, the position of Public Safety Office Manager – renamed Police and Fire Office Manager – is programmed into the FY14 budget. It will be a 35-hour per week position.

He said of the need for the position, "There is a lot more technical work that needs to be done for those departments and this position will help with fulfilling all of the legal requirements that are necessary for the [public safety] department."

CONTRACTS

William Quigley has been Acting Chief since May.

Police officer EMT training and stipends, the public safety department organizational structure, and both the police and fire budget were also discussed.

The town manager, selectmen and public safety personnel seemed to agree on the controversial notion of training police officers to be EMTs, and offering a stipend for the training, which was outlined in the police contract with the stipend amount left blank, "to be determined." Milanoski said Tuesday that there is $5,000 total in the public safety budget to fund EMT training stipends. The current thought is that officers who pay the $900 to get certified will receive a $1,000 stipend. However, it is unknown at this time whether the town or officers would bear the costs of re-certification in future years.

Last Thursday's debate centered on whether this change in the police contract would lead to cross-training of firefighters and police officers, something several on both sides came out in strong opposition against. Milanoski said he was focused only on improving public safety operations in the town.

However, some firefighters said that there were discussions between the town manager and public safety personnel about cross-training police and fire.

Fire captain Paul Bilodeau said that these discussions happened. "There were plans, and they may have been far-reaching, to train police to do fire work," said Bilodeau. But the bottom line, he said, is that neither police officers nor firefighters want to do one another's jobs. "Policemen become policemen because they want to hold guns — firemen become firemen because they want to run into burning buildings. The policemen don't want to do firemen's work and the firemen don't want to do policemen's work."

Fire Chief Robert Silvia said that he was in favor of EMT training in general. "I am behind the highest level of training for any first responders... The highest level the town can afford is what we should strive to achieve."

Jack Hernan, head of the Cohasset firefighter's union, also said that he had no problem with the training.

Quigley agreed that the training is a "good thing for the town." Cohasset's police department currently has two officers who are trained EMTs; however, Quigley said both officers came to Cohasset having already received their EMT certification. The acting chief also noted that all police officers are trained as first responders, per legal mandate.

Overtime

This week's discussion had the selectmen, Milanoski, and public safety chiefs agreeing that while the EMT training is a good idea, its budget impact should be studied before a stipend is implemented. Milanoski suggested a $25,000 study to determine what the town of Cohasset wants in terms of public safety. This would also explore whether the police department should have an increased budget, since the department has currently expended nearly $300,000 in overtime. Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore said that at the current burn rate, the police will expend $500,000 in overtime this year.

Milanoski said that the police department would eliminate a currently unfilled lieutenant's position in order to hire a new patrolman.

Having a new union position would help ease the overtime, which is structural overtime because the police department does not have enough personnel, said Quigley. There are currently four shift slots that are not being covered.

"We only have 14 people working nine shifts," said Quigley. "We need 17 people working the four and two schedule to not have a structural overtime."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that while she understood the need to have additional "boots on the ground," she was not in favor of eliminating the lieutenant position.

Vice-president of Cohasset's Police Union, Christy Tarantino, said that he agreed with Kennedy that it's important to have an advanced position for officers to aspire to, for morale reasons.

Milanoski said that he would take another crack at the budget to see if the department could afford both, but it would probably involve taking money away from other town departments. Selectmen indicated they were in favor of this if it meant improved public safety.

The selectmen planned to take the public safety budget and organizational structure up at their Thursday, March 28 meeting. Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner and check wickedlocalcohasset.com

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

FY14 school budget approved

The School Committee held a hearing on the Fiscal Year 2014 budget on March 20. The total budget amount is $16,237,032. It is not a level funded budget as there was a 2.34 percent increase ($370,970) over the current fiscal year.

The budget amount meets the figure that the Town Manager asked the schools to meet, while still allowing for a few new positions. These include a new first grade teacher, two new Special Ed. team chairs, and a new high school position for a computer science/video production advisor.

Assumptions in the budget include increases in contractual obligations, fixed costs and new positions, salary increases for some teachers, custodian unions and administrators, along with obligations for department chairs.

The school committee voted unanimously to approve the budget. Look for more on the budget in upcoming editions of the Mariner.

Last day of school: June 27

Pending any additional snow days, the last day of Cohasset schools will be Thursday, June 27. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo expressed her concern to the School Committee that school will have to go until Friday, June 28 if the schools have to close again for inclement weather. Last Tuesday's snow day marked the school district's seventh this school year. The school used up several days between October's Superstorm Sandy and February's Blizzard Nemo.

Cataldo asked the school board to consider having a half-day on Good Friday (March 29), which is a vacation day for teachers and students; it would count as a full day. The school board debated the issue and asked audience members, many of whom were parents, to share their thoughts. Many were concerned over school ending so late and expressed that they would rather lose the Good Friday holiday than have students stay in school so late in June, when the building gets hot.

School committee member Paul Ognibene was concerned that a last-minute change to the calendar would not give families enough time to plan ahead. SC member Helene Lieb said that it would not be fair to teachers who have children of their own, who would have to come to work that day and find child care in only a week's time.

The school board voted unanimously to keep the current calendar as is, in hopes that there will not be any more closures before the end of the year. The school year is set to end on June 27.

About the Social Service League

The mission of the Social Service League is to help those who need it most. The SSL identifies and assists disadvantaged individuals of all age groups within our community. The goal is to create, develop and support programs that directly benefit those in need. This is accomplished by donating generously, volunteering selflessly, and funding educational programs that will deliver positive and beneficial impact.
Through benevolent and charitable efforts, the SSL is determined to make a positive impact on the community. Primary areas of focus include:
- Elder Service Programs
- Teen Safety Programs
- Families in Crisis

The Social Service League of Cohasset celebrated its 100th year anniversary last weekend with a special gala held at the Atlantica restaurant, complete with dinner and dancing to the sounds of the Bo Winniker Band.

Earlier this week, the Mariner sat down with members of the league to discuss the non-profit's rich history of helping Cohasset, and the vision for supporting the community well into the future, including the proposed new Senior Center on Sohier Street. Present at the SSL's office in the Stop & Shop Plaza (790 Chief Justice Cushing Highway) were SSL President Marita Carpenter, Rick Stockwood, and longtime member Joyce "Jeff" Steele (Jeff is her nickname, which she said has stuck over the years), who was honored at the gala for her nearly 50 years of service with the SSL.

Cohasset Mariner: How did the gala go on Saturday? Was there a big turnout?

Marita Carpenter: It was a great night; we had a lot of fun, and a lovely dinner and dancing courtesy of the Bo Winniker Band. We featured artwork from four local artists for silent auction. We also honored Jeff for almost 50 years of service with a performance by [Boston's] Atlantic Symphony Orchestra violinist Ethan Wood, playing her favorite pieces... We have also given a grant to the orchestra to honor Jeff.

Joyce "Jeff" Steele: It was lovely. The party was in full swing, and it's amazing what can happen in a crowd like that... [Wood] put his bow to the string and the crowd went silent. There was a real cross-section of age and population from the community [in attendance]... There were lots of supporters, people who feel strongly about the Social Service League, and a lot of younger people who realize there is a need for these things.

Marita: We had about 120 people.

Jeff: We couldn't have fit any more!

Marita: We wanted a big dance floor.

Mariner: For background, how has the Social Service League served Cohasset over the past century?

Rick Stockwood: The Social Service League can keep an eye on things that most people don't see day to day... Especially in Cohasset, where you don't think of poverty or vulnerability, but it's a reality in every community. The key point is why the Social Service League in 2013 is important... it's a little different than [it was] in 1913.

Mariner, to Jeff: How did you get started with the League?

Jeff: I've been involved for 48 years...There very few people in the Social Service League back then.

Mariner: How many people were involved then, versus now?

Marita: We have board officers...There are nine total.

Jeff: It varies from administration to administration, but I think [it started with] about seven or eight people who felt there was a need [in Cohasset], a very small need at that time. It was basically to provide for shut-ins, and make sure they had lunch.

Marita: It was a different time.

Jeff: We really started out by going down to the Red Lion Inn. Irving Coen [manager at the time] provided meals... better than most any of us had in our house!

Marita: That's how Meals on Wheels started.

Jeff: It grew after that because it was compartmentalized and taken over by government, and South Shore Elder Affairs... It's interesting to see how the focus has changed over the years.

Marita: We started a school lunch program, a nurse program... There very forward-thinking women involved back in the day.

Jeff: Of course, they had the time. We [women] weren't working— we were home. Now it seems to be turning again. Now, the focus probably is the Senior Center and the Scituate Animal Shelter, because of the trust that we've had [with them]. That's going to incorporate young people. I think we've done an awful lot for youth; we've so many programs for their problems...

Marita: Bullying...

Jeff: Computers... Too much TV...

Marita: We have a nice relationship with the South Shore Hospital Youth Health Connection. It's a really nice fit. We're sponsoring a program next week in Hingham called "Cancer and the Family."

Mariner: When did the League start helping the Scituate Animal Shelter?

Jeff [on the shelter]: They're outstanding.

Marita: We started that five years ago. We created a fund that helps seniors who can't otherwise afford to feed their pets. We discovered through Meals on Wheels that some people were sharing their food with their pets.

Mariner: The League also provides scholarships for students who want to go on overseas trips, right?

Marita: We have provided scholarship grants to the high school for Camp Bournedale, and for college every year. Last year we gave out three [college scholarships] for students going into the allied health fields.

Jeff: We have always worked with the schools. They usually bring a student forward and we help financially.

Marita: We also did college fairs, when needed. Now, a lot of that [information] is online.

Jeff: We did all the health fairs on the common, and had seminars... And of course we had the consignment shop [it closed in June 2011 after over 50 years of operation]. It was a whole different situation then [when the shop first opened]. Today, we can't really compete with Kohl's.

Marita: Target and Old Navy put us out of business! It's actually a good thing, because it gives us more time to focus on the health and welfare of everyone in town.

Jeff: It was a wonderful thing... It brought awareness [to the SSL].

Marita: And it promoted volunteerism. With the senior center, our focus on that will also promote volunteerism... We're going to build a multi-generational facility people will want to be a part of.

Jeff: Cohasset is different from a lot of towns; the majority of people who came here want to stay here. We try to make things possible, which in turn is helpful for their families.

Rick: The center definitely helps, but the League also provides air conditioning to seniors in summer, ensures their safety in winter... There's a whole gamut of things that are not just about a building with four walls on Sohier Street.

Marita: Around the holidays, we provide meals and gift baskets.

Mariner: Is that everything? It seems that the League has a hand in every area.

Jeff: I love the spread of their interests.

Marita: We've got a good range. In a small town like ours, we're really quick to see the need... We're keeping a lookout to lend that hand when people need that.

Jeff: Certain parts of town are isolated from other parts of the world. You realize that these people have need.

Note: The SSL also hired Cohasset's first Town Nurse in 1912. According to Carpenter, the nurse was called the "horse and buggy lady." The new Senior Center could house both the town nurse and the Veterans' Service Officer.

Marita [on nurse and VSO]: We'd like to get back to providing that service, privacy and space.

Look for an update on the proposed Senior Center project, and more on the Social Service League in upcoming editions of the Mariner.

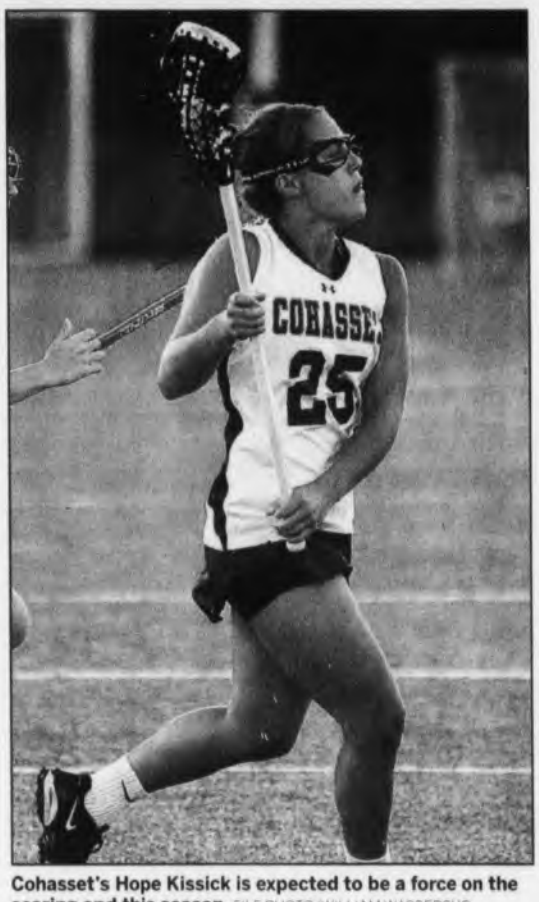
COLLEGE LACROSSE

Leahy leads Emmanuel

The Emmanuel College Women's Lacrosse Team battled to a 15-12 overtime victory at Regis College in the Saints' season opener. Senior co-captain Madeline Leahy (Cohasset, Mass.) had her hand in eight of the Saints' 15 goals, scoring five times and dishing out three assists on the night. Emmanuel took last year's contest with Regis in overtime as well, a 13-12 victory for the 2012 season opener. The all-time series between these two programs now stands at 2-1 in favor of Emmanuel. With tonight's loss, Regis falls to 1-2 on the season, while Emmanuel kicks off the year at 1-0 with the win.

Leahy scored with only 37 seconds remaining in regulation to tie the score at 12-12 and force overtime.



Emmanuel added three goals in the extra period to down the Pride.

Girls win first full scrimmage

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset High School girl's lacrosse team played their first full scrimmage on Wednesday against BBN and dominated for most of the game, opening up a 15-5 lead before surrendering the final four goals of the game as they experimented with lineup changes in preparation for the regular season. The defense set the tone early and forced BBN into multiple turnovers and poor shots. Defenders Molly Fitzgerald, Megan Fitzgerald and Kyle Burke smothered the attacking BBN players and gave goalie Kylie Coffman outstanding protection in the first half, which led to only two scores by BBN. Taylor Frederick took over between the pipes in the second half and made seven saves, including several stuffs from in close.

The Skippers look to have a high powered offense going into the season, led by Hope Kissick who scored seven goals on the day. Kathryn Dunn had a hat trick and two assists as well as several excellent draw controls from the center position. Maddie Curley had a goal and showed strong two way play from her midfield position. Paige Carrabes assisted on several scores and added her own goal on a free position shot. Kristin Alexander, Ally Leahy and Corey Golden also tallied once and moved the ball well in the offensive zone.

Coach Kully Reardon was pleased with the team's effort but sees room for improvement, "Today was a great start to the season. We definitely need to improve on a few things but it was nice to see where we are at," she said. "The best part of today was to see two teams come together for a great cause."

Cohasset kicked off the season last week with their first practices and round robin scrimmages against Norwell, Scituate and Hingham. If the scrimmages were any indication, the Skippers will be a strong team as they defeated Norwell and Hingham and tied Scituate. The team is coming off a promising season in 2012 in which they won a tournament game and played well against some very tough competition. First year Coach Kully Reardon is excited about the team and what could be a special season, "This year we have limitless potential. The upperclassmen are great leaders and will welcome the underclassmen and teach them how to perform under pressure. If we can all gel together we will be very difficult to beat."

Prior to the BBN scrimmage, Coach Reardon and BBN's Coach Bowen Holden, along with their teams, honored the memory of Seton

Jeff Doyle's been around soccer long enough to know that it takes practice, and lots of it, to reach the top. Doyle, who played professionally with the Cape Cod Crusaders of the United Soccer League, also won a national championship with New Hampshire College and was one of only 36 players chosen to go to a Major League Soccer Combine.

Today, Doyle takes all the knowledge he has learned over the years and applies it to the next generation, future high school and college stars, and quite possibly, a professional player. South Shore and Cape Cod.

Doyle has been a part of Crusaders United for five years as a coach and said the junior academy is geared toward promoting player development for children ages 6-10. The academy runs for 10 months throughout the year and has open enrollment year-round. This past year, the academy had more than 100 participants. Academy teams play in the Massachusetts Premier League, commonly referred to as MAPLE.

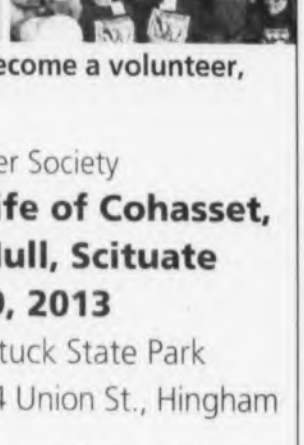
"At this age, the most important thing is to develop a positive attitude," Doyle said. "And we do technical training - how to strike the ball and pass the ball. Repetition is important in academy programs."

Crusaders United has a rich history of developing players. Look no further than its list of alumni, which includes Marshfield's Chris Corcoran, currently playing professionally for GBK in Finland, Niki Cross, who's enjoying tremendous success at the highest level of pro women's soccer in Germany with Bayern Munich, and Brian Johnson, a former Marshfield High standout who went on to have a tremendous career at Rutgers University. Johnson is now the boys varsity head coach at Duxbury High School.

"The role of club soccer has provided a lot of different opportunities for players," Doyle said. "I think soccer has grown here in the U.S. Today's players are starting at an early age. When I was younger, I played soccer in the fall, basketball in the winter, and baseball in the spring. If players don't start (playing soccer) at a young age, they'll have some catching up to do."

Doyle works alongside a staff that has quite the resume itself. It includes Greg Visinho, the assistant women's soccer coach at the University of Massachusetts Boston, Wheaton College mens coach Matt Cushing, and John Tocci, current head boys soccer coach at Plymouth North High School, former Colby College player and assistant girls soccer coach at Plymouth South Brian Kasarjian, former Plymouth North and Trinity College keeper Scott Johnson, former Bridgewater State standout Jordan McDermott, Wheeler School Head Coach Martyn Hollands, and young, highly regarded Crusaders United coaches Jimmy Downing (U8 coach) and Chris O'Leary (U12 coach).

"For coaches, they learn a lot from fellow coaches, going to the NSCAA Convention. You have to better yourself and keep it fresh," Doyle said.



The Crusaders Junior Academy teams practice and play at various facilities and fields across the South Shore and Cape Cod.

"Every sport is doing something similar, playing year-round," Doyle said. "As an academy director, you obviously want commitment, but we do embrace playing other sports."

The training sessions take place at the Bridgewater Sports Dome, Forges Field in Plymouth, Duxbury High School, Mass Maritime, and West Elementary School in Plymouth.

"The most important thing is that kids enjoy it when they're young," Doyle said. "They're going to develop playing with kids like them or better than them. A player has to have their own goals and direction and objectives. They have to have a passion."

Hill University's women's lacrosse coach, Kristina Quigley. Many were saddened by the recent news that the team's bus swerved off the road en route to a game. Coach Quigley, who was six months pregnant with her second boy, and the bus driver were killed instantly.

Her baby did not survive the accident.

Coach Quigley is survived by her husband, Glenn, and first son, Gavin, for whom we will support with contributions to the Gavin Quigley Scholarship Fund. Any amount is appreciated. Throughout the season we will accept donations that will go into an end-of-season donation made on behalf of the entire Cohasset Lacrosse community – players, families, fans and friends.

The Cohasset girls had a collection box available during warm ups and throughout the game to accept donations. The Cohasset girls are taking this commitment one step further...they are dedicating their entire playing season to the memory of Coach Quigley. The team will have the donation box and wear Seton Hill colors with ribbons in their hair at every home and away game this season.

Thank you in advance for your generosity and please help support this worthy cause.

COHASSET RECREATION

Signup now for Summer Xtreme

Program is for students in grades 6-9

Calling all thrill seekers, artists, social butterflies, athletes and laid back boys and girls to sign up for the Summer Xtreme Program. Cohasset Recreation is pleased to once again offer this program to those entering grades 6-9 in the fall of 2013. In the past students have come not only from Cohasset but also Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell and Scituate.

"We are excited about the continued collaboration and strengthening of cooperation between all of our neighboring towns," says Ted Carroll, Cohasset's Recreation Director.

Most traditional town programs are geared towards the younger set, the solution is Summer Xtreme, offering students entering grades 6 through 9 an opportunity to stay active and have fun via field trip destinations around the region, ranging from theme parks and paintball fields to adventurous outings like kayaking on Lake Cochituate which abuts Framingham, Natick, and Wayland and features a small tunnel that leads the young kayakers underneath the Mass. Pike.

This Summer's overnight week includes visits to Canobie Lake Park and Water Country. At Summer Xtreme the groups are kept small so that counselors can get to know each student and ensure the best possible experience

At Summer Xtreme the groups are kept small so that counselors can get to know each student and ensure the best possible experience

The program meets four days a week, Monday through Thursday at Cohasset High School, with field trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays (except where noted.) On Mondays and Wednesdays the group of approximately 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders, and social activities. The program is supervised by experienced Recreation Department counselors and directors. Fee of $113 a week includes a Summer Xtreme shirt and bag. "Summer Xtreme offers the bests of both worlds. It provides kids the independence they are looking for while hanging out with new and old friends from different towns. Most importantly, it does so in a fun and safe atmosphere," according to Carroll.

Summer Xtreme Program Director Michael Curtin has been a middle school teacher at Quincy's Atlantic Middle School for 20 years where he has taught math, science and technology. Curtin also worked for Quincy Recreation for that same amount of time, overseeing after school and gym programs. He has been a sports specialist during summer recreation in Quincy and Co-recreational director for three summers at Great Harbors Resident Association in Falmouth where he operated the swimming pool, organized activities for adults and children and ran tournaments.

To register, contact the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 or email: recreation@townofcohasset.org. Applications are available at: cohassetrec.com

Andrew Barrett receives DAR Good Citizen award

In 1934 the Daughters of the American Revolution created the annual Good Citizen Award to stress the qualities of good citizenship by conducting the annual DAR Good Citizen contest. This contest is open to members of the senior classes of accredited high schools. The student selected as the schools DAR Good Citizen must have the qualities of Dependability — which includes truthfulness, loyalty, and punctuality: Service — which includes cooperation, courtesy, and consideration of others; Leadership — which includes personality, self-control, and the ability to assume responsibility; and Patriotism — which includes unselfish interest in family, school, community, and nation. The procedure followed is for the faculty to choose, by vote, three senior having these qualifications of Dependability, Service, Leadership and Patriotism and from these three, the senior class selects, by vote, the one outstanding student to be the schools DAR Good Citizen. Once a student is chosen as the DAR Good Citizen then the student is invited to participate in writing an essay. The DAR Good Citizen selections are on a merit basis and are not a popularity contest. This program is also recognized by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

The Colonel Thomas Lothrop/Old Colony Chapter of the DAR met on March 10, 2013 at the Lightkeeper's Residence in Cohasset to honor local recipients of the DAR Good Citizens Award. Sponsored through the local chapter, the winners recognized were Andrew Barrett of Cohasset High School, Emily Dang of Hull High School, Danielle Spivack of Whitman-Hanson Regional High School, and Marissa Varrasso of Weymouth High School.

Each student was presented with a certificate and wallet card stating that they are local good citizen recipients. Their families came forward to help pin on the good citizen pins and were congratulated for their outstanding young adults. A small gift and a flag were also given to each good citizen.

Andrew Barrett is the Good Citizen from Cohasset High School and is the son of Thomas and Elinore Barrett. Andrew is the senior class president, chorus president, school committee student representative, school improvement council student representative, Greater Boston Regional Student Advisory Council Cohasset representative, Spinnaker Editor-in-Chief (the student newspaper), Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership, Cohasset representative, Varsity Tennis Captain and Varsity Soccer, Chorus Member, CHS Musical, and Mr. Skipper Pageant. His volunteer work includes annual Appalachian Service Project, annual Saint Patrick's Day Dinner, annual Red Cross Blood Drive, Cohasset Road Race by the Sea, American Cancer Society annual Fundraiser and Walk.

Andrew's work experience includes working at Atlantic and Old Salt House Restaurant as a busboy and function server, and tennis and soccer instructor. Andrew has decided on a career in secondary education. He stated "having seen the affects it has had on my peers and I, I think teaching can be one of the most important professions when it comes to positively influencing others." Additionally he stated, "giving back has always been a common theme in my house growing up my family believes that to whom much is given, much is expected. I often think of this saying daily in everything I do." Andrew truly exemplifies dependability, service, leadership, and patriotism.

ART AWARDS

CHS students recognized in Boston

Works may be awarded Gold Keys, Silver Keys, and Honorable Mention awards. Those who win Gold Keys go on to New York City for a national competition.

A group of Cohasset art students won big at the 2013 Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards ceremony held Sunday, March 3.

This year's competition marked the 90th anniversary for the national program and the 63rd for the statewide contest. In Massachusetts, more than 8,000 students in grades 7 through 12 submitted work for evaluation. Individually there were 13,776 images of student art and 1,559 pieces of student writing, not including those in portfolios from more than 600 seniors.

Winners from Cohasset Middle/High School:

• Hannah Piaseck received an Honorable Mention for her mixed media "The Doctor" (Ms. Rohrer/Ms. Sugrue);

• Caroline Kennedy received an Honorable Mention for her painting "Brunei Night" (Ms. Sugrue);

• Alex Martini received an Honorable Mention for his/her drawing "Iris" (Ms. Swartz);

• Caitlin Mavilia received a Gold Key for her art portfolio (Ms. Berkowitz) and her work will go on to New York City for a national competition.

Panels of three individuals were selected by the advisory board to judge 15 categories of art, ranging from painting to jewelry, and 10 writing genres, from short story to journalism. Works may be awarded Gold Keys, Silver Keys, and Honorable Mention awards. Those who win Gold Keys go on to New York City for a national competition.

Additionally, seniors can submit art, photography, and writing portfolios, with eight pieces each. They are eligible for a Gold Key as well as scholarships to colleges and universities, including two $2,000 scholarships from The Boston Globe and others on a national level.

This year's exhibit of Gold Key and Silver Key Award Winning Art will hang in the State Transportation Building, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, from Monday, February 11 through Friday, April 19. The exhibit is open Weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. including holidays and Saturdays & Sundays from 12 noon to 4 p.m.

Osgood PSO Book Fair

The Joseph Osgood School Parent School Organization, PSO, will host its Scholastic Book Fair Fundraiser from 2 to 7 p.m. Thursday, April 4, at The Joseph Osgood School, 210 Sohier St., Cohasset.

The book fair will offer specially priced books and educational products, including new releases, award-winning titles, children's classics, adult books, and current bestsellers.

Attendees can also help the school build classroom libraries and the school library by purchasing books for teachers through the 'Classroom Wish List'.

The PSO is a non-profit organization comprised of all parents of Cohasset public school students. Our goal is to maximize our student's educational experience. They do this by funding programs and projects that enrich their curriculum. In addition, they coordinate volunteer efforts and facilitate special events that connect the entire school community and improve the experience for our children.

The PSO voices parental responses to school issues, and provides forums for administrators, teachers, and students to present their programs and policies to the public. Through fundraising efforts, like the upcoming Book Fair, the PSO provides programs and activities that enrich the school experience for students, teachers, and parents. Families, teachers, and all members of the community are invited to attend the fair, which will feature a special theme:

Alternative Therapies for Students: Art & Music

The field of art therapy combines both verbal and nonverbal communication to allow for self-expression, insight and personal growth.

Cohasset SEPAC is pleased The Cohasset Special Education Parent's Advisory Council (SEPAC) is pleased to host "Alternative Therapies for Students, Art & Music." A panel discussion with Eve Montague of the South Shore Conservatory and Susan Evans of Skills for Living on Tuesday, April 2nd at 7 p.m. at Paul Pratt Library.

This presentation will focus on the benefits of music therapy and art therapy when working with school-aged children. Music therapy can be part of an IEP; music therapy can work collaboratively with other therapies (OT, PT, SLP); music therapy can enhance learning and teach/reinforce academic, social, communication, emotional/behavioral, and music skills. The field of art therapy combines both verbal and nonverbal communication to allow for self-expression, insight and personal growth. There are two types. One relies on making art to feel better, or art as therapy. The other helps with making personal changes, or art in therapy. Art therapy can be used throughout the life span and for many life challenges in a variety of settings.

Montague is a board certified music therapist with over 27 years working with a wide range of people and abilities. She is the Director of Creative Arts Therapies at South Shore Conservatory. She has a Bachelor degree in Music Education, an Equivalency in Music Therapy, and a Master's in Management. She has extensive experience in program development, staff training, and supervision. Montague presents to local school districts and social service agencies, at regional events, and at the national level. She conducts music therapy assessments for IEPs and is skilled at developing goals and objectives. Montague is currently the President of the New England Region of the American Music Therapy Association. She is a trained facilitator in the Remo healthRhythms drumming protocol, a Music Together teacher, and the music director for St. Joseph the Worker Church.

Susan Evans, MA, A.T.R.-BC has been in the field of Art Therapy for over 17 years. Evans graduated from Hahnemann University (now Drexel University) in Philadelphia with a Masters degree in Creative Arts in Therapy. She started her career in inpatient and partial hospital psychiatric care at The Horsham Clinic in Pennsylvania working with children, teens, and adults. Evans currently works at Skills For Living in Norwell, facilitating social groups as well as Individual Art Therapy sessions for children and teens with social cognitive challenges. In addition, Susan works per diem at Westwood Lodge Hospital In Westwood.

For more information on this meeting and other South Shore events, visit: cohassetsepac.com.

Light refreshments will be available. The meeting free and open to the public.

Socially conscious

The Social Service League of Cohasset celebrated its 100th year anniversary last weekend with a special gala held at the Atlantica restaurant, complete with dinner and dancing to the sounds of the Bo Winniker Band.

The mission of the Social Service League is to help those who need it most. The SSL identifies and assists disadvantaged individuals of all age groups within our community. The goal is to create, develop and support programs that directly benefit those in need. This is accomplished by donating generously, volunteering selflessly, and funding educational programs that will deliver positive and beneficial impact. Through benevolent and charitable efforts, the SSL is determined to make a positive impact on the community.

Robots, critters and slime - Oh, my!

Homemade slime, exploding volcanoes, and dancing with raisins were just a few of the exhibits on display at Cohasset's Joseph Osgood School during last week's Math and Science Night. Students from pre-kindergarten through second grade, with the help of their parents, put together a total of 45 science and math projects.

In addition to the student exhibits, there were three major shows for students and parents to attend. Go for the Stars, featuring Robo the Friendly Robot, Joe's Crazy Critters and Illuminate Your Mind with Mathemagical Thinking were all part of the festivities.

This is one of the biggest events at the school and we are so blessed to have so many parents and children geared up to show off their projects. Kathy Sebestyen and Monique Smith, both with children at the school, have been planning this event for months and are excited to be a part of such a fun and educational night. This event is completely funded from sponsorships within our business community and we are so grateful for their support.

OSGOOD VS. DEER HILL BASKETBALL GAME

Event aims to raise money for Deer Hill Playground

All are welcome as the parents and teachers of Deer Hill and Osgood schools face off next Friday night at the Cohasset Middle-High School in a friendly game of co-ed basketball to help fund a new playground at Deer Hill School.

The event, sponsored by the Cohasset PSO, will feature a silent auction with over a dozen items, from Patriots tickets to a round of golf; a kids' raffle; live entertainment and a free-throw contest at half-time. Organizers hope to draw a wide turnout from the Cohasset community including Deer Hill students, past, present or future.

"We wanted to make part of our fundraising strategy a community event," says Franchesca Arnold, chairwoman of the committee spearheading the playground renovation project, which she initiated over a year and a half ago.

Tickets for the event will cost $5 each or $20 per family, and may be purchased ahead of time at either school office, or at the door for no additional charge. Doors open at 6 p.m. and tip off is at 7 p.m.

The basketball game will be emceed by sports radio host Glenn Ordway and TV meteorologist Joe Joyce, and will feature volunteer players such as Osgood gym teacher Kevin Dykas, first-grade teacher Laura Keating and Deer Hill METCO staffer Michelle Fonfield.

To show school spirit, Osgood supporters are encouraged to wear white T-shirts; Deer Hill supporters to wear blue. The victorious team will receive a golden basketball-sized trophy to be displayed in their school.

Entertainment will be provided by the high school cheerleaders and the Cavanaro Brothers Band, which plays at many of the high school games. Captains of the varsity girls and boys basketball teams will serve as referees and coaches.

Attendees will also be able to purchase a piece of posterity — a brick with their name etched on it, to be placed in the pathway of the new playground. Donations of any level are welcome and are tax-deductible. Bricks start at $150 and are available now through June 1.

Tickets for the event will cost $5 each or $20 per family, and may be purchased ahead of time at either school office, or at the door for no additional charge. Doors open at 6 p.m. and tip off is at 7 p.m. Pretzels, hotdogs and popcorn will be provided by Del's Lemonade.

Organizers estimate they will need $160,000 to renovate the playground, which is used by local youth, Deer Hill students, students in the RISE program, and campers in the Recreation Department's Summer Playground program.

They hope to secure enough funding to place an initial order of materials by mid-June and to begin construction in mid-August. The CPC has been approached for partial funding, which is recommended for the April 22nd Town Meeting.

"Our goal is to maximize our students' educational experience and we feel this is a true part of the educational experience," says PSO President Jenni Milanoski. "Parents have been very supportive and excited about a new playground."

"To be honest - for many students, recess is the favorite time of day," says Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara, Ph.D. "Having an attractive, safe, accessible, and fun playground with new equipment will make such a difference in the daily school experience for our students, and for all incoming students for years."

The new playground equipment was designed by Rhode Island-based BigToys and will feature an upright seesaw, balance boards, a physical fitness circuit and table tops for game play. The project will also reseal the surface of the basketball court and add new backboards.

"As I transitioned up through the schools, I saw the difference in what was available for the kids at recess," says Arnold, who has served as PSO President at both schools. "When I realized that fifth grade was the last year that children in our district have recess, I knew I wanted to do something."

For more information about the event or about making a donation to the playground project, contact Franchesca Arnold at franchesca@cohasset.net or at 383-2548 or Michelle Loughlin at mloughlin521@hotmail.com or at 383-8308.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

When drivers hear about securing their cargo or load they may think that only applies to large trucks. Loose items in the back of small pick-up trucks can be a danger to other vehicles and pedestrians in sudden stops or crashes. This driver's ladder was not secured and as a result it could fly out of the truck bed and hit another vehicle, a pedestrian or bicyclist. The fine for having unsecured cargo is $200. COURTESY PHOTO

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Change is favored early in the week. This should make it easier for you to reassess your plans for handling a troubling professional relationship. Good luck.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A suggestion from a colleague could give your professional project that long-needed boost. Meanwhile, someone close to you still needs your emotional support.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Before complying with a colleague's request, check to see that the action benefits all, not just one person's agenda. Continue firming up those travel plans.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Noble named Rotary Peace Fellow

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Having a name like "noble" gives one a lot to live up to, but Cohasset's Frannie Noble, 27, is up for the challenge.

Noble was named a 2013 Rotary International Peace Fellow, a distinguished honor. She is one of 60 from around the world who received this award, a full scholarship to one of six Rotary Centers for International Studies, which are located in leading universities in England, Japan, Australia, Sweden and the U.S. Noble will attend the University of Bradford, England this fall to start her Master's in Peace and Conflict Resolution Studies.

Noble is excited about embarking on her new studies program, but is also feeling the weight of the new responsibility she bears in working to make the world a better place.

"If you get this fellowship, you're dedicated to bringing peace into the world. It's a pretty intense thing."

"If you get this fellowship, you're dedicated to bringing peace into the world," she said. "It's a pretty intense thing."

According to Cohasset Rotary Treasurer Rich Fitzpatrick, the Rotary Peace Fellowship is a 10-year-old initiative that takes a direct approach to world understanding by equipping future leaders with the tools they need to "wage peace"

Selectmen recommend new headcount

Town Meeting has final say

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Selectmen have approved some new headcount in the fiscal year 2014 budget, including a full-time assistant treasurer-collector and a full-time administrative assistant who will split time between the Board of Health office, and planning, inspections and permitting departments.

These positions are included in the FY14 budget, which has been vetted by the Advisory and Capital Budget Committees, to be voted on by the April 22 Annual Town Meeting. The selectmen have voted to recommend these positions as part of the overall budget.

The town's treasurer-collector Jane Lepardo has appeared before the selectmen a few times since the budget has been reviewed, stating her need for additional help in her office. There are several legal requirements the office has to fulfill, Lepardo has explained; her office is also in dire need of playing catch-up. Advisory chair Peter Pescatore has said that the department could hire a consultant, but the selectmen ultimately agreed that Lepardo needed a second person.

Meanwhile, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski was also planning to create an administrative assistant position that would work mainly out of the planning department but also assist with permitting and inspections.

Board of Health administrator/inspector Felix Zemel told the selectmen Tuesday that he needs help with administrative tasks, since he is often away from the office performing inspections or attending regional meetings. Board of Health agent Joe Godzik resigned earlier this year, years after he retired. He had been working part-time in the health department.

"I definitely am in severe need of administrative help," said Zemel. "Our inspections are suffering because of it."

Milanoski proposed taking Godzik's vacated part-time position and turning it into a

POLICE UNION:

Keep Lt. position

Budget, overtime, staffing addressed

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Following rumors of staffing changes and cross-training for town public safety employees, recent talk of cutting a second in command position in the police department has caused a bit of a stir. As the town manager and selectmen continue to review the town budget for the upcoming fiscal year, since some items simply cannot be budgeted for, it's apparent that some change is needed— the question is, at what cost?

In recent reviews of the fiscal year 2014 budget, officials have discussed eliminating a police lieutenant's position – currently unfilled – in order to hire a new patrolman instead, which would reportedly help address the police department's structural overtime problem.

The department has currently expended nearly $300,000 in overtime. Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore said that at the current burn rate, the police could expend $500,000 in overtime this year.

While recommending a $25,000 study to determine what the community wants in terms of public safety, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said last week that the police department would eliminate the unfilled lieutenant position, which is a second in command role, in order to hire a new patrolman. The patrolman is a union position, while the lieutenant is not.

Deputy Police Chief William Quigley agreed last week that a new union hire would help ease the overtime, which is structural overtime because the police department does not have enough personnel, said Quigley. There are currently four shift slots that are not being covered.

"We only have 14 people working nine shifts," said Quigley. "We need 17 people

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Annual Buddy Poppy drive is coming

What: Cohasset VFW Post 9146 seeks volunteers to man the tables for their annual Buddy Poppy Drive May 23, 24, and 25.

Where: This most deserving drive can only be achieved with volunteers taking the time to man the tables at Stop & Shop, Shaw's, Curtis Liquors, Walgreens and Aubuchon Hardware.

History: The VFW conducted its first poppy distribution before Memorial Day in 1922, becoming the first veterans' organization to organize a nationwide distribution. The poppy soon was adopted as the official memorial flower of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. Today VFW Buddy Poppies are still assembled by disabled and needy veterans in VA Hospitals.

More: The minimal assessment (cost of Buddy Poppies) to VFW units provides compensation to the veterans who assemble the poppies, provides financial assistance in maintaining state and national veterans' rehabilitation and service programs and partially supports the VFW National Home for orphans and widows of our nation's veterans.

Contact: If you can donate some time for the poppy drive, please contact Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079.

POLICE BEAT

Two more arrested for OUI

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

OUI arrest

At 1:16 a.m. on Tuesday (April 2), an officer observed a brown sedan traveling in the opposite direction on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) going very slowly. As the officer continued toward the vehicle it came to a complete stop then sped up crossing over the double yellow lines several times along Route 3A. The officer turned around and followed the car. The sedan made a left into the Dunkin Donuts parking lot on King Street, going over the curb at the boundary of the parking lot with both passenger side tires, police said. Police said the operator was showing the signs and symptoms of intoxication and was arrested for drunken driving. Police found a six-pack of beer on the front passenger floor, one of the beer bottles was partially full. He was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, marked lanes violation, and having an open container of alcohol in the car.

OUI arrest

A well being check on a motorist slumped over the wheel at 2:22a.m. on Saturday (March 30) in the Jack Conway parking lot on Chief Justice Custhing Highway resulted in a drunken driving arrest. The officer pulled into the parking lot and observed that the red Land Rover was running. He tapped on the driver's side window several times to get the attention of the driver. The officer could see a glass in the center console containing liquid that was later determined to be alcohol.

Police said the woman was showing the signs and symptoms of intoxication. After a series of field sobriety tests, she was placed under arrest and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol and having an open container of alcohol in the motor vehicle.

MVA

Police responded to a two-car accident at 10:17 a.m. on Monday (March 25) in front of Starbuck's on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) involving a 2007 Toyota Camry operated by an 83-year-old Marshfield man and a 2004 Toyota RAV4 operated by a 65-year-old Scituate woman.

Police said the RAV4 pulled out of the Starbuck's drive-thru onto 3A into the passenger side of the Camry. The 84-year-old female passenger in the Camry sustained non-life-threatening injuries and was transported to the hospital.

The Scituate woman was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

Towed

Following a traffic stop on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) by the train station at 12:12 p.m. on Monday (March 25), police had a 2013 Toyota Tacoma pickup truck, operated by a 46-year-old Hull woman, towed because the registration had expired.

Nightmare

Police responded to the Avalon complex at 3:18 a.m. on Tuesday (March 26) on a report from a neighbor who heard a girl screaming. Police went to the apartment where the screaming was coming from and found no apparent problem. They determined the girl might have been having a nightmare.

Protest

An Obama protester's sign was egged outside the post office on Wednesday (March 27) by a teen in a green sweatshirt at around 4:08 p.m. Police said the 22-year-old Quincy man, who was conducting the protest, was cleaning off the sign when they arrived. No one was hit by the egg. There was also a complaint logged earlier that day about the protest that was urging the impeachment of President Obama.

Missing files

Detectives are investigating a report from a 78-year-old Cohasset shop owner, who is in the process of selling her store, that an employee, who is a 45-year-old Scituate woman, may have taken files related to the business. The employee has denied the allegations.

Dispute

At 8:03 p.m. on Wednesday (March 27), police responded to a disturbance on Nichols Road between neighbors over a basketball game in one of their driveways. Police spoke to a 45-year-old man who said he was playing basketball with his children and some neighborhood children when the 59-year-old neighbor complained using profanities about stray balls going onto his property. The caller was concerned about future rants that might frighten the children, police said. The neighbor told police the children were constantly coming onto to property, damaging his bushes and playing on the rocks. Police spoke with both men and told them to refrain from contact with one another.

Domestic

A 33-year-old man who now lives in Weymouth was arrested at the police station at 6:18 p.m. on Thursday (March 28) following a child custody dispute. Police explained that the police station is often used as a location where parents exchange custody of their children. In this case the man's wife, a 31-year-old Cohasset woman, told police her husband had hit her in the mouth when reaching for their 14-month-old. She said her husband was late for the exchange and arrived so angry that her 9-year-old did not want to go with him to dinner. The incident was sorted out in the lobby and the man was placed under arrest for domestic assault and battery, police said.

Tax reports

A couple that lives on Jerusalem Road reported to police on Monday (April 1) that they had received an income tax refund check of $5,767 from the IRS. However, they had not yet filed their taxes. The IRS is investigating, police said.

In separate incident a Bates Lane reported on March 27 that she had been the victim of identity fraud. She went to her tax preparer to file her tax return and was informed that her social security number had already been used to file a return. She contacted the IRS which is investigating and told her to file a report with the police department.

Sign

On Sunday (March 31) at about 6:15 p.m., a 58-yar-old Cohasset man went to the station of report that he had accidentally struck a parking sign on S. Main Street when he rolled up onto the sidewalk while parking. His left front tire struck the sign that was still standing but partially crooked. He offered to pay for the sign and the DPW was made aware of this report, police said.

OUI CHARGE

Road rage ends in arrest

On Easter Sunday (March 31) at about 6pm, Cohasset Police received a cellular telephone call from a driver reporting that she and her husband were being followed by a man in a red Honda Civic on South Main Street. The caller was reporting that the man was behind her and all over the road. She further reported that every time she pulled over to let the Civic pass her, the driver of the Civic pulled over behind her and would not pass.

The caller was told to drive to Cohasset Police Headquarters, which is very close to South Main Street. When the caller advised that she was pulling into the police parking lot, the desk officer at the station met her in the lot. Police are alleging that the driver of the Civic also pulled into the police parking lot, blocked several parking spaces, exited his vehicle and began to relieve himself next to his car, in full view of the police officer and the witness.

The officer approached the man, identified as Christopher D. Callinan, 31, of Quincy, and immediately could detect the signs and symptoms of extreme intoxication. After attempting several field sobriety tests Callinan was arrested. He was charged with OUI – Liquor 2nd offense; negligent operation of a motor vehicle; failure to drive in marked lanes; and possession of class "E" pills. Callinan was held overnight in the Cohasset Police jail. He was arraigned at Quincy District Court on the above charges.

She further reported that every time she pulled over to let the Civic pass her, the driver of the Civic pulled over behind her and would not pass.

Acting Cohasset Chief of Police William Quigley said that he could not remember ever having an OUI arrest in the police parking lot.

"When alleged drunk drivers come right to us, we are glad to accommodate them with a place to stay for the night," he quipped. "It also cuts down on the wear-and-tear on my cruisers."

Quigley said no one was injured in the alleged drunken driving incident.

UNION

working the 'four-and-two schedule' to not have a structural overtime."

However, the Cohasset Police Union made it clear that they are not in favor of losing the lieutenant's position.

"We are opposed to the elimination of the position of 'second in command,'" Cohasset police officer and union president Patrick Reardon said in a prepared statement during the Tuesday, April 2 selectmen meeting. "This position was fully vetted by the Advisory committee, the Capital Budget committee, the Board of Selectmen, and was voted upon by Town Meeting. This position holds a seat on the board of the SSRECC [South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center] and is responsible for overall quality control in the Patrol Division. This position allows upward mobility within the department and thus, in turn assists in retaining professional and dedicated officers.

"During these recent budget meetings, members of the union have attended and have come away with the impression that this position is not fully funded for fiscal 2014. While Mr. Milanoski has repeatedly assured the union that a second-in-command position will be filled in the near future, the union is opposed to any change in the wording of the line item for the second-in-command from the 2013 fiscal budget."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said last week that while she understood the need to have additional "boots on the ground," she was not in favor of eliminating the lieutenant position.

Vice-president of Cohasset's Police Union, Christy Tarantino, agreed with Kennedy last week, stating that it's important to have an advanced position for officers to aspire to, for morale reasons.

Milanoski said last week that he would take another crack at the budget to see if the department could afford both, but it would probably involve taking money away from other town departments. Selectmen indicated they were in favor of this if it meant improved public safety.

The police budget was scheduled for the Tuesday, April 2 agenda, however the selectmen did not get to the issue that night. The meeting adjourned after 11 p.m. and was continued to Thursday, April 4 (the Mariner goes to press Thursday mornings).

Check for updates on the Mariner online and in an upcoming print edition.

Search for new chief underway

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced last week that he has advertised for a new Police Chief. The position was posted with the Massachusetts Police Association and in police departments statewide, he said Tuesday.

Cohasset has been without a chief since Police Chief Mark DeLuca was placed on paid leave in May 2012; his contract was not renewed when it expired in January 2013.

Deputy Chief William Quigley has been acting chief since last May.

on the global stage. The International Rotary selects up to 60 scholars each year who then embark on one to two years of study to earn Master's level degrees in international relations, public administration, peace studies, conflict resolution or related field.

Noble has already gotten a head start. The scholar, a 2004 graduate of Cohasset High School, studied abroad in Malawi while attending Connecticut College. After graduating in 2008 with a degree in government, Noble began working for nonprofit Flying Kites, Inc., which led her back to Africa. Noble spent two years working and living in Kenya as a program manager for Flying Kites. Noble's job entailed working with a group of orphanages in Nairobi, helping them improve the quality of care they were providing to children. This involved hosting training sessions on how to apply for grants and bring in volunteers, among other initiatives.

Her time working in Africa gave Noble an appetite for working overseas.

"Kenya showed me a good balance between working in a place that's challenging, becoming really close with a community of local people and expats, and understanding how you can build a life there," Noble explained. "I could picture moving to Austin or Seattle, or back to Nairobi; it becomes just another city that's farther away."

Not long after returning to the states last summer, said Noble, "I could picture myself working abroad again immediately."

Noble came back to Cohasset a few times to share her experience in Africa and fundraise for her organization. At one point, she gave a presentation on Kenya during a South Shore Arts Center African art exhibit. The Cohasset Rotary was so impressed with her, they invited her to present at one of their meetings. The Rotary donated money to Flying Kites.

Just a few years later, Noble would be back on the Rotary's radar — this time, as a scholarship applicant. Fitzpatrick said the Rotary was more than happy to help her out.

"She's a great person, and we're really excited about it," said Fitzpatrick. "Our district coordinator, Orren Robbins, said she was one of the best candidates he had seen. She is exactly the kind of person Rotary wants to invest in.

"It's such a large award that the Rotary foundation wants to make sure they have the right people in place," Fitzpatrick continued. "Frannie demonstrated that in her work and her commitment to service, and that's really one of the things that made her such an excellent candidate. Candidates all over the world are applying for it; they set a very high bar, but she passed it easily."

Noble was honored to receive the Rotary's award. "I cannot say enough how amazing the Rotary is," she said, noting that her scholarship covers the tuition for her entire program of studies, plus room and board and transportation to and from school.

Members of the local and regional Rotary also assisted Noble with her lengthy application for the fellowship, a process that took nearly a year to complete.

"The application is so long and involved, it's really an arduous process," Fitzpatrick explained.

While also in the process of applying to grad school, Noble first applied with the Cohasset Rotary, who acted as her sponsor. Her application went to the district Rotary, which spans from south of Boston to Rhode Island. The applicant is supposed to interview with the district coordinator; however, since Noble was still in Africa when she began the application process, she and Robbins conducted their interview via Skype.

Noble's application went on to the Rotary headquarters in Chicago; it was due by July 1, 2012. She came back to the states that same month, and began working at the New England Center for Homeless Veterans, a job that she loves.

"I've been incredibly happy working there," Noble said of the Center. "It's an incredible place, the services they offer to veterans."

She also earned some experience working in a U.S. non-profit, which she feels will help her when she returns to working abroad. Now, Noble is ready to take her next step — wherever that may lead.

"I'm excited — I really am. I love the feeling of heading off somewhere new," she said. "It's a challenge wherever you go."

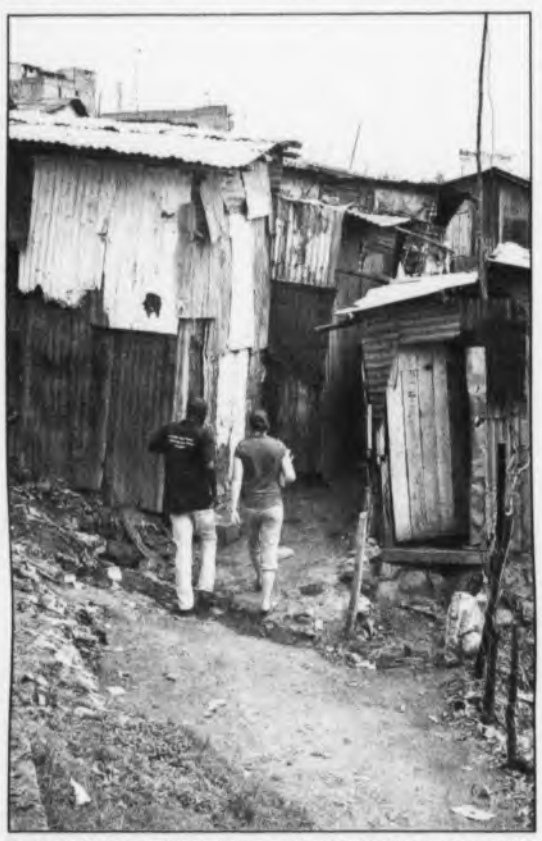
One thing that's for certain — Noble plans to let this new adventure guide her into the next phase of her life. So what does a Rotary Peace Fellow see herself doing after graduation?

Helping children in wartorn nation tops her list.

"I'd love to be working on development projects that work with children in developing countries, working with orphaned and abandoned children and in child protection," said Noble. "I'm really interested in seeing what happens to children and families when they get separated or go through a period of conflict... I'm interested in how individuals step up to help, how the UN might step in, and how the government may feel it is responsible for these people, or not."

With that much compassion and ambition, it's easy to see why Noble was chosen for this prestigious honor.

The scope of the Rotary Peace Fellow award "seems like exactly what she wants to do," said Fitzpatrick. "She's really prepared for it — she's already done it."



Noble is the first Peace Fellow that the Cohasset Rotary has ever sponsored, but they hope to find many more.

"We're hoping Frannie's award will spark interest in other people," Fitzpatrick said. "We would love to be able to have more candidates... We think it's a great program."

LIFE AT CHS

Heading to Costa Rica!

WHITNEY MALONE

All seventeen of us, including our chaperones Mrs. Humphrey and Doc T, will be researching leatherback sea turtle eggs along the Caribbean coast...

As CHS "springs forward" into the spring sports season, the student producers of CSPN are continuing to provide insight into Cohasset athletics, airing their sixth episode on 143TV last Thursday night. As spring athletes themselves, the CSPN crew is limiting its airtime to one episode on the last Thursday of every month, but will report the latest sports news on Facebook and Twitter every other week!

Tuesday, students going to Costa Rica over April vacation, myself included, met at lunch to finalize the last details of the trip before our departure next Thursday. All seventeen of us, including our chaperones Mrs. Humphrey and Doc T, will be researching leatherback sea turtle eggs along the Caribbean coast, studying the ecology of Costa Rica's lush rainforests and rocky volcanoes, and white water rafting down the Pacuare River while there. (I can't think of a better way to spend my last April vacation!)

Thursday, the Great Decisions Club met at the town library, where they discussed different global challenges facing America today. The club, started by senior Annie Robinson last year, bases its discussions off of PBS's The Great Decisions in Foreign Policy television series, a program dedicated solely to international affairs and U.S. foreign policy. Students interested in foreign policy and/or joining the club should see school librarian Ms. Conroy!

The CHS foreign language department is looking for students interested in hosting a student from France for two weeks this July. Hosting an exchange student is a great opportunity to learn about a new culture and improve your French speaking! If you are interested, please get in touch with Mr. Kotter or Mrs. Marat as soon as possible.

Next week, students will be busy in their classes with last minute tests and assignments before the close of the third quarter on Friday. Since I am leaving next week, I will continue the Life at CHS column after the break. Enjoy your April vacation!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High School; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Healing Field returning for seventh year

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset has Tom and Deirdre Wigmore to thank for one of the most brilliant, patriotic displays on the South Shore.

The Wigmores learned about the Healing Field tribute while at a national conference for the Sons of the American Legion in Salt Lake City, Utah. That was more than seven years ago.

Today the annual Healing Field – the only one of its kind in the area – has become part of Cohasset's annual Memorial Day weekend tradition. Cohasset's observances are a time to honor and remember those who served and made the ultimate sacrifice. The Field of Honor is also a tribute to Gold Star families.

The Field of Honor is for the veterans but participation is open to all and flags can be purchased in memory of anyone, says Tom who is Commander of the local chapter of the Sons of the American Legion. "It is a great tribute to the veterans of today, yesterday and tomorrow," he said.

Last year the field displayed 520 flags on the triangle across from Veterans Memorial Park and on the island on Elm Street across from the Cohasset Harbor Inn. Tom says the goal is to continue to provide a way for individuals and businesses to participate in this patriotic tradition. Sponsors who donate $50, $100 or $200 are recognized on a large banner. The deadline for those sponsorships is April 25.

Individual sponsorships for $25 continue right up until the field is installed.

Flags cost $17 each and are sold for $25, so $8 per flag goes into a special fund that is used to help veterans and their families, Tom said.

"It has been a good thing for the town," Tom said. "The townspeople look forward to it every year."

Still time to participate

What

The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 118 of Cohasset, will post hundreds of US Flags in a poignant display honoring local veterans.

When

Residents of Cohasset and the surrounding area will experience this inspiring display of flags from May 18 to June 1 as the Stars and Stripes flutter proudly atop eight-foot poles. This touching memorial is free to the public. The Healing Field dedication will be at 1 pm. on Saturday, May 25.

How to take part

$25 individual flags may be sponsored in memory of family or friends honored. Sponsorships ranging from $50 to $200 are also available that includes recognition on the website and banner. Checks should be made payable to the Sons of the American Legion with a note on the memo line of the check indicating Field of Honor. Sponsored flags can be retained as mementos of this year's Field of Honor which can be then be displayed from home or business

For more

To find more information or to sponsor a flag online, visit: healingfiled.org/cohasset13. For details on becoming an event sponsor or volunteering to help install the flags, contact the American Legion Post at telephone 781-383-9657 or stop by at the Post at 98 Summer St., anytime weekdays after 3 p.m., on Saturdays after 10 a.m. or on Sundays after 12 p.m.

All proceeds with go to veterans programs of the Sons of the American Legion of Cohasset.

GIMME SHELTER

There is more of Lola to love

PAULA J FATERSIK

Second chances are a wonderful thing and our Lola has been waiting for hers. When there are family changes, pets often find themselves in new circumstances, confused and worried. It is hard for them and as their caregivers, we try to make them feel wanted and cared for every day. Nothing takes the place of a real home though.

At four years old, Lola is still a young cat. She is so eager to play and loves attention. Lola is a plus size cat and it is very amusing to see her play in the kitten tube, poking her head out and chasing a laser light. Yes, it gets noisy but it is such fun to see her enjoying herself.

One of her favorite things is being at the top of the cat perch in the window watching the birds and outside activities. But when someone comes to her room, she will stare right at them just waiting to greet and be greeted. If she had a room of her own, she would come down to meet you at the door, but protecting her favorite place is a priority. It isn't easy having roommates and every cat tries to stake a claim and protect it.

When you first meet her, you will probably be surprised by her large muscular frame, but that is part of her beauty.

Lola has thick, velvety tiger and white fur and beautiful green eyes. Her markings are really outstanding. When you first meet her, you will probably be surprised by her large muscular frame, but that is part of her beauty. As she feels close and comfortable with you, Lola loves having her cheeks and neck rubbed and gets her sweet purr revved up. This fun feline really deserves a caring adult home where she can be the only pet and spend her days playing, lounging, and showing you just how loving she can be.

If you have a big heart and lots of love to give, come meet Lola! She is eager to meet her forever family. Please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue at 50 L St. Open hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. You may also contact Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902 for an appointment.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is very thankful for the fabulous opportunity to showcase our shelter and our available cats and kittens at Petco Unleashed in the Hingham Shipyard! For the last month, Unleashed has provided display space where our dedicated volunteers were able to meet many people and share information about HSAR and the great cats who are waiting for forever homes. Unleashed was very generous and donated many cases of canned foods that will help to keep our residents healthy and happy.

The Animal Rescue League will be scheduling another spay day with HSAR in late April. If you have a cat who needs spay or neuter services please call our office at 781-925-3121 and leave a detailed message.

Paula J Fatersik is a board member and volunteer at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

OUR VIEW

House divided?

Suffice it to say if Cohasset makes the news outside the confines of its borders – it is probably not a good thing. Apart from a major crime story (like the arrest last week of a convicted rapist) — a Cohasset story that reaches a wider audience is likely about governmental dysfunction. Cohasset's image of being affluent and desirable is in sharp conflict with the fact that people in our halls of government often clash and therefore, provide story fodder and interest for people who do not live here.

We want to make it perfectly clear that healthy debate and volunteer involvement are important and should be largely positive whether one lives in Cohasset or Weymouth, for that matter.

It is when clashing egos, blurred lines of communication and responsibility, and basic negativity insert themselves into the myriads of departments, issues and situations that useful governing comes to a halt.

Has Cohasset turned into a sharply divided place where finger pointing and name-calling are the norm? Can any town official or employee, for that matter, express their views without being attacked on blogs, by vicious gossip or being accused of having a personal agenda?

We ran into a now retired Cohasset employee at Cosmos in North Scituate who immediately stated she was glad she did not work in "that" town anymore.

Monday was a spectacular day in Cohasset – temperatures reached 60 degrees. On our travels through town we noticed the Town Common was full of youngsters with their moms. The kids were running, jumping for joy, and even doing cartwheels, as if to say spring is here at last!

This Norman Rockwell-esque scene was playing out in front of our Town Hall where treasured town employees try to serve the community as best they can. We certainly do not want any more of them to leave or retire, only to be glad to have put Cohasset in their rear-view mirror.

Cohasset is a good place that is blessed with a lot of smart people. Let's hope that going forward the town will be more united and less divided. A healthy exchange of ideas should always be encouraged as long as common sense prevails along with mutual respect for one another.

Police and fire not in favor of single public safety department

EMT training, no problem, but cops are cops and firemen are firemen, right?

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Welcoming you out of winter

JON BELBER

With increased late winter snow, already early spring rains and with a growing need for sunshine, members, enthusiasts and friends of the farm gathered recently at the Paul Pratt Cohasset Public Library to defy the aforementioned obstacles and proceed with a celebration of spring.

The annual Think Spring! meeting was designed to welcome people out of winter (a much desired and apt activity this calendar year) and hear about what is happening at the farm. Our farm manager Dee spoke of seedlings short and tall, green and hardy, all warm and alive in our monitored and carefully climate controlled, crowded hoop house. She waxed about long days of light and hopes for an April 20th plant sale as well as revving the old engines of the tractors for soil turning and bed making in the even older fields.

This summary of spring tasks, growth, and planting will also accompany workshops (starting in April), trainings and teacher guided field trips to various learning stations on the farm. Without these grand plans and hard working farmers, there would be no (outdoor) classroom for these students, children, families and adults who will venture to the farm.

As an effort to lure others into thinking about aspects of organic farming, from where food comes and some sustainable practices, the Think Spring! event was also an opportunity to share the results of our Consider This! essay and illustration contest. (With the use of exclamation points, can you sense the urgency of coaxing good weather, happy seeds and eventual tomatoes our way?)

For this year's contest, sponsored in part by the Frank H. White scholarship fund, so named for our founder and visionary gentleman farmer and teacher, Frank, we asked students in grades K-12 to reflect, write and share ways in which food arrives at our table.

Illustrations poured in from excited first graders at the South Elementary School in Hingham who created colorful salads, depicted hard working cows who provide milk for butter and cream and drew artful chickens with their eggs, and the latter two appeared together at the same time.

In addition, fifth graders from the Wampatuck School in Scituate and fourth, fifth and sixth graders from the Bay Farm Montessori Academy in Duxbury thoughtfully explained where rice grows, shared insights to a grandmother's beloved casserole and talked about the ability to grow, harvest and enjoy local produce such as carrots and peppers.

The essays and illustrations are terrific efforts to encourage all of us – as we all do tend to eat – to pause and consider the source of the ingredients and the reality of bringing these crops to a joyful fruition, for example, in the form of a favorite pizza, to name one popular meal.

Too often the meals we prepare and consume come and go with each passing day and not much thought. So as we emerge from a winter with still grey days and cold nights, where for one slightly sunny afternoon, it was terrific to gather and think about the hard and wonderful task of growing, raising and caring for the food that sustains us.

Here's to spring and baseball players chasing down fly balls, relaxed poets reciting sonnets or just weary hibernators peeking out, while we perhaps watch and enjoy with a bag of GMO-free popcorn, grown at a nearby, organic farm with a bit of butter from a neighboring, grass fed dairy cow, whose milk was churned, and think about a welcome, new season. Consider your meal and from where it comes.

Marathon effort for city kids

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

She'll be running with the hope of raising $5,000, enough money to help 100 children. It takes $50 a child to create a moment of happiness and a lifetime of memories.

While it's only a mere seven and a half months until Dec. 25th, today is the perfect time for all of us to get into the holiday spirit. Sure some homes are still adorned with aging brown wreaths from last Christmas and most retail outlets have yet to switch their music over but it's time to think about Christmas. Too early you say, well not for Kirsten Ripple.

There are numerous reasons why Cohasset is an ideal community to raise a family. Excellent schools, phenomenal arts & sports programs, the ocean and many other incredible nuances that all contribute to a wonderful place for kids. One of those amazing nuances is Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy. Tucked in behind Aubuchon Hardware, Kennedy Brothers is bustling with positive energy as kids and adults alike work hard to come back from sustained injuries. All you have to do is to spend a few minutes inside to understand why I think they contribute to the area's charm.

As my son battles back from a broken femur I've spent quite a bit of time with Kirsten and her fellow therapists Chris and Rahman and have witnessed what an amazing job they all do, especially with the younger patients. Treating and helping kids is more than just a job for this team; photos of school athletes are throughout the facility, the back wall is plastered with newspaper articles about past and present patients and the room echoes with enthusiasm. (I'd love to use this space to share with you a few touching observations, but due to patient confidentiality you are just going to have to trust me.)

A passing comment a few weeks really opened my eyes to the fact that helping students get back on track is more than just a job for Kirsten. Aside from being an accomplished physical therapist (Did I mention she has earned her doctorate?), Kirsten also happens to be at that point in life where going out in the city is a common occurrence. So when I asked what her weekend plans were I was stunned as she rattled off a few local high school games she planned on attending. Wait, going to high school sports games in her free time, why? To Kirsten the answer was simple; they dedicate so much into helping and getting to know our kids that it becomes more than a job. So while others her age were in town ordering up another round, Dr. Ripple was sitting on a gymnasium bleacher somewhere cheering on a girl or boy she's helped get back on the court.

It would be a great story if it ended here, but we're only at the beginning. You see, while students from Cohasset and nearby towns are lucky to have Kirsten & Kennedy Brothers as a means to heal their bodies, some children in Boston are blessed to have them help nurture their hearts.

For almost 25 years the Kennedy Brothers (Jake and Ratt – who live here in Cohasset) have been at the forefront of Christmas in the City, a non-profit started by Jake and his wife Sparky focused on providing Boston's homeless and underprivileged children a few hours of happiness in a life time of survival. Christmas in the City is a 100 percent volunteer non-profit that provides something so many of us unintentionally take for granted; hope.

This year Kirsten Ripple is going to attempt to do something she's never done before, run a marathon, to help raise money to better assist these kids. She'll be running with the hope of raising $5,000, enough money to help 100 children. It takes $50 a child to create a moment of happiness and a lifetime of memories. When asked if she was worried if she'd be able to finish a something as grueling as the Boston Marathon, Kirsten responded, "Seeing the pure joy with these children is the most meaningful thing I have ever experienced. Thinking of those kids is all I need, I'll finish."

$50 dollars a child – it's hard to imagine. It's also hard to imagine that Kirsten is fighting her own 'heart break hill' in attempting reach her goal. While every ounce of this young lady is filled with passion and desire to help others, her Rolodex isn't filled with high rollers. So she's scraped together a few items such as sports tickets and health and fitness gifts to raffle off as an incentive to donate $20. She has a web page to donate (see box) and can accept donations at her office. Kirsten is also holding a meet & greet fundraiser at Mr. Dooley's tonight (April 5th) at 9 p.m., suggested donation is $10.

So let's recap – Kirsten Ripple who works tirelessly to help our kids heal and who gives up her free time to further support our children is attempting something she's never done before in order to help homeless children and she's trying to reach her goal of $5,000 through donations of $10s and $20s.

Cohasset is a beautiful town with people who are blessed in oh-so-many ways. One of those ways is seeking our help not to for herself but to assist others. Together we have the ability to help her achieve her goal. Heck, I am sure some of you are blessed to be able to help her on your own. Wouldn't it be beautiful if together we put her over the top? If together were able to help this young lady help not 100 kids but perhaps 200 kids? She's giving us the chance.

Thanks for reading and thank you Kirsten.

FOR THE RECORD

New life for a media shield law

GREGORY MATHIS

A media shield bill would go a long way in strengthening protection and clarifying the gray area under common law.

Our Founding Fathers thought it wise to include freedom of speech in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution as part of the Bill of Rights.

While the First Amendment also deals with laws focusing on religious freedom and the freedom to peacefully assemble, it also encompasses many issues dealing with freedom of speech and addresses freedom of the press.

Not only was our country founded on those principles, but our media business depends on those freedoms in order to responsibly question actions, hold public officials accountable and seek out and uncover the truth.

The First Amendment and freedom of the press does allow a lot of latitude, making it possible for us to do all those things. But it doesn't totally protect journalists from being thrown in jail to protect their sources of information.

Massachusetts is one of 10 states without a media shield law. The other nine are Idaho, Iowa, Missouri, Mississippi, New Hampshire, South Dakota, Vermont, Virginia and Wyoming. In fact, Wyoming has neither a shield law nor any kind of common law privilege, which Massachusetts does have.

Under the Mass. common law privilege, journalists are supposed to be protected from having to reveal the identity of unnamed sources or having to turn over unpublished information gathered or prepared in the course of newsgathering. The current law gives more protection to confidential information that might be received in exchange for a promise of confidentiality than it does for non-confidential information. And while the privilege applies to both civil and criminal cases, it is weaker for criminal cases and in instances where the reporter or media company is being sued.

In short, there's a lot of ambiguity in the state's common law that's open to interpretation and it's still unclear how it applies to the "wild west" of online publishing.

A media shield bill would go a long way in strengthening protection and clarifying the gray area under common law.

Such a bill has been filed in the past, but failed to see the light of day for a full vote. A new effort is underway in this session of the Legislature being led by former newspaper publisher and current State Rep. Josh Cutler, D-Duxbury.

Cutler brings a newspaper/publishing company perspective to the issue, but he is convinced the bill makes for good government by "allowing watchdogs to be watchdogs."

"Not having it sort of has a chilling effect on folks' willingness to come forward, because they know that their name can become public," Cutler told the State House News Service back in February.

Fortunately cases involving reporters or editors called to testify, turn over notes or being forced to reveal sources are few and far between, although journalists have certainly gone to jail to protect unnamed sources and information obtained confidentially. Having a law on the books to make sure journalists are protected, as they are 40 other states, would be a huge step in the right direction.

The bill has 19 co-sponsors and Cutler is hoping the bill makes it out of the judiciary committee, where it has died a slow death in the past.

More to come on the committee dates and hopefully the next steps for the media shield bill as it works its way through the meandering process and into law.

STATE HOUSE

Bradley bill would increase abatements

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, has filed a bill that would increase proportionately the amount of tax abatements for qualifying individuals based upon a corresponding increase in local tax rates for that year.

"The intent of this legislation is to assist struggling homeowners, especially those living on a fixed or limited income, who face an increased cost of living."
State Rep. Garrett Bradley

"The intent of this legislation is to assist struggling homeowners, especially those living on a fixed or limited income, who face an increased cost of living," said Bradley.

Bradley said currently, taxpayers are required to file any request for abatement before the actual tax bill is due; usually Feb. 1. If property tax rates increase later in the same year, the change does not take effect until the following January, however he said the goal is to blunt the financial impact of those changes when they do take effect.

"My bill would require the abatement to be adjusted by the same percentage rate as the taxes increased. It's a matter of fairness" said Bradley, who added that the actual amount of an abatement varies depending upon the property assessment and individual circumstances.

The bill amends Chapter 59 of the General Laws by inserting a new section that reads:

"Section 74A. Any person who qualifies for an annual abatement under this chapter shall have such abatement increase by the percentage of any tax increase."

Towns pay for property tax abatements through use of an overlay reserve account that is funded as part of the total tax levy. Town Meeting may also transfer funds to this account to ensure that there is enough to cover all of the abatements that may be granted.

The legislation is currently under review by the Joint Committee on Revenue.

Selectmen meeting continued to Thursday

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"The town needs to review what the open meeting law, in terms of the time, means."
Agnes McCann, Doane Street

Lately, the Board of Selectmen have had several meetings that stretch into the wee hours as they tackle the town budget and prep for the upcoming Annual Town Meeting. Some have argued that the meetings are too long, with far too hefty agendas, that affect both the officials' and the public's ability to think clearly that late at night.

Cohasset's selectmen had a robust agenda for Tuesday night, with the last agenda item slated for midnight, in order to accommodate a request from selectman Fred Koed to discuss several agenda items with at least 15 minutes devoted to each item.

However, selectman Martha Gjesteby attempted to rein the rest of the board in during their Tuesday, April 2 meeting by asking chairman Paul Carlson to cut the meeting off at 10 p.m. and pick up with any unfinished items at the following meeting (scheduled for Thursday, April 4). Gjesteby also stated that the Mass. Municipal Association has stated that if meetings take place after 10 p.m., it is not technically an open meeting because it is difficult for the public to participate or view.

Agnes McCann, Doane Street, stated during public comment that early morning Governance Committee meetings, which take place at 7 a.m. on Thursday mornings, are also difficult for the public to attend. McCann said that these too early and too late meetings could be a violated of the state Attorney General Office's Open Meeting Law.

"The town needs to review what the open meeting law in terms of the time means," said McCann. Having meetings that stretch to midnight or later "is too late to have an open meeting," she added. "It's not reasonable."

Carlson received a call from Gjesteby Tuesday morning and posted an additional meeting for Thursday. The chair agreed at the start of Tuesday's meeting that they would try to wrap up by 10 and carry any leftover items to Thursday. (The Mariner goes to press Thursday morning, so look for coverage of last night's meeting online and in next week's paper).

The beefy agenda included a review of the draft warrant for the Annual Town Meeting, which is only a month away (April 22), along with a discussion of the town-wide senior survey, a request for a land transfer for the planned new Senior Center on Sohier Street, and discussions on the fiscal year 2014 budget for several departments, from Elder Affairs to public safety. The selectmen also reviewed the budget in detail at their Thursday, March 28 meeting.

The reason for the late-night meeting this week appears to be accommodating Koed's request to put seven items on the agenda and allow a 15 minute allotment for each item, with the board hearing citizen input – pros and cons – for five minutes each, followed by five minutes for the selectmen to discuss and vote on each issue.

The issues, which Koed referred to as critical items, are:

1) Cross training Firemen to be Policemen;

2) Cross training Policemen to be Firemen 1;

3) Cross training Policemen to be EMT's, and setting the TBA stipend;

4) Creation of a new public safety department;

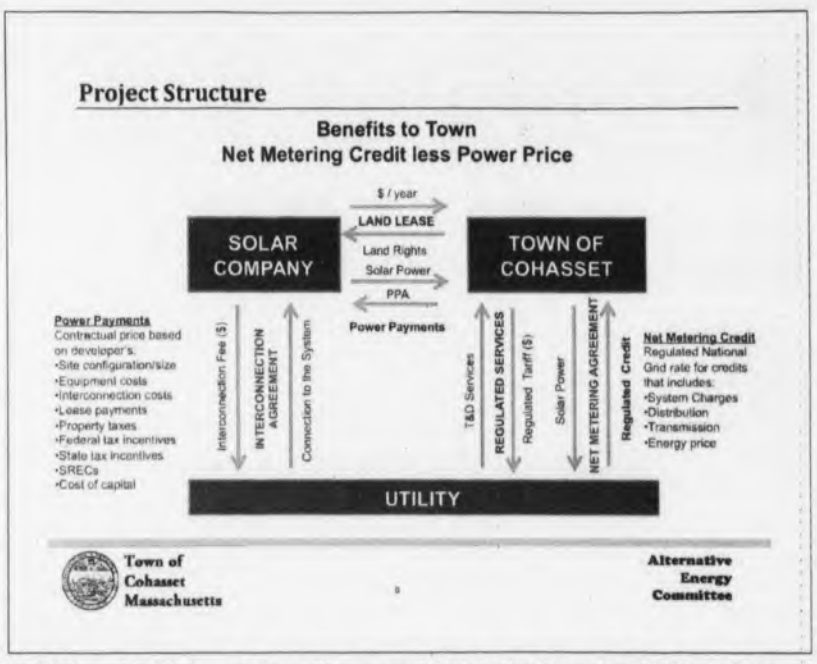
5) No more special town meetings;

6) The consolidation of the Water and Sewer Departments;

7) The proposal for posting a series of existing jobs.

Koed said in a written statement that these items have not yet been fully addressed at past selectmen meetings. "The Board of Selectmen never opined on the series of issues that were taken out to other selected town boards by the Acting Town Manager [Michael Milanoski] as if he had the portfolio of this Board. Each of these issues is complex and critically important to the finances and operations of our community. Each deserves debate, time consuming public review, and significant input from our citizens... Citizens have a right under our frame of government to hear the results of their leaders voting."

The selectman said that following the discussion and votes, the selectmen should make "a directive to the Acting Town Manager to follow the public policy directive set by the Board of Selectmen going forward."



Koed initially requested this discussion during the Tuesday, March 26 selectmen meeting, asking these items to be included on the March 28 agenda. Koed reiterated his request that night since the items did not appear on the agenda. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said this was because the board is required to post the agenda 48 hours ahead of the meeting, and there was not enough time between the night of the 26th and the 28th to update the agenda.

Koed said during last Thursday's meeting that he was fine with waiting to hold the discussion, as long as discussion takes place sometime soon.

The seven items were scheduled to begin at 10 p.m. Tuesday and conclude at midnight. By 11 p.m., the selectmen were in the middle of discussing the budget, a topic that was supposed to conclude at 9:45 p.m. Gjesteby motioned to adjourn the meeting. Carlson said, "We still have business to discuss." He said that he would at least like to finish discussing the building and planning budgets (discussion had just wrapped on the elder affairs and health department budgets) before adjourning. This left the police and fire budgets to be pushed to Thursday's meeting, although fire and police personnel, including union presidents Patrick Reardon (police) and Jack Hernan (fire) had waited in the audience throughout the four-hour meeting.

Thursday night's meeting will delve into the public safety budgets, include further review of the latest draft of the Annual Town Meeting warrant (Town Meeting is April 22), and address all seven of Koed's concerns.

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

A slide from the Alt. Energy Committee presentation to the December 2012 Special Town Meeting, explaining the economics of the solar panel project. ENERGY UPDATE

Bidder chosen for town solar project

Negotiations underway

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) announced this week that a company has been chosen to carry out the planned solar panel project that would see solar arrays installed on the Cedar Street landfill and Middle-High School roof. The chosen company will enter into a 20-year lease of the town properties and will reap savings on energy; electricity will then be sold to the town at a lower rate (a process known as net metering).

The 20-year lease was approved by the December 2011 Special Town Meeting. The AEC has been working since then to draft and issue the RFP. Since a solar panel developer has been selected, the solar project has cleared some hurdles and is well on its way to bringing solar power to Cohasset.

AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell said this week that a bidder was chosen to proceed with negotiations with the town and eventually install the panels. Bodell explained that the solar arrays will help Cohasset realize significant cost savings on energy.

"We were very pleased at the potential economic savings available to the town by pursuing solar on the landfill and school roof," Bodell said. The anticipated savings could be anywhere from $600,000 to $1 million over the life of the 20-year life of the contract, she added, "based on some very conservative assumptions about what happens to the net metering credits."

In January, following an extensive public bidding process, three bidders submitted their applications, which were then reviewed by an appointed evaluation committee. The committee also interviewed all three bidding companies. The committee consisted of two AEC members, Andrew Muir and Sean Selha; the School Committee AEC subcommittee (with chair Jeanne Astino and School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro); Director of Project Management and Planning Brian Joyce; Planning Board member David Drinan; Andrew Willard from the Advisory Committee; and Capital Budget member Jack Keniley. The committee issued its recommendation to the Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski, who is the Chief Procurement Officer and will negotiate the terms of the contract with the winning bidder.

This is the final step of the RFP process, which Bodell said went well, and garnered high praise for the town. "We received compliments from the bidders that this was one of the most organized RFP processes they've participated in," she said. "With this stage completed, we are looking forward to negotiating the contract and explaining to the different groups in town what the potential benefits to the town are."

The AEC was scheduled to present to the Advisory for Thursday, April 4 and the Planning Board on Tuesday, April 9; the committee is also trying to get on the agenda for both Capital Budget and the Selectmen. The School Committee had an AEC update slated for their Wednesday, April 3 meeting.

Once the contract has been negotiated, the AEC will be able to share the numbers of the potential cost savings the solar panels are expected to reap.

"The total savings is not going to be determined until we get the final contract in place," Bodell explained. "The potential savings are dependent on the net metering credits. However, there is plenty of anticipated savings given the pricing that came in [with the winning bid]. All the bidders presented documentation that they are able to get financing, and all have financially viable projects."

In other words, the winning bidder was the solar developer who could help the town get the best deal on energy. Both the school roof and landfill solar panel projects "are economically viable project that can bring significant savings to the town," said Bodell.

Now is a good time for Cohasset to look toward solar as an alternate energy source, the AEC co-chair explained, based on how the tide has turned in the energy market.

"The timing now is ideal," she explained. Currently, there is an excess of solar panels in the marketplace because of increased production from China; more available product equals lower prices overall.

The tide is also changing on the regulatory side of the energy market on the state level, said Bodell, concerning Solar Renewable Energy Credits (SRECs), the tradable commodities that are generated from renewable energy sources (sunlight, wind or water). One "REC" is generated per every megawatt-hour of clean/green electricity produced.

In short, said Bodell, "The timing is perfect for Cohasset to take advantage of this program."

full-time position that would assist multiple departments in Town Hall. Selectman Fred Koed said he was not in favor of this, as the position would create a consolidated department that he was not in favor of; he said he would rather have a new health agent hired who could also informally assist the other departments that need administrative help now and then.

Milanoski said, however, "This doesn't create a department. It just creates a [new] position."

Zemel said that his understanding of the new position is that it would be part of a "centralized support staff for all the affected departments."

This came nearly a week after the Sewer Commission's administrative assistant, Diane Hindley, and Planning Board administrator Jo-Ann Pilczak both came to the selectmen to discuss the implementation of new permitting software and how that will help streamline the various departments. Hindley has also undergone procurement training and has been assisting Milanoski, who as town manager is the town's Chief Procurement Officer. Selectmen were wary of approving a new job title that would see Hindley promoted, but also involve impact bargaining with the clerical union, which Hindley is part of.

In light of that discussion, this week the selectmen were also reluctant to approve the proposed full-time administrative assistant position. However, Milanoski said that since this is a new position, it would not involve any impact bargaining with the unions. Milanoski explained that funds were coming out of the Board of Health office and building office to fund the position. The board voted unanimously to recommend the new position, once it was agreed that the funding for the job would be split 50-50 between the health and building departments—roughly $15,000 from each.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said, "I have no problem with... pooling from various departments to serve various departments. This hasn't created a new department."

If approved by Town Meeting, these positions will be added in July.

Look for more on these issues in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Elder Affairs proposes new staff

The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday to approve the Elder Affairs budget for fiscal year 2014, which includes three new full-time positions. If approved by Town Meeting, there will be four full-time staff people in the EA office beginning July 1. This includes the current full-time position, director of Elder Affairs (Coral Grande), along with an Assistant Director (formerly titled the Outreach Coordinator), the Elder Affairs Coordinator, in charge of transportation and volunteers (formerly called the Service Coordinator), and an administrative assistant. Each position is for 35 hours per week. There is also a Head Driver position whose hours will vary, according to the Elder Affairs proposed organizational chart. The new jobs will be posted, pending Town Meeting approval.

The salary line items for these positions are confusing in the FY14 budget printout, since the software program the town uses does not allow for title changes. Currently, the old titles are what's listed in the budget. For example, a part-time receptionist position that was appropriated around $14,000 in FY13 has a $0 allocation in FY14, because the part-time position is becoming the new full-time administrative assistant. The salary line item for the AA job is coming out of the "Volunteer" position line item, which was also appropriated around $23,500 last year and has expended nearly $15,000 so far.

The Assistant Director position will pay $46,406 while the Elder Affairs Coordinator position is for $33,160.

All told, the Elder Affairs budget is seeing a small increase from its FY13 appropriation. The proposed total budget for FY14 is $249,448; the FY13 appropriation was for $238,390, with $172,942 expended thus far.

UPDATE

Selectmen accept sidewalk mitigation money

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Selectmen voted to approve an agreement with the Toll Brothers, giving the town $75,000 to use for intersection and sidewalk improvements. These funds are a mitigation contribution for the Toll Brothers' home development project, 41 detached single-family homes off Beechwood Street. The Toll Brothers construction at the vacant Hayes Estate, also site of the former "Cedarmere" construction project, has caused some dispute among the neighbors who would like a new sidewalk to be part of the plan.

Abutter Richard Fitzpatrick said that a 150-foot sidewalk linking the north side of Beechwood Street to Norman Todd Road was part of the original plan, but has since been left out by the Toll Brothers.

"Somewhere along the way that part was removed, which was a surprise to all the neighbors," said Fitzpatrick.

Attorney Richard Henderson said that Toll Brothers engineers conducted a study and several site visits, but a sidewalk in that particular place was determined to be unfeasible.

The selectmen said that they had no jurisdiction on the scope of the project itself; it has already been voted on by the Planning Board. All the selectmen were doing was voting to accept the $75,000. The board voted unanimously to accept.

Also, MassDOT is conducting a corridor study of Route 3A that will soon be underway. Sidewalks could be part of future discussions.

The selectmen also heard a report on an easement for a drainage system servicing Newtonville Lane. The easement is currently missing indemnity language that would protect the property owners should someone get hurt on the property, according to attorney Richard Henderson. The language was left out by a recommendation of Town Counsel Lou Ross, said Henderson. The selectmen held off voting the matter until they hear from Town Counsel.

The board voted unanimously in the meantime to approve an easement for Pilgrim Bank that permits the town to maintain the town-owned pump on the bank's property.

Question of the week

For selectmen candidates:

Saturday, May 11 could turn out to be a beautiful spring day that could affect turnout. Why should Cohasset residents care about the selectman's race or which candidate gets elected?

Russell Bonetti

As Chair of the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee (CPC), I am proud of the work we have done to help preserve some of the true gems of our town. From the Sailing Club buildings, and the Deer Hill School play park, to the windows of the First Parish Meetinghouse, I have been honored to preserve places that are the soul of Cohasset.

For the past few years however, something even more precious has been under siege — the legacy passed to us of open, democratic, government.

Cohasset continues in far too much turmoil. Committees of volunteers were subjected to wholesale reorganization by the selectmen. Town Meeting votes have often been ignored. Many citizens and town employees feel their voices are not heard.

We need people on the Board of Selectmen who have records of serving the Town on our boards and commissions. We need people who respect those committees and the will of Town Meeting itself.

A 28-year resident, I have worked to protect Cohasset Harbor on the Government Island Committee, and Harbor Health Committee. As Chair of the Hagerty Committee I increased public access through creation of Mariner's Park. The Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI), and the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) now have their homes there.

I support a fully open search for a permanent Town Manager. I will work to see that your voice is heard. I would appreciate one of your two votes on May 11th.

Together we will preserve what is most precious for Cohasset.

Bill Burnett

Every day is a beautiful day in Cohasset! I hope you'll take the time from your busy schedule to head to Town Hall because you care about Cohasset, you care about its future and you want your voice to be heard. Frankly, they're the same reasons I'm in this race. As a community we need more people engaged; I've been inspired by those before me who gave of their time and talents to make Cohasset the place we are all proud to call home. The fact that you are reading this column shows you are one of those people. Let's work together to inspire others in our community to get involved and be part of the process.

Best-selling author Mitch Albom, sums it up best for me, "the way you get meaning into your life is to devote yourself to your community, and devote yourself to creating something that gives you purpose."

I am in this race because I believe I can make a difference to issues on the horizon that will impact Cohasset. From problem solving to creating efficiencies in the town, my record shows that I have the leadership skills to unite people together to produce spectacular results.

I am a regular family guy who cares deeply about our schools and community. I look forward to working with you to bring a new sense of energy to Town Hall and a fresh perspective to the Board of Selectmen.

Steve Gaumer

The Board of Selectmen acts as the representatives of Town Meeting by assuming the executive responsibilities of the town. The Selectmen are charged with setting goals and policies for the conduct of town business, and monitoring the success of those actions.

You should be attuned to the election because the Selectmen are entrusted with wisely administering our town, with your money.

You as a taxpayer should care who you elect to be a Selectman because competence matters.

If you elect me to the Board of Selectmen, I am determined to deliver good, thoughtful government. I believe good government is predictable, accountable and transparent. Good government makes decisions, crafts policies and initiates the strategic direction of the town by a collaborative, repeatable process, readily understood by all citizens.

This approach works. Under my leadership as Chairman, the Capital Budget Committee created a defined capital review process and the first capital stabilization fund in the Town's history. No longer are capital decisions a crisis-driven exercise. We now plan for disbursements after evaluating priority, need and alternatives in collaboration with all of the Town's stakeholders.

Your candidate must be able to articulate their positions and defend them. They should have a record of collaboration for common purpose, and they should have a record of accomplishment on behalf of good government.

In my 12 years as a volunteer and committee member, I've worked to forge solutions that make our government more effective and our budgets sustainable.

Karen Quigley

In the 40 years I've lived in Cohasset the choices we face about our town's future have never been clearer or more important.

The Cohasset I represent shows respect for each other, for town employees, for Town Meeting votes and for the law. I represent a Cohasset where reasonable people can disagree and still reach reasonable decisions; and a Cohasset that is financially healthy and secure.

A Cohasset that meets the needs of our seniors and our schools, preserves public safety, maintains our infrastructure and provides quality services to the citizens.

I represent a Cohasset where turmoil and litigation are rare, the people have confidence in town hall, and a Cohasset that has experienced and professional management and leaders.

I represent a Cohasset where elected officials listen to all sides and serve all of the residents.

This will be a watershed election and every vote will make a difference. If you want more reason, respect and accountability on the Board, please give me one of your two votes for Selectman on May 11.

Leland Jenkins

This election is important due to the legacy of past problems, how we have resolved many during my first term and how to deal with new issues and challenges in my next term.

Our corrective actions recently put in place have included investments in infrastructure, defining policies and procedures and recruiting topnotch talent. Moving forward we are fixing financial systems, inadequate computer and software capabilities, unclear processes, and deficient checks and balances.

This is being accomplished with the courage and foresight of current Selectmen, the Acting Town Manager, employees and dedicated volunteers. I am convinced that we are moving in the right direction. It is essential to maintain the momentum and progress we are making.

While on the path to fiscal stability we still have ongoing challenges, which I am prepared to deal with. Pension and retirement health care liabilities of $45MIL+, escalating contractual obligations, the 10th highest RE tax in Massachusetts, and limited opportunity for significant commercial or residential development restricting the expansion of our tax base.

My lifetime experience: a successful small business owner, 35 years in Cohasset raising my family, serving 6 years on the Advisory Board, has given me insight, ideas and solutions for problems plaguing the town.

Who you chose will need to lead the town through a better understanding of efficient, effective government while employing fiscal restraint. This will take the right experienced person and hard work. My years of service in the Cohasset community illustrate my ability to accomplish the needed goals.

Next week's question:

Has the Town Manager Act lived up to its promise or does it put too much power into the hands of one person?

• Responses to the Question of the Week should be no more than 250 words and must be received by noon, Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.) Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com.

• We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like.
Candidates both opposed and unopposed are invited to submit a formal announcement of their candidacy with a photograph. There is no word limit on the formal announcements but candidates are encouraged to be as concise as possible.

CANDIDATE ANNOUNCEMENT

Gaumer running for selectman

Editor's note: Candidates provide their own announcements.

Steve Gaumer, longtime Cohasset resident, has announced his candidacy for selectman. Gaumer has been a committee member (Capital Budget, Budget Panning, Water Planning) for 12 years.

Asked why he was running, Gaumer said, "I look forward to promoting good, thoughtful government; government whose processes are known, predictable; where transparency is standard and accountability is anticipated."

Gaumer noted that while Chairman of Capital Budget, the committee evolved to one that created forward looking, long-term capital needs analysis. The Committee adopted a formal evaluation process and advocated for the first ever dedicated funding source – the capital stabilization fund — approved by Town Meeting in spring of '08.

"The concept of 'good government' works, and we have shown that on Capital Budget, in Budget Planning, and in Water Planning," said Gaumer.

Steve Gaumer says he looks forward to promoting good, thoughtful government.

Leland Jenkins forms reelection committee

Editor's note: Candidates provide their own announcements.

I am pleased to announce that Ted Carr has joined Gordon Hislop as co-chairs of my reelection committee, along with Adele Janssens, Alex Koines and Peter Richardsson.

In the last several months many hours of hard work have gone into positive improvements in the running of the town government. We have a dedicated group of individuals, both employee and volunteer who are bringing Cohasset to a 21st Century standard. Several great initiatives have already begun such as, the shared Technology Director between the town and schools: and the hiring of an experienced civil engineer as the Director of Project Management and Planning coordinating facilities, DPW and utilities. It is important that we continue with this forward momentum.

Skippers win one for new coach

Beaudoin takes helm for new-look squad

The Cohasset Mariner

Coming into the 2013 lacrosse season, many were questioning whether Cohasset had lost their way. After a number of strong years winning their divisional championships, the past two years have been lackluster at best. The new coach at the time had a tough time developing a winning chemistry and was hampered by injury as well.

With the loss of key players, the style of play had to change, but it was tough to move the team away from the run and gun format that worked so well in earlier years.

New coach brings fresh outlook

Beaudoin focusing on whole program

By William Wassersug

For Cohasset boys lacrosse coach James Beaudoin, coaching at a public school is a new experience, and an experience he is enjoying.

A new coach in town, Beaudoin has coached at private schools, including Proctor Academy, where he was also an admissions official.

Leaving Proctor, he said, was not easy, but it was a family decision. Beaudoin's wife Monica is a doctor working at Children's Hospital and the family wanted to live closer to her job.

In the meantime, James is a stay-at-home dad for 10-and-a-half year-old son Grayson, and of course, dedicated coach.

"It was tough to leave Proctor," Beaudoin said. "They had just built two turf fields. But I

Weather woes

Sudden storm postpones baseball game

By John Bothello
The Brockton Enterprise

On Monday afternoon, the Abington High baseball team played host to South Shore League rival Cohasset behind the Frolio Middle School, kicking off league play for both squads and seemingly putting the memory of recent snowstorms behind them.

Both teams sent every starter to the plate at least once, and the Skippers had even pushed a run across before it became obvious that the teams wouldn't be able to officially renew their rivalry.

It was a game that started with plenty of sun visible in the sky, but Mother Nature ended up winning out again – this time in the form of thunder, lightning and rain. The game was postponed after 21/2 innings, with a makeup date yet to be announced.

Cohasset followed the shortened game with a 5-0

COHASSET ROTARY ROAD RACE BY THE SEA 10K

Perfect blend of tradition, technology and giving back

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

The start line of the 2012 Cohasset Road Race by the Sea

This Sunday, April 7th at 1 p.m., the Rotary Club of Cohasset presents its 37th Cohasset Road Race by the Sea 10K. There are so many reasons that people come back year after year...great volunteers along the route, the scenic views, and the commemorative t-shirts are all major reasons that people love this race, and yet still a favorite among many are the hot dogs served at the finish.

Each year Kinnealey Meats donates 2,000 hot dogs for the post race festivities and Gold Medal brand donate the rolls to put them (special thanks to Shaw's Supermarket). For just as many years the Rotary volunteers have cooked and served this culinary favorite to thousands of hungry runners and their families. However, you don't have to race to get the dog...you can walk too. The Fran Coffey Memorial Fun Walk begins and ends at Sandy Beach at 10 a.m. on race day. This year proceeds from the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk will benefit People in Need (P.I.N.) in Roxbury and Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull.

The hot dogs are "old school" road race but that tradition is served up with the latest in B-tag timing chip technology. Cohasset Road Race was among the first races ever to use the B-Tag from Chrono Track Systems. It's possibly the only race that uses such technology, yet still begins the race start, as it has done for so many years, with the sounding of a mallet against a ship's bell.

A shuttle van brings runners from the parking lot of the South Shore Music Circus up to the South Shore Community Center where the race is headquartered – if they don't want to manage the short walk into town. Local favorite, The Armstrong Brothers Band, will play for the crowd and Cohasset's own Anthony Everett of WCVB will once again serve as emcee for the day. There are great prizes courtesy of Curtis Liquors and the Greater Boston Running Company, as well as gorgeous bouquets of spring flowers donated by Clifford's Florist.

The list of major sponsors includes local companies like Pilgrim Bank, ColoSpace, Suburban Integrated Facilities Resources, RW Rosano, Graham Waste Services, Cohasset Dental and Goodwin Graphics. The generosity continues with, Marilexei Salon, East Coast Hui, ICD (Institutional Cash Distributors), Coastal Nissan, Hingham Savings, Hingham Lumber, Rosano Davis, The Balance Studio Shore Music Circus, Cohasset Family Chiropractic, King Street Boat Storage, Curtis Liquors, Lehr Barnes, Cohasset Collision, BIA Bistro, NE Moves Mortgage, Ameriprise Financial, Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy and Northern Oak Landscape.

Many more local sponsors including 5 South Main, Robbins Garage, Fallon Ambulance, Bay State Equipment and Atlantic Bagel. The race also wants to thank Atlantic Brokerage, Goodale Insurance, Philip Hugh Smith Interior Design, Vincent Nardo CPA, Your Project Office, Fox Associates, the Good Sport, Outside In, Lido Juice Bar and Dragonfly Embroidery/Design.

Register online

Register on-line until Saturday at 6 p.m. at roadracebythesea.com or better yet, come to the South Shore Community Center Saturday 9-12 or Sunday 9-11 to register and pick up your bib and long sleeve cotton T while there are still a few spots left. Race begins Sunday at 1 p.m. on the Common; Walk begins 10 a.m. with start/finish at Sandy Beach.

This race is all volunteer, and 100 percent of the net proceeds go directly to the charities supported by Rotary Club of Cohasset. Over the years this has included local high school scholarships, the Food Pantry, Boy Scouts, Cohasset Maritime Institute, South Shore Art Center, Paul Pratt Memorial Library and countless other worthy causes both local and international, including Rotary International's goal of eradicating Polio worldwide.

The support of residents and businesses and the police, fire and town are what have made Cohasset Road Race a success.

Whether walking or running, this Sunday is all about tradition and giving back. It's about fun and friendly competition. We hope to see you all out there!

win over Carver on Tuesday, led by an outstanding pitching performance from Terence Doonan, who tossed the shutout.

"This is something I haven't experienced in 17 years of high school baseball," said Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw about the Abington game. "We had all that snow this late into the spring and now this. It's absolutely pouring."

For both squads, the worst thing has been being stuck indoors and Monday's storm complicates this even more.

"We've been outside quite a bit because we've been able to use our turf field, but it's not the same," said Afanasiw. "It's cold, it's raw, it can be counter-productive at times. If this lasts a couple days and fields are a mess, then we're back inside. Getting outside, then having to go back in, is probably the worst part about it."

Abington and Cohasset have developed an impressive rivalry in recent years, largely in part to their success in the league. But that rivalry is merely a small part of why both squads were hoping to get Monday's game played.

"It could have been any team in the league and it wouldn't have mattered – these guys just want to get going," said Perakslis. "Having it be this game, with the rivalry with Cohasset, makes it even worse."

Said Afanasiw: "Getting them up? This kind of a game takes care of itself. These guys all know each other and know the level of competition. They all have rivalries in other sports. Getting up for Abington, or EB, or Rockland isn't hard to do, but the frustrating part of it is that later on in the season we'll have to come back and play four games in a week at some point. That puts a strain on anyone's pitching staff."

Afanasiw said he thinks this can be a big season for his squad.

"We've got a lot of potential," he said. "We've played two games. Last Thursday we played Scituate and were absolutely crushed. We made seven errors in five innings. Yesterday (Tuesday) against Carver we reduced our errors to one, got timely hitting and more good pitching and won. It was like two completely different teams. We improved in every facet of the game."

For Cohasset, a strength will be on the mound, where Shane Haggerty, Terence Doonan and Tim Cavanaro will get the bulk of the innings, along with Connor O'Brien.

The original plan was to have Connor Goetz as the team's ace, but he's recovering from a shoulder injury he suffered while playing hockey.

Goetz will still see some time as a DH, and will hopefully be back by playoff time.

"Connor (Goetz) would be one of, if not the best pitcher in the league," Afanasiw said. "With him out, Shane and Connor O'Brien will take the 2-3 role. On any given day, either of them can get it done. Shane has the experience. He's in his fourth year on the varsity and he has big game experience."

The big difference is style.

Last year, Afanasiw had power pitcher Jamie Faber rear back and blow pitches by hitters.

Goetz had a similar style.

Faber is pitching at Union College now.

"They (current pitching staff) have to stay in the strike zone and throw good pitches. They won't just rear back and strike out kids. Still, there's no difference between a strikeout and a ground ball out. We have the defense suitable to ground ball pitchers. We have Terence and Mickey Barry. They're good fielders."

As for the early shaky defense, credit weather.

"We've been indoor, and when it's cold you're stiff and thinking about surviving," Afanasiw said.

"Hopefully we'll get into the 60- and 70 degree weather and they can loosen up and play the way they can."

OPEN LETTER

New lax coach introduces self

Dear Cohasset Lacrosse Community,

I want to thank Mr. Ford, Ms. Connolly, Mr. Scott and everyone at Cohasset High School for giving me and my family the opportunity to join your community and lacrosse family. I am excited to meet all of the players, families and other coaches and educators at Cohasset over the next few months. I am also excited to move to the area this winter along with my wife, Monica, a physician at Boston Children's Hospital, our 6-month-old son, Grayson, and our dogs, Bruin and Moxie. My coaching career has followed my wife's residency and fellowship training, and now that she has started her new job, we are looking forward to settling down in the area.

I started my coaching career at Bishop Brady High School in Concord, NH, where I was the defensive coordinator for the lacrosse team who ended up being the Division II State Champion runners-up. My first head coaching position was at Hampton Roads Academy in Newport News, VA, and while there I helped the lacrosse team to a 7th place finish in Division II. I spent four years teaching English and coaching at Chase Collegiate School in Waterbury, CT. During my time as head coach at Chase, the lacrosse team was the undefeated Western New England Division III champions for three years in a row. They were also undefeated league champions for two years. The lacrosse team had a record of 57 wins and just 16 losses during my four years at the helm.

I come to Cohasset after a very successful 2 years at my alma mater, Proctor Academy, in Andover, NH. At Proctor I was assistant director of admissions, a varsity football coach, and head coach of varsity lacrosse. Last year the lacrosse program had its best season in nearly 20 years and finished second in the strong Northern New England Lacrosse League.

I have coached in three New England All-Star games and was named Western New England Division III Coach of the Year twice. I was also named US Lacrosse Coach of the Year for all of Western New England private school lacrosse in 2009. For the past two years, I was the Vice President of the New England Secondary School Lacrosse Association. I have been lucky to have coached two All-Americans and proud to have coached three Academic All-Americans. I have coached at the elite, club level for the NH Tomahawks, the CT Lynx, and World Class Lacrosse. I have also been an evaluator for the Brine and Adidas New England teams.

I am happy to now say that I am the new head coach of one of the top teams in not just Massachusetts Division III, but of the state itself. As a former teacher, education and high achievement in academics are of the utmost importance to me. Along with that, respect for the game and community are core values of my coaching style. I look forward to meeting every member of the lacrosse program on a one-on-one basis and am happy to be a resource for those looking for help in achieving all of their current and long-term lacrosse goals.

Please do not hesitate to contact me (jwbeaudoin@gmail.com) with any questions or just to say hello.

Sincerely,
James Beaudoin

In the winter a new coach was named to lead Cohasset lacrosse. James Beaudoin coached at Proctor Academy in New Hampshire after coaching at two private schools in the Washington D.C. area.

As a D1 goalkeeper for the University of Vermont, Beaudoin learned how to lead a team to victory. The best goalies are great leaders, so the town was very hopeful that he could change the direction of the varsity program. First impressions of the new coach were very positive before the season began, since he expressed a disciplined and robust perspective of the game. A pre-season game against Pembroke last week gave him a chance to see his young squad in action.

With a win against Pembroke the Abington game was setting up to be a good measure of how much coach Beaudoin was able to accomplish after only a couple of short weeks with the team.

After yesterday's overwhelming 17-4 win, it is obvious he has made great strides in a very short time.

Right from the start, it seemed as if every clear by Abington was met with a tight riding Cohasset attack and one of the fastest defenses seen in years.

The first goal for Cohasset came from attackman Nick Tangherlini, who was fed by midfielder Cole Kissick. Tangherlini scored three goals and added a pair of assists, while Kissick notched four goals and two helpers.

A second goal by Tangherlini was produced by a great play by newcomer, freshman defenseman Jack Donahue.

Donahue stopped the Abington clear with a well-placed check, grabbed the ground ball and ran it into the offensive half, passing to Tangherlini. A face-off win by specialist Joey Sestito allowed Cohasset to move the ball into position. Cole Kissick was given the ball in the high right corner of the box and the team set up for an isolation play (this is where the other Cohasset players move close to the goal to separate their teammate and his defender for the "Iso" play). Kissick took the ball, ran it quickly across the top of the "box" and at a very acute angle, made a perfect goal in the far side, left bottom corner of the goal.

The game continued to be dominated by Cohasset. The flavor of the game was well executed plays by Cohasset at the frustration of Abington. One play expresses it best; after a stalled clear by Abington, the goalie walked the ball to the middle of the field, where his pass was intercepted by Cole Kissick. With an open goal 40 yards away, Kissick shot the ball from the midfield line and notched another goal for Cohasset. Cole went on to make two more goals and one assist during the game.

The Cohasset attack, led by seniors John Mills and Nick Tangherlini, produced 10 of the 17 goals. With Colin Whelan at X, the threesome ran a quick, motion offense. Combined with the strength of the midfielders, threats would come from every position. John Mills produced five goals and led the team in total field points. He is back with a vengeance, perfecting his very physical, shoulder-leading dodging style.

In the third quarter a fast break by midfielder Tommy Ryan produced his first goal for the year and showed the depth and variety of the Cohasset offense. Time on offense was assured with a few great plays by defensemen Tim Gillis and team captain, Jack McElgunn.

Midfielder/ Captain Drew Nahill opened up the offense with his speed and accuracy. He produced three key ground balls and was a force in the midfield. Freshman Dan Axelson was also a surprise addition, running first line midfield. With two assists and three ground balls, Dan was a primary part of the Cohasset offense. The hard work by face-off man paid off throughout the game, and he was able to notch a goal in the fourth quarter. In total, Cohasset produced 17 goals against Abington's 4. Six players notched goals from a total of eleven shooters. That shows a broad group of offensive threats.

By the end of the game, the question was answered: Cohasset's Coach Beaudoin was able to right the ship, identify his strongest assets and develop a game plan that works. This was a great win, but there are better teams to be played, so most are cautiously optimism.

half to work on their passing game and get their younger players some experience. Freshman Madigan O'Neill scored her first two Varsity goals and twin sister Callie added one of her own. Caelin McDonald scooped up a ground ball and blasted home her first goal and Isabel McCarthy notched one of her own to close out the scoring. Cohasset faces a much tougher challenge on Friday against visiting Sandwich.

"Today was a great opportunity to get our first game under our belt and make it a total team effort," Cohasset coach Kully Reardon said. "The younger players really stepped up. The upperclassmen set the tone early. Friday will be a great test to make sure we are headed in the right direction."

The JV team played their first game against Norwell immediately following the Varsity game and was impressive in a 12-6 win.

heard through the lacrosse grapevine about Cohasset. I had coached against (former Cohasset coach Stew Curran, who is now at Thayer Academy) Stew. I felt it would be a great fit for my talents. I know the high school had a lot of success, and while I was looking, the youth program came to sight. There are about 100 Div. 1 guys in the area helping out. That's going to be huge for the high school.

I recently went to a coaching meeting and their mission statement pumped up my beliefs. The boosters are great, the high school is great."

One of the things Beaudoin likes about the youth program is a dedication to basics.

"They really work on stick skills and LAX IQ," he said. "I've always believed when you teach kids, you need to let them know why they're doing things, why they're going to a position. You want them to know and understand the game. I like that, especially knowing I have a son who will be coming up through the program one day."

That has translated.

"The kids are advanced here," he said. "I've taken over four programs, but never had one that was this strong before. We've been slow-moving the ball, and the ids are picking it up. They have playbooks and they've learned them quickly. There are a number of kids I can talk to like they're assistant coaches."

Beaudoin also likes the way the kids have handled themselves.

"I've had kids coming to me, shaking hands and thanking me," he said. They're good kids."

As for coaching style, Beaudoin has forged his own style by mixing and matching the best – and worst – of coaches he's played for and against over the years.

"I've had great coaches and bad coaches," he said. "Sometimes you learn more from the bad ones. You find out why when you get to college you're behind everyone else in skills. I also love to find great coaches and pick their brains. I go to a college coaches convention in Baltimore every year. I talk to people, pick their brains, watch games. All that helps prepare them."

Corry and Lemoine fell behind against Hingham's duo of junior Ashland Stansbury and senior Laura Hern but regrouped in impressive fashion.

"We won it at the net," Meehan said. "It was a great battle. Nobody relented. The 6-2 score (in the final set) was not indicative of how close the match was."

Cohasset won the top two singles spots. At No. 1, sophomore Emma Davis, the reigning state champ, defeated senior Emma Alderman, a former state champ, 6-2, 6-1. At No. 2, Cohasset senior Emma Smith won, 6-2, 6-1, over Delaney Dunlap.

Hingham's Danielle Vanzura picked up a victory, beating Bri Crough from Cohasset 6-0, 6-1, and Hingham's first doubles team, Nikki Lund and Maxine Bergstein downed Kate Sookiasian and Meredith Spofford 6-4, 6-1

In boys action, Cohasset blanked Carver 5-0 Tuesday night.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

TEN REASONS WHY YOUR CHILD NEEDS A SUMMER CAMP EXPERIENCE

Part 1 By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

There's no doubt that summer camp is fun. Kids get to sing silly songs, play funny games, swim in lakes, and tell spooky stories around a campfire; this is the image of camp that has been captured and memorialized in films, books, and television programs. But there's much more to camp than just a good time. For the last century and a half, experiential education in summer camp settings has played an integral role in children's overall development – cognitive, physical, and social-emotional. Here are five of ten reasons why your child shouldn't miss out on the unique growth experience that awaits this summer at camp:

1. Development of critical-thinking and leadership skills. Camp provides the perfect environment for your child to learn and practice individual and group decision-making, how to socialize and navigate their interactions with others, and how to resolve conflict and other issues that may arise when living and working together closely.

2. Increased physical activity – from canoeing and hiking to soccer and tag, an on-going workout is a natural part of the day.

3. Direct experiences in nature and living much more closely to the Earth – being outside is proven to reduce stress levels, improve mood, and simultaneously stimulate all of a child's senses.

4. Lasting intergenerational and diverse relationships – from peers to counselors, summer camp gives your child an opportunity to meet new people from a variety of age groups, providing them with positive role models and new friends.

5. Safety away from home – at camp your child is supervised by trained professionals who ensure their safety while inspiring them to try new things.

Susanne L. Dunn

Susanne L. Dunn

SOUTH BERWICK, Maine – Susanne Langdon (Delano) Dunn, 71, of Witchtrot Road, died Thursday, March 28, 2013.

Born in Baltimore, Md., in 1941, a daughter of Raymond P. Delano Jr. and Audrey Spoerer Delano. The family moved to Wilmington, Del., and then to a farm in Calvert, Md.

From Rising Sun (Md.) High School, she went on to Moore College of Art (Pa.), and then to University of Delaware.

She taught junior high art and then elementary art as a "traveling teacher" with six schools. She, herself, enjoyed learning the various processes used to create "arts and crafts", finding some of particular interest.

Later on she extended her love of books and reading with a job in a public library and finally as a library volunteer for many years.

She loved her animals, cats, dogs, and horses. She "discovered" clouds as a child and never failed to find them a source of beauty and awe. At night, she loved to watch for "shooting stars". A walk in the woods was restorative. All of nature was her source of inner strength.

She was married briefly to Edward S. Bear, and later to Francis B. Dunn (died 1994). She was predeceased by her sister, Elise Delano Biggs (died 1989) and her parents (died1993). She is survived by her family who have been her foundation, seeing her through to the last, son, Edward S. Bear Jr. and his wife Sharon (Peckham) of South Weymouth, Mass.; daughter, Anne Bear Honkonen and her husband Karl of South Berwick, Maine; grandsons, Charles E. and Henry O. Honkonen of South Berwick, Maine, and Matthew P. Honkonen of Vail, Colo.; cousins near and far, and her friends, old and new. (Buddy, the cat, will be disappointed that she disappeared.)

A celebration of her life was held Monday, April 1, from 4-7 p.m. at the South Berwick Library, 27 Young St., South Berwick, ME 03908.

Donations can be made on Susanne's behalf to the South Berwick library to further their good work and the love of books.

Arrangements are under the direction of McIntire McCooey Funeral Home. Please go to www.mcintiremccooey.com to sign the online guest book.

April is National Distracted Driving Awareness Month. When you call someone on their cell phone, be sure to first ask if they're driving, if they say yes, tell them to call you back. While Massachusetts law currently allows those over 18 to talk on a hand-held phone (as long as one hand remains on the steering wheel at all times) that does not mean it's the best choice. Getting 'techy'

Last Thursday, Deer Hill elementary school students had fun learning about buildings and bridges during the PSO-sponsored program, "Techsploration," put on by technology educator Tom Wahle. Wahle teaches technology workshops on structures, machines, transportation and more in classrooms around New England.

Educator Tom Wahle and third grader Kelsey Murphy pull on Anna Deininger to demonstrate tension during Tom's program, Techsploration, Why Buildings Don't Fall Down on Structure at the Deer Hill School on Thursday. It was a PSO sponsored event.

Fourth grade teachers Kara Moser and Maika Massari turn around suddenly while singing the structure song in a bluesy way.

Tom Wahle is comfortable underneath the skin he built with the help of third graders Anna Deininger and Kelsey Murphy.

Tom Wahle laughs after Xander Bestick and Anthony Wright repeatedly put the blocks in the wrong orientation while they were building an arch.

Third grader Graeme Welsh listens closely to learn more about structures.

Fourth grader Bridget Mahoney gives two enthusiastic thumbs up to her teacher Maika Massari who sand a structure song with Kara Moser.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 15, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A little woolgathering is OK. But don't let that dreamy state linger beyond midweek, when you'll want to be ready to take on new workplace responsibilities.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Love rules the week for single Bovines seeking romance. Attached pairs also find new joy in their relationships. Friday should bring news about a business opportunity.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Home becomes the center of a new social whirl, as you show your talent for hosting great parties. You can expect to impress a lot of people who've never seen this side of you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The Moon Child might have to raise those powers of persuasion a notch to get a still-wary colleague to agree to go along. Finding more facts to back up your position helps.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Hold off trying to fix the blame for an apparent mishandling of a work situation. A full investigation could reveal surprising facts on how and why it really happened.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your ability to find details others might overlook gives you an advantage in assessing a possibly too-good-to-be-true offer. A trusted colleague has advice.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to be called on once again to act as peacemaker in a long-simmering dispute that suddenly flares up. Offer advice, but be careful to stay out of the fray.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your organizational skills help you line up your priorities so that you get things done without added pressure. The weekend could hold a special surprise.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) New ventures are favored. But don't launch yours before rechecking all facts and sources. Also, be sure you can rely on support from certain people.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't be pushed into renegotiating an agreement, even though it might help avoid a potential impasse. Get legal advice before you sign or agree to anything.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Helping others is what Aquarians do so well. But this time, someone wants to help you. Expect to hear some news that will both surprise and delight you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Things go so swimmingly that you're tempted to take on more tasks. Best advice: Finish what you have now, then enjoy a well-earned relaxing weekend.

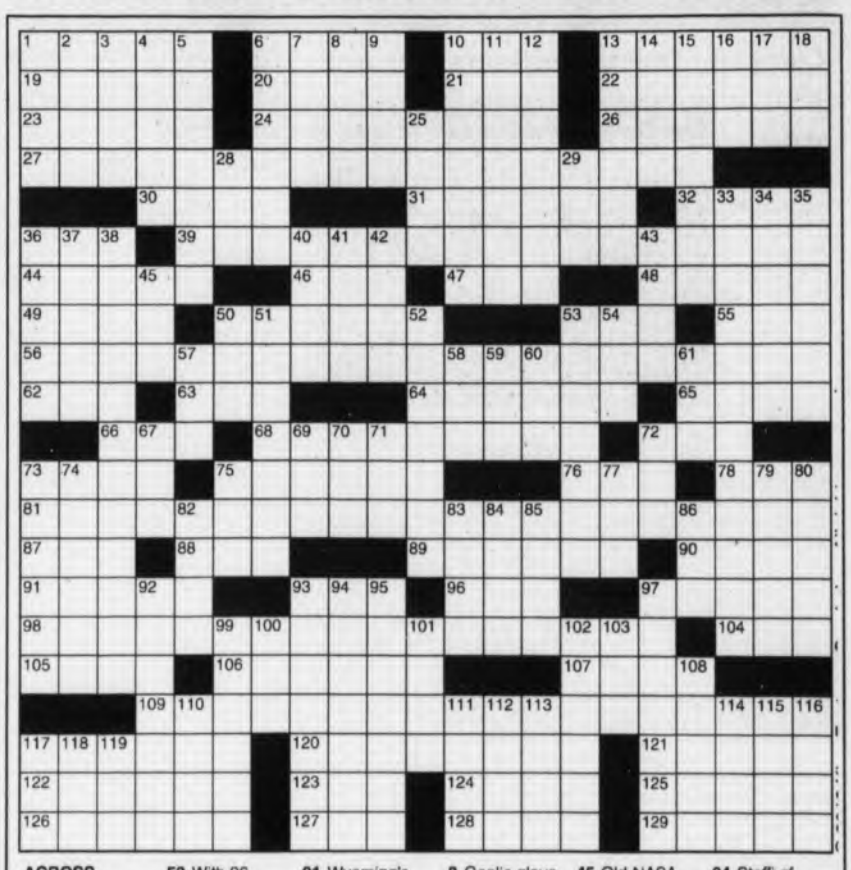
Fun By The Numbers



Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Chief job posting to restart

Selectmen look at conducting search

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's search for a new police chief is about to start from scratch.

The selectmen voted Tuesday to scrap the currently advertised posting done by the acting town manager and have a public safety consultant in to discuss how to go about conducting a search. The consultant is retired chief Wayne Sampson, Executive Director of the Mass. Chiefs of Police Association (MCPA), who reportedly said he would come to Cohasset pro-bono to offer his guidance.

Whether or not a police chief opening should be posted in a law enforcement-only database or publicly, online and in newspapers, was a point of contention among the board and town manager. They also debated whether to launch a statewide or nationwide search.

Cohasset has been without a police chief since May 2012, when former chief Mark DeLuca was placed on paid suspension following several union allegations of misconduct. DeLuca's contract was not renewed when it expired in January 2013. Deputy Chief William Quigley has been running the department since May.

Last week, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced that he had posted the chief's position on March 26, and that it would be viewable in police departments statewide through the CJIS system. However, some online bloggers attested that the position was not posted at all. Milanoski said this week that there was a delay with the 'Reuse' t-shirts on display for Earth Month

By Erin Dale

An April Fool's joke set up a sweet business promo in time for another major April observance—Earth Month.

Alex Eaves says that April Fool's Day is his favorite holiday, because "it's the one day of the year I will allow myself to lie." This year, he decided to play a prank on his friends and family when he posted a blog saying that he had given up on his business to start working at Starbucks— complete with a photo of him doing just that, green apron and all.

While the joke was all in good fun, it was the launch of a special collaboration between Eaves' company, Stay Vocal, and the coffee stop. This week, Eaves became the featured "artist of the month" at the Cohasset Starbucks. Now, the funky, eco-friendly t-shirts Eaves creates and sells are proudly on display in the corner of the shop, where the "comfy chairs" are.

Eaves does not consider himself to be an artist; the Stay Vocal owner works with a network of artists to create his one-of-a-kind shirt designs. However, he is honored by the opportunity to display his wares in the café, especially since his

TOWN RULES

Keeping control of your dog

What: In light of a neighborhood dog-biting incident described in a recent police beat, perhaps it is worth taking a look on what the law is when dogs attack.
In Massachusetts, leashing laws differ from town to town. Cohasset's dog policies are in Article 7, Section 12 of the town bylaws.

Leashing: According to the bylaws, anyone who fails to keep a dog under control, without being restrained by a chain or leash, and allows the dog to go onto a property without the property owner's permission is subject to a fine (Article 7, Section 12 [f]).
Acting Police Chief William Quigley says, "A dog does not have to be on a leash but has to be under an owner's visual or verbal command at all times. A dog is not allowed to go on someone else's property without the owner's permission."
Penalties: The first violation leads to a $25 fine; the second, $35. Third and subsequent violations are $50.

Bites: All animal bites should be reported to the Animal Control officer (Paul Murphy) immediately, per the town bylaws. It is customary for the owner of a biting dog to pay the medical bill for treating the injured pet. Following a March 22 dog attack incident, the owner of the attacked dogs sent a bill to the owner of the biting dog for nearly $400. Quigley said that the one whose dog did the biting must pay the bill.
"You are responsible for any damage your dog does," said Quigley.

SENIOR CENTER

Land transfer

Also, senior survey results

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It's been a long time in the making, but the Board of Selectmen has made good on a promise they made in regards to the Social Service League's proposed new Senior Center.

Nearly a year and a half after a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) was signed by the selectmen, then Town Manager Michael Coughlin, and the President of the Social Service League on Dec. 13, 2011, the selectmen voted last Tuesday to allow a complicated land transfer to occur between the League and the Cohasset Swim Trust.

The project to build a town senior center has been underway for the past five years, spearheaded by the League. The MOU approved the land swap and public-private partnership between the Swim Trust and the League.

The MOU allows a number of actions to take place, but will namely turn the land – 91 Sohier Street or "parcel 4A" – into a build-able lot. The League will own the land, and the building they are planning to erect. The League hired architect Joel Bargmann of the Boston firm Bargann, Hendrie and Archetype, Inc. last year. Designs were completed recently, and digital renderings of the building's interior were presented to the selectmen last week.

The project will cost approximately $4 million for a 13,000 square-foot center. Most of those funds are coming from the League, thanks in part to fundraising. So far the town has not had to expend any money on the project, although the plan is for the League to gift the building to the town after the center is built.

Once finalized, the MOU allows up to five years for the building project to be completed; 24 months to get

POLICE BEAT

Third report of ID theft on tax returns

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

For the third time in two weeks, Cohasset police have received a report from a citizen who is the apparent victim of income tax fraud. This time the call came from a Cedar Acres Lane resident whose husband was told when he went to file his taxes that someone had already done so using his social security number.

The IRS referred the coupie to the Federal Trade Commission and the investigating arm of the IRS. They also filed a police report.

The two previous incidents involved residents of Jerusalem Road and Bates Lane.

Threats

A disgruntled tenant at Avalon ended up in the police log last week after making a threat to dynamite the building, police said. The 70-year-old woman called the customer service hotline at the complex and made the threat because she was upset with the trash service. After speaking with her, police said she had apparently been venting and agreed that making the threat was a foolish thing to do. Police explained to her that she had come very close to violating the law and if there were further issues she could be subject to a criminal complaint.

Car running

Police and fire personnel responded to an Avalon unit last week where a 2010 Toyota Camry had been running in the garage. The unit was ventilated and there were no injuries. It is not clear why the car was running but police think the car owner may have either accidentally hit or sat on the key fob starting the car remotely. The fumes set off the unit's alarms, police said.

Protective custody

A 50-year-old Cohasset woman was taken into protective custody at around 5:30 p.m. on Wednesday (April 2) at the Red Lion Inn after causing a disturbance there. Police said the clerk reported the woman had rented a room for the night around 4:30 p.m. but once in the room started loudly knocking around the room and swearing. She then roamed around the inn causing a disturbance. The inn tried to evict her but she refused to leave; when police arrived she still refused to leave. Police said she was showing the signs and symptoms of intoxication and was taken into protective custody. Her husband went to the station around 7 p.m. and she was released to his custody, police said.

Domestic

A 62-year-old Cohasset man is facing a domestic assault charge after putting his wife in fear on Sunday night. Police said the wife called to report her husband was intoxicated and was making threats. Police went to the home and said the man was highly intoxicated and he was placed under arrest.

Hospital clothes

Police responded to concerned caller last week about a man who arrived at the Avalon gym in hospital clothes. Investigation revealed he had just been released from the hospital and was locked out of his unit. The management assisted him in getting into his apartment while police stood by.

Soliciting

Police received a report last week from a local gym on King Street about a couple of men trying to sell makeup to customers at local stores and businesses. The duo had gone by the time officers arrived and no description of the vehicle was provided.

Parking

Police said motorists are ignoring the no parking signs along Bancroft Road near Milliken Field impeding emergency vehicles. Several cars have been ticketed over the past week.

Move Over Law in effect

When an emergency or maintenance vehicle is stopped on the side of the road, move over to the next lane, or slow down if changing lanes is not possible. Under the Move over Law, failure to do so could result in a fine of up to $100.

NEWS UPDATE

Police budget is 'status quo'

Dept. will keep second in command job

The selectmen voted unanimously to approve the police budget, but not without some commentary on the overtime issue.

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen voted to approve the police department's Fiscal Year 2014 budget during their Tuesday meeting following last week's debate over staffing issues — specifically, whether the department could afford to hire a new patrolman while keeping a currently unfilled second-in-command position. There was also debate of the administrative personnel salaries, and whether the department should fund a full-time public safety manager position.

The overall police budget for FY14 is approximately $2 million, with around half of that going toward full-time personnel salaries. While a new patrolman was not added, the second-in-command position is still in the budget.

Last Thursday, the selectmen approved the town's overall budget of approximately $10 million but wanted to take another look at the police budget to see if there was room to fund an additional patrolman position. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said a few weeks ago that the department would hire another patrolman to help address a structural overtime issue (the department has expended nearly $300,000 in overtime this fiscal year).

However, adding in that position would have necessitated eliminating a currently unfilled lieutenant's position. The selectmen wanted to add the patrolman and help cut down overtime, but also did not want to lose a second-in-command position. Milanoski indicated that it would have to be either-or, as there as not enough money in the budget for both.

Cohasset's police union issued a statement last week that they were not in support of eliminating the second-in-command. This week, union president Patrick Reardon said he was glad to learn the position is staying put.

"We're happy they kept the second in command budgeted," said Reardon.

Taking in the selectmen and union feedback, Milanoski proposed that the department stick to the current staffing level, with 15 officers, including four sergeants and a lieutenant, along with a chief and deputy chief.

"It's the status quo of how they've been staffed last few years," said Milanoski. "If there is a need for an extra hire or two to fill vacant shifts, it's going to require additional study in the future."

Milanoski's proposal to conduct a $25,000 public safety study was rejected by the selectmen for the time being. So was his notion of having a full-time public safety manager. This involved transferring current Assistant to the Town Manager Jennifer Oram out of the town manager's office and into the public safety department, where Milanoski said 65 hours of administrative work was needed.

The public safety department already had a full-time secretary, Jennifer Ferrick, who was out on maternity leave until Monday. Ferrick recently said that last year, her position was reduced from 40 hours to 35. However, after giving birth, Ferrick indicated that she would like to keep her hours to 25 while still receiving benefits, said Milanoski.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said last week that she would not approve the budget if Oram's position was moved out of the town manager's office. According to the budget the selectmen voted Tuesday, there will be 35 hours of administrative work in the police department; Ferrick will work her 25 hours, while someone else will be brought in for the additional 10 hours per week. This could be done with temps or part-time personnel. Oram will stay in the town manager's office.

Removing the public safety manager position also led to a removal of a full-time assistant town manager/human resources director position Milanoski had proposed in earlier budget drafts. Instead, the salary item for the HR director (approximately $61,000) was reduced to $16,000 for consultant work.

The selectmen voted unanimously to approve the police budget, but not without some commentary on the overtime issue.

"We want to work on overtime for next year," said selectman Diane Kennedy.

Advisory chair Peter Pescatore noted that the overtime problem is a structural issue, and more bodies are needed to fill vacant shifts. "We aren't ever going to start to manage overtime with open shifts until we staff the police department correctly as a baseline. We still have this discussion. I'm totally in favor of getting that patrolman in."

Town Archivist to step down

Town Archivist David Wadsworth announced this past week that he will resign his position after over 30 years. Wadsworth has worked to archive public town records and is part of the Cohasset Historical Commission. He said in a letter to the Board of Selectmen that he is opting out of re-appointment for the upcoming fiscal year, which starts in July. He would like to remain a member of the Commission, however.

The selectmen commented on Wadsworth's decision during the Tuesday, April 9 meeting. It was agreed that a special proclamation will be read at the April 22 Annual Town Meeting.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that he hopes "somebody will stand up and continue the terrific work he's done."

CPC meetings

The Community Preservation Committee canceled its Monday, April 8 meeting and rescheduled to Tuesday, April 9, but had to cancel that meeting as well. The committee will meet instead next Tuesday, April 16 at 7 p.m. to discuss a request for $35,000 for lighting at the basketball court behind the library, and are going to revote the proposed Deer Hill Playground project to set the total dollar amount. The CPC originally voted to contribute $68,000 for the $125,000 project; Town Meeting will have the final say.

Craig Martin presented Bill Weeks a copy of The Warriors, a book written about the USS John W. Weeks, a DD701 destroyer on which Craig's late father, Bob Martin served for three years during the Korean War. Mark A. Kelly, a shipmate of Bob's, wrote the book. Bob Martin had previously given Bill other mementos from the John W. Weeks named after his grandfather John Wingate Weeks, a New Hampshire congressman who was instrumental in the passing of the Weeks Act in 1911. The legislation eventually protected millions of acres of national forests including the White Mountain National Forest. COURTESY PHOTO a building permit and 36 months after that to obtain an occupancy permit. If, for some reason, the center does not get built, the town will still own the lot.

Debate over fee waiver

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that she was unsure about giving up the town-owned land and wanted more legal protection for the town.

Capital Budget chair Steve Gaumer, who was in the audience, asked, "If the building isn't completed within the timeframe, whose responsibility is it to complete the construction?"

Senior Center Planning Group member Glenn Pratt explained that the building would still be given to the town.

Both selectman Leland Jenkins and selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that the point was moot, because the League would not break ground on the project if they did not have the money to start building.

"They're not going to start the project unless they have the funds, so it's not a problem," said Jenkins.

The League also asked the town to waive any municipal fees, including the building permit. The fees could have cost the League around $20,000 all together.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski cautioned the board against waiving certain fees depending on which services would pay town hall, and which ones would be contracted out. However, he told the selectmen, "The choice is yours."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that while she is behind the project, she wanted to see a chart of what all of the various permits and fees are. "As a blanket of approving fees... we just need it defined," she said.

Gjesteby agreed. "We should have the whole scheme of fees," adding, "I'm not against any of this but I agree, we need a specific lists of the costs."

Selectman Fred Koed said he was more than fine with waiving the municipal fees, and did not believe it would set a bad precedent for future projects.

"As far as setting a precedent, I think this is setting a great precedent," said Koed, adding that the League is paying for the building while the town has not expended anything for the project yet. "They've come up with $4 million; we've come up with nothing. I'd be comfortable with [allowing up to] $50,000 [of fees to be waived]. I don't want to see them nickeled and dimed."

Pratt said that not waiving the fees was "not in the spirit of what we're trying to do" as far as the public-private partnership is concerned.

Elder Affairs board chairman Paul Kierce said, "The precedence has already been set; this is what the town normally does for non-profits." He clarified that the reason they were asking the selectmen to vote on waiving the fees was so in a few years, once construction is underway, "it won't be a surprise to anyone."

The League has a plan for construction and a timeline in place.

"We've been at this for five years. We're in it for the long haul," said League President Marita Carpenter. "We plan to break ground in fall 2013 and plan to have a ribbon-cutting ceremony in December 2014."

The selectmen voted 4-1 on the MOU, with Gjesteby dissenting. However, the board voted unanimously to waive the municipal fees for the project.

Senior Survey results

Last week, selectmen also discussed the results of a recent community survey that gauged public interest in community programs and a potential senior center.

The town conducted an electronic survey through the Gerontology Dept. at UMass Boston. Jan Mutchler of UMass assisted in the survey, meeting with Elder Affairs Director Coral Grande and the town manager on several occasions.

The 45-question internet survey took place last October, with every Cohasset resident aged 18 and over receiving a postcard in the mail with log-on instructions. According to Mutchler, 511 residents completed the survey, around 9 percent of the town's population. Just over half of the respondents were aged 60-plus. The survey results were published in January.

"Our goal was to hear from residents of all ages on Cohasset as a community and thoughts on elder services," said Mutchler.

The survey consultant explained that the increasing senior population in town indicates a greater need for the town to provide more services for this age group in the near future.

"Cohasset seniors make up a sizeable share of the overall population," said Mutchler. In 2010, 22 percent of the population was aged 60 and up, with 34 percent aged 40 to 59. According to research data, "Over a 10-year period, the senior population increased by 20 percent. It's moving along quite dramatically," said Mutchler.

The survey concluded that, overall, there is interest in a new senior/community center. Respondents rated town services highly, with around 50 percent ranking police/fire, the schools and water-sewer services as "Very Important," with senior activity programs falling somewhere in the middle along with youth programs.

The survey also showed that "a sizeable portion of the population surveyed had used the programs offered by Elder Affairs," Mutchler explained. "We also asked people who haven't used them if they will in the future — only 15 to 25 percent said they did not plan to use them."

The current Elder Affairs department is housed in the town community center, but events and activities for seniors take place in various locations around town since the department is pressed for space. However, the survey showed that 72 percent or respondents were "somewhat or very satisfied" while non-users "did not have much of an opinion."

There were several write-in comments that were dissatisfied with the amount of space for the current senior programs, according to Mutchler. People also expressed concern over the cost of a new senior center.

Mutchler suggested that the town should work on more public education to relay "information about the need and goals in respect to elder services."

CHIEF

MCPA in posting the position. The position was posted via the CJIS Extranet database that all police officers have access to, however. The posting was to expire on Monday, April 8, so Milanoski told the selectmen Tuesday that he would extend the posting until April 22.

Problems with the post

Selectmen had issues with the job posting, however, stating that it excluded potential candidates by requiring specific FBI National Academy or FBI-LEEDA Command School training courses and yet not requiring a college degree. Milanoski said that the posting indicated a four-year degree was preferred; selectman Fred Koed said that a chief should have a Master's and that in a community like Cohasset, which so values education, patrolmen should also be required to have a Bachelor's.

The posting also noted that the department already has a "strong internal candidate." Selectmen wanted that phrase removed. Milanoski said he removed the language from the second posting after a recommendation from Town Counsel. However, the town manager said he only included that phrase in the first place per the selectmen's instruction to him during an executive (closed) session discussion on the chief's position.

"I followed the lead we talked about in executive session," Milanoski said to the board. "I did what was requested of me."

Both selectmen Paul Carlson and Diane Kennedy admitted later in the meeting that Milanoski spoke the truth, that the board did ask him to include this language in the advertisement.

The selectmen had some other issues with the job posting, however.

Koed shared in a prepared statement that the posting should also have been advertised for a full 30 days in the public media and the Mass. Municipal Association's MMA Bulletin. He also pointed out that the salary information was not included.

Koed also said that he spoke with Sampson of the MCPA and learned that Milanoski had sent a request to advertise the chief's position at 6:12 p.m. just before the selectmen's meeting during which Milanoski announced that he posted the position. Since the MCPA's administrative staff was preparing for an annual trade show, said Koed, the advertisement was not actually posted until Friday, April 5, with the applications due the following business day, Monday, April 8.

The selectman also stated that the CJIS database was not a proper place to post the job, since it is used to access criminal justice information. In light of these issues, Koed called the job posting "defective" and motioned to "pull the plug" on the advertisement.

Milanoski responded to Koed's statement by saying the CJIS database is a "direct line of communication around the state" for police officers and therefore a good place to advertise a position. The town manager mentioned that he had also had several conversations with Sampson.

"I followed the lead we talked about in executive session. I did what was requested of me."

Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

"This is an open and transparent process," Milanoski said of the job search. "It's been extended another two weeks due to an administrative snafu."

Statewide vs. nationwide

Kennedy said that she felt the job should be posted in at least the Boston Globe and the MMA Bulletin. She is also in favor of doing a nationwide search.

"Open it up," she suggested, adding that the board could find a strong candidate from out of state. "Using an example from 'Batman,' Commissioner Gordon might want to come to Cohasset; we just don't know."

Milanoski responded that while he has no qualms about advertising the job in the MMA, Globe or Patriot Ledger, he has concerns over conducting a nationwide search, citing the importance of having a chief who already knows state law.

"I think it's a bad idea to bring someone in from out of state to Cohasset," Milanoski said. "We need to have someone here who understands Massachusetts state laws... Mass. laws are different than other states' and he or she needs to be responsible for knowing what this state's laws are. To have someone not trained in Mass. law run the department is not in the best interest of Cohasset."

Russ Bonetti, Parker Avenue, said during public comment that he viewed the job posting's language on a strong internal candidate as "discriminatory." He also felt the search should be conducted nationwide. "I don't think we should limit ourselves to somebody in state."

Carlson took the fall for that stipulation appearing in the job posting. "The board felt at the time it was something people should know. That was a board recommendation."

Bonetti said that surprised him. Carlson responded, "It seemed like the fair thing to do," adding that a chief he spoke to said the selectmen "did the right thing."

Milanoski indicated that he felt the job posting's wording was an accurate reflection of how the police department is being run under the acting chief. "Let's be honest— I think Cohasset is being managed very well right now," he said.

Bonetti said that he was not implying that Cohasset is not being run well; however, he doesn't think learning the state's laws should be a hindrance for the right candidate: "It should not take a qualified person any length of time to come up to speed."

Starting from scratch

Agnes McCann, Doane Street, commented that instead of the selectmen apologizing for the town manager's mistakes in posting the chief's position, they should just create a new advertisement. "Why are you making adjustments to a bad ad instead of doing a new one?"

Selectman Leland Jenkins agreed that there should be a new 30-day advertisement posted, as the whole issue had become "so convoluted" and controversial.

Kennedy agreed, in order to "take some corrective action." Responding to McCann's comment, however, she added, "I'm not going to be an apologist for the acting town manager. I think he's made a lot of mistakes... but to sit here and badger him for wordsmithing is wrong. We did have a session, we did discuss the job, he is telling the truth... We can take the blame."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she agreed with Jenkins, and also thought the board should invite Sampson to speak at their next meeting and then post the job again, "to go out and do it right."

"Everything in life is not perfect," said Gjesteby.

Koed noted that Sampson is among the top public safety consultants in his field. "His offer to come out here pro-bono is something we should take up."

The board voted unanimously to have Sampson in to discuss the chief's position and take the current job posting off the table.

Question on process

The selectmen's latest directive to the acting town manager – to take down the advertisement he has already posted, and keep a closer eye on the search for a candidate – appears to be an unusual move.

Carlson noted that in his experience, the selectmen do not normally review a job posting before it goes out, since the department head jobs are under the town manager's purview.

"The town manager put out what he put out, we got the candidate... When [former town manager] Bill Griffin hired Chief DeLuca [in 2010], he posted the job and set up the search committee," said Carlson. "That's been our precedence in my experience."

Per Cohasset's Town Manager Act, the town manager hires department head positions including the Police and Fire chiefs, Finance Director and Treasurer Collector. The selectmen have 15 days to accept or reject the appointment.

Milanoski planned to set up a selection committee comprised of Cohasset citizens and law enforcement professionals, reaching out to some former members of the police department, including a former chief, and a local judge to "develop an impartial review process." The committee would recommend the top three candidates, and conduct interviews. Milanoski said he would work with the MCPA to select the final candidate to be the next police chief; a recommendation would then be made to the selectmen.

Now, it seems the selectmen will have more of a say in how Cohasset's new chief is selected.

"They recommended I go forward and post the position with the preference that we have a strong internal candidate currently running the department," Milanoski said in a phone call. "Now they want to change the process."

T-SHIRTS

shirts happen to send a "green" message.

"They happened to have April open, which is convenient, given earth month," says Eaves of his timely Starbucks display.

Eaves, a Norwell native, creates and sells eco-friendly t-shirts through his apparel line Stay Vocal. Each shirt is up-cycled from existing shirts, cutting down on waste from textile production. Old shirts are given new life with fresh designs, whether that involves printing new images on top of old ones, turning shirts inside out, or sewing on patches. Half of the stock comes from surplus merchandise that was going to be destroyed; the rest is sourced from thrift shops or donations.

Eaves states on the Stay Vocal website, "We rescue t-shirts and give them a second life."

While Eaves is all for recycling, he explains that reusing existing items is even better.

"I am reusing what's here," he says. "It takes no energy to do that."

This is especially crucial as water becomes an increasingly scarce resource worldwide. Eaves breaks down the statistics.

"It takes 400 gallons of water to grow cotton for one new t-shirt. Two and a half people could drink that much water in a year, and that's only the water to grow the cotton, not the water used in manufacturing," Eaves explains, putting it into perspective. "Would you rather have two people drink for a year, or have a t-shirt?"

For Eaves, the reuse philosophy applies to more than just the shirt on his back — it's a principle he lives by. More than just an avid recycler, Eaves makes a conscious effort to avoid creating unnecessary waste by buying new things or using items that are only going to be thrown away.

"The big thing I'm trying to educate people on is the massive difference between reusing and recycling."
Alex Eaves of Stay Vocal

"I don't just sell reuse t-shirts; it's how I live. I haven't bought new clothes in years. I don't accept new gifts. If I don't bring my reusable mug, I don't get coffee; I haven't used a disposable cup in years."

The business owner understands the significance of walking his talk. "It's absolutely important to practice what you preach. I've seen people who talk the talk and then behind the scenes, it's a totally different ballgame. I don't want to be a hypocrite."

His love for the planet and protecting its resources also extends to his diet. Eaves is a vegan, meaning he avoids consuming all animal products and by-products.

It all comes down to conserving energy; and when it's recycling versus reusing, reusing always wins, according to Eaves.

"The big thing I'm trying to educate people on is the massive difference between reusing and recycling. Obviously recycling is good – it's better than just trashing it – but what people don't understand is all the oil and energy used to truck it to the location," whether it's food or apparel. While recycling helps, it does not eliminate production and save all that much energy. Less production means less wasted resources.

"You can't recycle the planet," Eaves says, his brand's chief slogan.

While Eaves' reusing lifestyle takes his love for the earth to the extreme, he encourages others to start by making small changes. It can be as easy as recycling instead of trashing, or reusing instead of recycling.

"I'm trying to emphasize to people, you can take instant action," says Eaves. "You don't have to do much, just by choosing a used t-shirt over a new one."

Buying and accumulating less stuff has helped the Stay Vocal owner streamline and simplify his daily life.

"I'm completely happier," he says of reusing. "The main reason I'm here right now [in Norwell] is because I came home to merge and purge. I come from a family of collectors. I was that way for a long time, but I realized how not important stuff is. Memories and living are much more important; stuff just bogs you down."

If you take a peek at the Stay Vocal display at Starbucks this month, note that even the display is made from recycled, reclaimed material. The t-shirts were matted on pieces of shirt boxes and framed in used screenprinting screens; the frames are hung with wire from a used building materials store; and the price tags are printed on the back of thrift store tags; the information about each shirt is printed on the back of would-be recycled paper and mounted on an old screen printing pallet.

The collection of Stay Vocal Reuse t-shirts will be on display through the month of April at the Cohasset Starbucks, 790 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A).

CSCR NEWS

Local environmental non-profit goes high tech

While Center for Student Coastal Research volunteers typically have their feet in the sand or marshes, their data will soon be stored in the clouds thanks to Softlayer Technologies, Inc. and a generous donation from founding CSCR board member, Paul Adams.

With 10 years worth of data stored on outdated computer hardware at Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) headquarters in Cohasset, it was time for an upgrade. But like most small non-profits dependent upon volunteers, CSCR didn't have a technology budget. Fortunately its mission inspired a local entrepreneur who appreciated that while CSCR's data is local, its impact could be greater if that data could be shared with interested individuals and organizations everywhere.

Adams has a long history at CSCR. As a founding board member in 2002, he helped secure financial and equipment donations and a long-term lease of the building that serves as CSCR headquarters on Cohasset Harbor. Working alongside fellow board members Jack Buckley and Steve Daley, Adams was instrumental in managing the restoration of 40 Parker Avenue and setting up CSCR's lab, workstations and conference area.

While Adam's professional work took him away from CSCR for the past few years, his heart remained with the non-profit and its mission to engage students in environmental science and raise awareness of the issues facing our fragile coastline.

"Over the past 10 years, hundreds of high school students from Cohasset, Scituate and Hingham have been carefully collecting data that reflects the health of our coastline," noted Adams. "I was excited about the opportunity to help CSCR establish a cloud-based database that people could access and analyze remotely, no matter where they were located."

This donation will also improve CSCR's ability to perform GIS analyses for the community. GIS (Geographic Information Systems) is used to create highly accurate maps of coastal features. These maps can be overlaid to highlight changes over time, and are especially helpful in studying invasive vegetation like phragmites, tidal circulation, and changes to our beaches and coastline.

"Another great outcome of this donation," added CSCR President Jack Buckley, "is that the task of switching over our website and data files to cloud computing is being managed entirely by a team of five high school students who volunteer their time on CSCR's Technology Team. The talent within this group of students far exceeds the knowledge base of CSCR's adult volunteers, and the youth are truly taking the lead on this initiative which is a wonderful sight to see!"

Gibson is a sweet guy

PAULA J FATERSIK

When he needs you, those whiskered cheeks will be rubbing up against you, and then chit-chat will start up. Once he has your attention and comfy lap, the purring and cuddling begins.

Little by little Gibson (also known as Gronk) has become a true love bug, who needs a welcoming and patient person to share his great personality with. COURTESY PHOTO

Life is not always easy, and when things get tough, we reach out and hope that the help we need will be there at just the right moment. Gibson, also known as Gronk, has overcome some rough spots in his short life, and with wonderful care and lots of love, he has blossomed into one sweet, loving and funny boy. He got his second chance, and is now working on becoming a loving companion to someone who can show him that life can be great, and filled with love, sweetness and all good things.

When we first met Gronk, he was scared, shy, and needed a confidence boost. Well, he sure received that while he was in foster care. Little by little he has become a true love bug, who needs a welcoming and patient person to share his great personality with. For the person who sees his soulful, affectionate side, and understands how he has made his way back to being a most endearing young boy, he will make a wonderful partner and new family member. This sweet guy deserves the best.

Physically, Gronk is a sturdy, muscular cat of medium size, and at 3 years old, he is looking for a chance to be a kid, and enjoy lots of warmth and petting, play time and affection. Need a little nuzzle? It's one of his favorite things. When he needs you, those whiskered cheeks will be rubbing up against you, and then chit-chat will start up. Once he has your attention and comfy lap, the purring and cuddling begins. Gibson knows what he wants and will let you know too! With new people there will be the shy start, but given a short time of getting to know you, he will win your heart.

When you see Gibson's markings you will probably wonder how cats attain their unique patterns. In his case, a white body was suddenly tipped with a tiger's tail, tiger earmuffs and delicate pink shades on his ears. This friendly guy is hoping with all his heart for a perfect match and kind companion who sees him as a real prince charming.

Gronk is just one of our great cats who is available for a loving forever home. Please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. You may also contact Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902 for an appointment.

The next Spay and Neuter day is scheduled for April 29th. Please call the office phone, 781-925-3121, and leave a detailed message and your appointment will be booked and reconfirmed.

Come out and join us at the C-Note Music Club on Nantasket Ave. in Hull on Sunday, April 28th from 4-8 p.m. for an evening of great food, music and a fabulous selection of items to win and enjoy! Parking is free right across from the C-Note.

Selectmen tackle touchy subjects

Special meeting deals with nine key issues

"I have no problem with brainstorming, but the venue for that is the board of selectmen meeting. I feel like there is a short circuit here."
Selectman Fred Koed

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Several contentious issues have been discussed at recent Board of Selectmen meetings, causing many meetings to run into the wee hours. In light of this, the selectmen held an extra meeting last Thursday, April 4 to discuss and vote on several controversial town issues, among them the cross-training of police officers and firefighters.

The discussion took place at the behest of selectman Fred Koed, who said in recent meetings that he felt blindsided by acting town manager Michael Milanoski including a to-be-determined stipend for firefighter one and EMT training in the contract he negotiated with the police union. Koed said that this notion should have been discussed with the board and vetted publicly before ending up in a contract, because of serious repercussions with the union and budget.

Some took the cross-training stipends to mean that the town manager wanted to create a unified public safety department with no distinction between firefighters and police; however, Milanoski said that this was never the case, and he simply wanted to provide stipends to officers who chose to take part in additional emergency training.

Both Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Acting Police Chief William Quigley have indicated that they are also in favor of the EMT training.

Koed requested last week that the board flesh out seven major issues; two more issues were then added to the April 4 agenda by chairman Paul Carlson.

The issues were:

- Cross-training firemen to be policemen;
- Cross-training policemen to be firemen 1;
- Cross-training policemen to be EMTs and to set the 'TBA' [to be announced] stipend;
- Creation of a new public safety department;
- No more special town meetings;
- To consolidate water and sewer departments;
- The proposal to posting a series of existing jobs in town hall including those of long-time employees;
- Creation of Inspection/Permitting department;
- Creation of Procurement Office.

None of the issues addressed that evening were new to Cohasset per se. Milanoski has discussed consolidating departments before, but reiterated to the selectmen Thursday that many of these ideas are merely concepts at this point.

However, Koed pointed to a March 8 Mariner article that detailed a water/sewer consolidation discussion at an Advisory Committee meeting that took folks by surprise — including two selectmen who were present and members of the water and sewer commissions. At the time, the consolidation was on the Advisory agenda as a warrant article for the April 22 Town Meeting.

It was removed as a possible warrant article that very night because the Governance Committee, which is charged with reviewing all town boards and commissions, has yet to conduct a thorough review of water and sewer. The committee has been focused instead on finalizing their draft of the revised Town Manager Act, which the selectmen voted to approve this week (the warrant will be mailed to all Cohasset residents this week).

During that same Advisory meeting, a discussion was held on whether Cohasset needed to hold a Special Town Meeting in the fall. At the time Milanoski said the current budget process has been designed so that a fall town meeting is not required. He said the idea that he wants to completely eradicate having a yearly fall meeting is a "misconception."

Milanoski explained that one of the budget goals for fiscal year 2014 is to "structure the budget to avoid the need for special town meeting as in prior years. Many have been required because of financial issues. This budget is designed not to do that... However, at the end of the day, we could have 18 special town meetings; all I'm trying to do is design a budget to avoid the need to fix the budget at special town meeting."

Carlson praised Milanoski for putting fourth his ideas, despite the flack the town manager has gotten for some of them.

"I think it's helpful to have people put out ideas," said Carlson, although acknowledging, "the town manager may be [doing so] a little too fast."

Overall, Koed said that while he does not have an issue with Milanoski bringing forth his ideas, he has a problem with the acting town manager's process and wants to see more transparency. "I have no problem with brainstorming, but the venue for that is the board of selectmen meeting. I feel like there is a short circuit here."

Koed said several times in the meeting, "This is government 101."

The selectmen took votes on several of the issues discussed, while some were simply left "off the table" for the time being. The board voted "nay" to cross-training police and firefighters; combining the two public safety departments into one was considered off the table. The board took no vote on the EMT stipend as it has already been agreed upon in the police contract, which was signed by the union and selectmen.

The board did not have an appetite to eliminate special town meetings and were not ready to consider consolidating water and sewer. However, they did vote to approve having the town manager explore creating a singular inspections/permitting office and a procurement office, with future public discussion.

Look for more on these issues in upcoming editions of the Mariner.

Jenkins attends meeting via video

Selectmen stepped into the future by utilizing video conferencing technology in order for one member to attend two recent meetings remotely.

Selectman Leland Jenkins, who has been traveling for the past week, was able to be virtually present for the Thursday, April 4 and Tuesday, April 9 meetings thanks to the program Skype. The software allows users to communicate via the internet using a webcam. Jenkins could be seen on the large screen behind the board and also on a laptop sitting in his usual spot at the selectmen's table.

The first meeting suffered from a few technical difficulties, with the connection being dropped several times. Jenkins would either call back or wait for Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski to call him back. By Tuesday night, any glitches appeared to be fixed, and the call stayed connected for the entirety of the meeting.

Jenkins thanked Cohasset's Chief Technology Officer, Rob Bonnell, for ensuring the process went smoothly, and for "doing an excellent job setting up the Skype."

Dennis Lehane comes to Cohasset

James DeGiacomo and the 1919 Boston police strike

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Dennis Lehane's The Given Day has been chosen as the 2013 Cohasset Reads Together selection. Lehane will speak on Sunday, May 5, at 4 p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium, followed by a wine and cheese reception at the Cohasset Historical Society. To enrich readers' experience of Lehane's novel, several events have been planned throughout the month of April (see schedule in box below and watch for further details).

The first speaker in the Cohasset Reads Together program is Attorney James DeGiacomo, who will talk about the 1919 Boston police strike — a key episode in Lehane's novel and a pivotal event in the history of both Boston and the country. It marks one of the first times in our nation's history that a police department had gone out on strike. Both the strike and the response to it formed the basis for how the country dealt with labor relations from that point forward. DeGiacomo, a Boston lawyer and former long-time Cohasset resident, will share his insights gained after substantial research of this transformative moment in history. He will speak at the library on Sunday, April 14, at 4 p.m., followed by a wine and cheese reception.

In addition to the speakers and events leading up to the Lehane talk, local restaurants have embraced The Given Day in spirit. Ask about the "Dennis Lehane Special" at Atlantica, Bia, Mr. Dooley's, 5 South Main, and Ava Cucina (see menus in next week's Mariner).

And for the younger set, the library has provided the elementary schools with books that connect them to Boston in 1919. Deer Hill has received copies of Joshua's Song by Joan Hiatt Harlow and The Great Molasses Flood - Boston 1919 by Deborah Kops. Joseph Osgood students have received Babe Ruth and the Baseball Curse by David A. Kelly, Babe Ruth and the Ice Cream Mess by Dan Dutman, Babe Ruth Saves Baseball by Frank Murphy and Cam Jansen, and Mystery of the Babe Ruth Baseball by David Adler.

Dennis Lehane is author of "The Given Day," which has been chosen as the 2013 Cohasset Reads Together selection.
COURTESY PHOTO

Set in Boston at the end of WWI, Lehane's novel captures the city's political and social unrest of the time — a groundbreaking police strike, ethnic hostilities, racial tensions, terrorist acts of Bolsheviks and anarchists, the devastating molasses flood, and more, all converge in one apocalyptic year — while Babe Ruth makes baseball America's national pastime as he saunters in and out of chapters. Janet Maslin, in a New York Times book review says, "Lehane has written a majestic, fiery epic...with shades of Doctorow and Dreiser... an intensely researched book that brings history alive." Multiple copies of the novel are available at the library.

Cohasset Reads Together is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and the Cook Estate. A Taste for Wine and Spirits donates wines for the post-talk receptions.

Health board passes Nuisance Regulation

At its April 9 meeting, the Board of Health held a public hearing and discussion of the proposed Nuisance Regulation, which was subsequently promulgated through a unanimous vote in favor of the regulation. The purpose of the regulation is "to prevent all nuisances, sources of filth and causes of sickness that may be injurious to the health, safety or welfare of the inhabitants of the Town of Cohasset," the authority for which is granted to Boards of Health by MGL Chapter 111, Sections 31 and 122-125.

The regulation, which will be effective May 1, is comprised of the administrative requirements for application and enforcement of the regulation, and is followed by two appendices that list definitions and examples of nuisances (as well as exclusions from the regulation).

Copies of the regulation are available at the Board of Health office in both hard copy and electronic formats. Additionally, a hard copy is available for viewing at the Town Clerk's office during normal business hours.

OUR VIEW

Police chief search

From where we sit it appears the search for a new police chief has gotten caught in a beef between Selectman Fred Koed and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski that has pulled the other selectmen on board.

When three Selectmen meetings in a row each feature a long, prepared, formal statement from Koed – one does not have to be a rocket scientist to understand there has been a serious breakdown in communication at Town Hall.

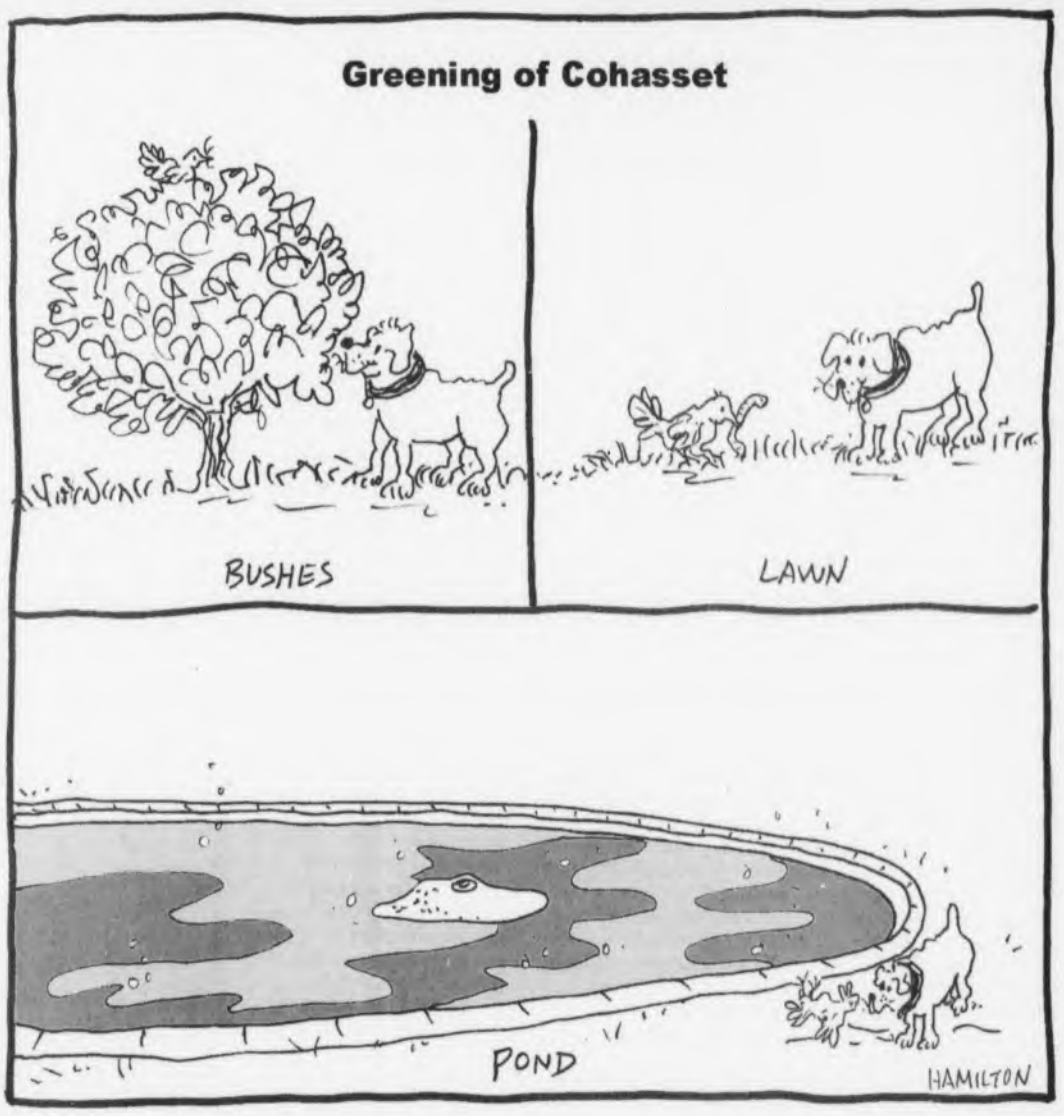
But it is a real shame, in our view, that the strong internal candidate for the permanent chief's job is now caught in the middle while selectmen go on a "nationwide" search to fill the local spot.

We all need to take a step back here and realize that this is Cohasset. We are not filling the spot for Secretary of State or looking for a police commissioner for the City of Boston.

If there were flaws in the posting and advertising for the position – then take ownership of that and move on but not at the expense of the strong internal candidate.

We can say with confidence that we have spent more time at the police station than almost anyone except for the officers themselves. We have visited the station at least weekly for the past 21 years. Guess what? The police department is being well run and the officers are happy. Arrests and other incidents involving police are being professionally handled, press releases are well written and there is no lack of leadership. There is plenty of communication both internally and externally. Things are going smoothly.

We hope that selectmen in their quest for a superstar for our police chief will look within and promote from within.



Nationwide searches have not necessarily held Cohasset in good stead. Cohasset, thankfully, is not a high crime town – but it does have some crime and a lot of community issues. There is a culture in Cohasset that one has to understand to be successful here.

Koed argues the chief should have a master's degree because Cohasset values education. That is a fine goal – but all the master's degrees in the world do not necessarily translate into the right person for the Cohasset job.

Cohasset is a small town with a big personality. It has struggled over the years finding people with the right "fit." Selectmen should check with Scituate, Hingham and other area towns whose chiefs have risen through their ranks to the top spot. Your editor also covers Hingham and knows that a big part of Chief Michael Peraino's success is his knowledge of the culture of the department where he has worked for more than 30 years.

We can say with authority that Acting Chief William Quigley understands the town and more importantly, understands why a police officer would want to spend his or her career here.

If selectmen follow through with their "nationwide" search, they should not be blinded by impressive resumes and master's degrees at the expense of their strong internal candidate.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bloggers should identify themselves

This letter is being sent to the attention of all bloggers who will not sign their names to the various posts.

We all have varying opinions on the issues surrounding this wonderful town we live in, and the various public officials and departments within the town. It is fairly easy to figure out who the writers are by the style and words used in their writings. I have said this before and will say it again. Agreeable people can agree to disagree reasonably. Falsehoods, innuendoes, and flat out lies do no one any good, and add nothing to the discussions at hand. We all feel strongly about our opinions (after all, they are ours).

We are all entitled to our opinions. But we can go about it in a civil and respectful manner. By identifying yourself in your blogs you add credibility to your opinion. Without that your opinions are your opinions only, and add nothing to the issues and discussions at hand.

Liking the Meals Tax

Really enjoyed walking the Cohasset Rotary Club's Road Race by the Sea this year. The sun was out, the view was beautiful, lots of smiling faces and great camaraderie. Even the leashed dogs seemed to enjoy the festivities. As I was walking along I saw many folks from Cohasset and many folks from other towns and cities all across Massachusetts. Blissfully enjoying my reverie my mind wandered gently to the upcoming April 22 Annual Town Meeting. Most particularly I reflected on the Warrant Article asking the voters of Cohasset to approve a .75 percent increase in the meals tax – as at least 161 other towns and cities in Massachusetts have since the Commonwealth authorized this option to help relieve the severe financial stress most Massachusetts towns and cities find themselves in nowadays.

It's time that Cohasset voters step up and authorize this modest increase from 6.25 percent to 7.00 percent in our meals tax. This proposed meals tax increase is paid for by customers, collected by the relevant restaurants and other business's that collect the meals tax now and without any further administrative burden. And the increased monies are returned straight back to Cohasset. Cohasset government officials have noted that we would get approximately $150,000 in additional revenues if the town approves the meals tax rate increase at the April 22 Annual Town Meeting. These monies could be used for a couple of more policemen or a couple of more teachers or to help pay for our unfunded pension liabilities or to improve our roads or help fund a new senior center and on and on – whatever we decide is needed, and a lot is needed. Our budget shows that Cohasset clearly needs more revenue if we are going to maintain anything near our present quality of life.

Our budget shows that Cohasset clearly needs more revenue if we are going to maintain anything near our present quality of life.

Cohasset is a beautiful destination for folks to visit and many people do. We citizens of Cohasset fund the services and other costs to maintain our beautiful town by the sea. And we gladly share it, as we should, with our many visitors who come for our races, festivals, concerts, restaurants on the harbor or just for a day out riding or walking along the ocean. I don't think it's too much to ask visitors as well as ourselves to leave a few pennies on the table to help us continue to care for Cohasset so they can come and share and enjoy it with us as they wish.

This meals tax issue arose on a Facebook discussion I saw a few weeks ago with one person noting "It appears to be a relatively painless way to raise revenue. You're taxing an avoidable luxury. The maximum tax adds $0.75 to a $100 restaurant tab" – while noting Quincy has also approved this tax. And a Hingham resident stated: "We have it in Hingham; I voted for it, I like it."

Well, I am a Cohasset resident and I am going to vote for it and if it passes I'm going to like it too!

Why change the Town Manager Act?

The following was provided by Christine Cunning, chairman of the Governance Committee, on behalf of the committee.

The Cohasset Town Manager Act is a primary foundational document for the town's government, a fact many did not realize until just last year. It actually trumps the town's by-laws since it is the state legislative approved conveyance of our town government. As such, carefully examining the Act is an important part of the Governance Committee's charge from the Board of Selectmen to identify any area of the Cohasset Government Structure that may be improved to provide better governance including accountability and effective/efficient use of limited taxpayer dollars. The TMA is the document that defines the powers and responsibilities of the Town Manager, the Board of Selectmen, their relationship and should be unambiguous.

The ambiguities in the original Act have resulted in a great deal of turmoil going all the way back to its adoption and we cannot afford to allow this to continue. The amended TMA that is being presented for adoption by the town on April 22nd aims to remove these ambiguities, clearly define the roles of the TM and BOS and present a clearer and more understandable roadmap for town governance. The current Act is now 16 years old, and while the bulk of the document is sound and has been left intact, its flaws had become apparent in the years since its adoption.

Each change in the new Act was critiqued and debated from all possible angles. This was actually a very technical process. We had several diverse opinions represented on the committee. The public input was also informative and yielded many alterations that have been incorporated into the final draft. When factoring all of the input, we have crafted an amended Town Manager Act that defines processes that must be followed with regard to the town's budget process and better protects the town's interests in general. The amended Town Manager Act provides checks and balances that were not clear in the original TMA.

If the TMA is a foundation of our governance, the by-laws then become the framework that further defines the processes and procedures that are built upon that foundation. The next body of work that the Governance Committee intends to take up is to align the by-laws with the amended TMA, and provide the rest of the details of town governance not pertinent to the Town Manager Act.

The Town Manager Act is a document that has to serve the town's best interests for years to come regardless of who our elected and appointed leaders happen to be at the time. We were careful to remind ourselves of this throughout the process. It is in this spirit that we have created this amendment to the Act for your approval, and we encourage you to attend Town Meeting on April 22 and support the changes that will protect Cohasset's interests for years to come.

HEDLUND REPORT

Reducing fraud in benefit system

BOB HEDLUND

Somehow, I strongly doubt that those who are misusing their benefits and committing fraud are unaware that their behavior is illegal.

I have served on two commissions in the past year that were appointed to investigate and reduce fraud and abuse in the Commonwealth's Electronic Benefit Transfer (EBT) system. Both times, I came away disappointed with the lack of action by the Commission, and more determined to make impactful changes through legislation.

The second commission, dubbed the EBT Cashless Commission, paid a consulting firm $100,000 to come up with a range of options from doing nothing to eliminating cash benefits entirely. Despite having a wealth of information provided by the consultants that illustrated the problems with the current system, the commission ultimately opted to make no substantive changes.

One of the very weak proposals that the Cashless Commission recommended was to provide better education for Department of Transitional Assistance (DTA) clients. Somehow, I strongly doubt that those who are misusing their benefits and committing fraud are unaware that their behavior is illegal. The final commission report also recommended higher penalties for store owners that knowingly permit abuse and potentially limiting "high risk" abusers, aka known program abusers, to a cashless payment system for rent and utilities. While I agree with these measures, I was confused as to why people classified as "known abusers" are allowed to receive additional benefits at all?

I did agree with the consultants on one issue: the DTA should move to a cashless payment system. The only difference of opinion on this issue is that I think steps should be taken immediately to implement a cashless system, while the consultants believed it would not be feasible for three to five years. While the technology may not currently exist to run a cashless system on a cost efficient basis, I believe that if we do not start down that path now we will not be ready to embrace the technology when it is available.

The technology is such that it is possible to provide benefits, make sure they are being used to cover the necessities of life and still provide a smaller cash cushion for emergencies. But that requires a seriousness of intent that certainly the Commissions did not show. My colleagues in the legislature should be called upon to do better — so that the generosity of taxpayers is not being further abused.

One major problem with the EBT system is the ability of an EBT recipient to withdraw the entire amount of their benefit from an ATM, thereby making it impossible to track how the money is spent. Over $400 million in taxpayer funds are dispensed in this manner each year. If EBT recipients are not using their benefit in accordance with the law, new regulations must be put in place to limit or eliminate the amount of cash that can be withdrawn from an ATM or from "cash-back" at point of sale purchases.

In addition to the inherent problems with cash benefits, eligibility verification is another major issue with the current system. To address this, I recently filed the Identity Verification Systems Act, which would require the Department of Transitional Assistance, which administers SNAP and other benefits, to institute a computer verification process that crosschecks an application against a number of databases. These databases are maintained by government agencies, including the Internal Revenue Service, Department of Employment Security, Social Security Administration, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, Federal Bureau of Investigation and others.

The legislation is meant to verify a person's identity and assets before they are eligible to receive benefits. Currently, the system allows self-declaration verification, which leads to rampant abuse.

I plan to push further EBT reform initiatives during the FY 14 budget, where proponents of reform have generally had better luck than in the normal legislative process. We need to restore integrity to the public benefits system so that taxpayers can be confident that their money is not being wasted and do so in a manner that protects the truly needy and deserving. If we continue to ignore substantive EBT reform we are not only harming legitimate recipients who follow the rules, but every taxpayer in the Commonwealth.

THE WINE'D DOWN

An American in Venice

PHIL EDMUNDSON

The wine was amazing – refreshing, crisp floral and citrus flavors with a hint of almonds. The day unexpectedly ended in one of those languorous moments of pleasure.

Wines from Europe often seem to taste their best when drunk in the home countries. I am not sure if it is the pairing with local foods or just the jet lag in this consumer, but I have noticed it many times. One of my first instances of this happy experience was on my "Americans in Venice" tour. You know the trip – stuff the kids and the spouse into an action-filled exhausting romp through some historical period that American public school education failed to discuss. Venice is hardly disappointing, of course. Its unique 118 island setting is mind-boggling. The canals and gondolas are better than Disney and Las Vegas combined. But I always look for the reason that a city exists and Venice exists because it was a trading and technology-obsessed state in the late Middle Ages. Of course, its technology was mostly around boat-building, crossbow-shooting and war-making. Its nickname "La Dominante" didn't stick for no reason.

But the more pleasant nickname, Queen of the Adriatic, also defines its place as a beautiful capital of commerce of all types including agriculture and wine. The countryside around Venice includes several wine-producing regions, but my Venetian vino experience took place with the wines of Fruili, the far Northeastern state in Italy just a short rode from Venice. Arriving in Venice exhausted, we went to the first canal-overlooking restaurant that we could find. A quick view of the extortionate food prices reminded me that I was dining in one of the most tourist-overloaded square kilometers on earth. I ordered clams and pasta and asked the waiter for a wine recommendation, cringing that his choice would be a triple-figured Euro enigma. Instead, he assured me that the best choice with my meal would be a white wine from Friuli. I was skeptical, it was well below average on his pricy wine list. The wine was amazing – refreshing, crisp floral and citrus flavors with a hint of almonds. The day unexpectedly ended in one of those languorous moments of pleasure. I knew that I would have to do a deeper dive on Friuli.

A few years later, I was able to stretch a day in the middle of another Italian trip to roam the Friuli countryside. Moving from the seashore, Friuli rises up to the Alps in the north and the Dolomites form its eastern border. Friuli's sand and gravel wine soils start at an elevation of 600 feet and rise with the rolling hills to as much as 3,300 feet above sea level, much higher than most great wine growing regions. The hillsides not far from the sea make for warm summer days and cool nights. The white wines for which the region are more famous are made mainly from the Friulano grape. Unlike any popular California/French varietal, it's aforementioned floral notes, relatively high alcohol level (14 percent or so) and mid-level acidity make it a big white wine. Seldom oaked, it will nonetheless do well with aging and is sold either as Friulano or as Friuli Colli Orientali. I picked up a bottle of Roberto Scubla's Friulano at Ralph's Wines in Hingham recently. It was a great example of this Italian treat.

There are big reds from the region as well. My favorite is from Livio Felluga and is called Friuli Sosso Riserva – a powerhouse of blueberries, blackberries, chocolate box and tar flavors made from Refosco, Merlot and Pignolo grapes. While you won't find this easily on the shelves, most wine stores can order it for you and you will love looking at the old-map-styled label of the wine while it ages.

If you are planning a trip to Venice, and without question the journey is worthwhile, can I recommend the best antidote to the City of Bridge's hyper tourism is a day (or two) spent just an hour away in the Friuli countryside. In fact, Livio Felluga runs a great Hospitality Center and tasting room that will make you want to move in for an afternoon. Just make sure someone else is driving you back to Venice.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Picking plants that had a terrific start

JON BELBER

Today I was moving earth around so as to spread some rock dust, place some brick and have a delineated path upon which to walk, right next to the returning perennials.

From the path, I expect to see gaps where plants will not re-surface after this long winter. In those gaps, I can hopefully place a new transplant or a hearty annual, be it flower or food. After turning the soil, I will add compost and carefully sow seeds or look for a root structure solid enough to transplant.

Like many, I might be drawn to the garden center, the Scituate garden club plant sale in early June or to the plant sales at Holly Hill Farm, where I know the plants have a terrific start.

So much depends upon the growth and health of a plant in its early stages. Today, I was both in control of a certain part of the garden and at the mercy of which plants and weeds were rearing their heads.

The farmers at Holly Hill Farm spend many a waking hour trying to keep a steady temperature in the hoop house. The sun comes up and the hoop house then hopefully fills with heat. If needed, then the doors swing open and are propped with a rock from the field and a pot of mint. The box fans are turned on to help circulate the still air and heat.

As the sun sets and the lovely purple and pink light descend onto the slowly draining, lower elevation fields, then the cool, often freezing, temperatures arrive. Then the farmer must hunker down at the old wood stove to coax a fire, which needs tending every four hours. So yes that means a loss of sleep and a greater effort to keep a controlled, warm temperature in the propagation green house. Tiny onions, flowers and greens depend on this devotion.

This spring, as with most springs, there are lots of temperature fluctuations and wind patterns with which to contend. There is also the wonderful increase to daylight that extremely benefits and encourages the growth of these thousands of seedlings. If the farmer is able to control the temperature in the hoop house, then the plant is likely to grow in a healthy manner and lead a fruitful, productive life. Thus the plants that are sold to local gardeners at the early plant sale on April 20th or those that are destined for the field are hopefully ready for the ever-changing weather and elements that come in May, June and the rest of the growing season.

The farmer and her team of interns and volunteers also start with well-sourced organic seed, a viable healthy soil as the potting mix and hours of observation to tease out early weeds and even manipulate tweezers to scratch out any damping off and algae. It takes control and vigilance.

All these efforts lead me to think of how we try to control nature, its many facets and even animals. Control as we might, nature often has a different agenda and plans. There are quite a few notices flooding the mail these days (too few of which are handwritten letters) that tell us how to control nature in four easy steps.

Lots of plants are shipped into roadside garden centers from places far away, perhaps harboring a disease and often dependent on a diet of synthetic fertilizers and chemicals that are then coerced into our watering systems and even drinking water. Lots of plants rely on the feeding and spraying of these foreign, not natural fertilizers.

The busy workers at the garden center, the home gardener, the lawn mowing proud homeowner and many a local farmer rely on these methods of control with little thought for the environment and to where these chemicals drain and spill. Seeds seek to sprout and plants wish to grow. How we control this rite of nature is a difficult, time consuming, and lifelong pursuit, open to debate and often dictated and controlled by large companies.

At the farm we try these organic methods, with hopes that the sustaining of these seedlings sustains and not tires us out. And though not every plant grows and not every four legged animal lives as long as we wish, we can keep observing, listening and learning with nature and fight less to control nature.

FOR THE RECORD

Wheels in motion for bike project

GREGORY MATHIS

Many readers have responded to our request for comments and their feedback will be helpful as we put the finishing touches on our local stories in the coming weeks.

A few weeks ago I wrote about our upcoming special report we're collaborating on with WGBH on bicycle safety.

"Right of Way: How cyclists, drivers and pedestrians share our changing roads" will appear in print the week of May 6-10, but we have already launched a website (wickedlocal.com/rightofway) and a Facebook page (search RightofWay2013) to help get the conversation started.

Many readers have responded to our request for comments and their feedback will be helpful as we put the finishing touches on our local stories in the coming weeks.

Here's a small sample of what people are saying:

"I am an avid cyclist and have been most of my life. Most, I repeat most, drivers are courteous and share the road. But the outliers terrify riders. I was hit by a car when I was 20 and have had quite a few close calls. Some drivers just don't see riders, some see us but underestimate the speed we are traveling and pull out in front forcing dangerous braking. Others will flat out try to run you off the road."

"I... enjoy riding my bike occasionally (in reasonable weather) both recreationally and in commuting to work (~2 miles). I really like biking for the exercise, site seeing, and low environmental impact. But the hazards of negotiating the roads with drivers, especially when the roadways are busy, frequently keep me off the roads.

"Our motor vehicle centric transportation infrastructure design now impedes both bicycle and pedestrian travel. As a society, I suggest we need to change this and begin actively encouraging these alternative methods of recreation and transportation in our communities."

"We recently moved to the South Shore from Arlington. I hit a man on a bike two years ago... It was raining, but apparently this doesn't stop an informal, unsanctioned bike race from happening. It occurs in the month of May on every Wednesday for one month. The rider who can complete the most laps up and down the hill wins – nothing, apparently.

"I saw several bike riders flying down the hill in the dark, blowing through a stop sign. I was stopped. After looking again, I began through the intersection. I then hit a man speeding down the hill, sending him flying through the air into a neighbor's yard. Luckily he was just scratched. He didn't want the police called, but every neighbor did. When the police arrived, they did nothing, to me or him."

"Every day when I walk my dog...on my way to the center of town I dodge cars that are only an arms length away. I am 90 years old and need to walk to keep in shape. When I think how the town is considering spending a million dollars to put in artificial turf on the high school fields instead of sidewalks I cringe."

There's still time to share your story or comments.

In addition to what we hear from you, we'll be looking at local cycling clubs, local state parks or recreational areas that are popular with cyclists, as well as examining the rules of the road – for motorists, cyclists and pedestrians.

Question of the week

For selectmen candidates:

Has the Town Manager Act lived up to its promise or does it put too much power into the hands of one person?

Steve Gaumer

By 1997 the administration of town government had become too complex to be managed by a part time board of selectmen. A frustrated group of citizens proposed an article to change town governance to a Town Manager (TM) structure. Their stated goal was to put the executive power in the hands of a professional manager. The Town Manager Act (TMA) passed with just 136 votes cast.

The TMA held no explicit promise of "good government" other than to define the roles of a TM and the BOS in the management of the town's affairs. The act was written with good intent, but imprecisely defined key areas of responsibility between the BOS and TM. The imprecision continues to cause conflict today. This is why changes to the Act are being proposed at the upcoming town meeting.

Some say that the Act consolidates too much power with the TM. This argument misses the key purpose of the legislation, which is to elevate the selectmen to the role of goal setters, policy makers and supervisors of the TM. The TM's job is to manage the day-to-day operations of the town within the guidelines directed by the selectmen.

Ultimately, a TM's power is limited by the will of the citizens, as exercised through the BOS. The question posed by the Mariner should not be whether the TM manager has too much power but whether the TM and BOS understand and carry out their respective roles as defined by the Act.

Leland Jenkins

Like many, I think the Selectmen placed too much trust into the hands of paid professionals, which caused the current issues that are now being addressed. From missing policies and procedures, to complicated union contracts, to years of red flags in our Annual Audits, it is apparent that past Town Managers had a free hand and generally took the easy way rather than working in the best interests of the taxpayers.

Recent meetings have placed a spotlight on problems caused by unsupervised past Town Managers especially in the area of employee contracts. Both the increase in public safety, by having first responders with additional training and the attempt by our current Manager to devise a more efficient way of serving taxpayers at Town Hall have unleashed firestorms. What we need now is clarity and leadership from the Selectmen to address our challenges,

I believe the Act has helped Cohasset without giving too much power to one person. Our past administration of the Act has crystallized the roles of all parties, and as a candidate for re-election, I am prepared to work with the Board to provide the appropriate direction and oversight to the Town Manager.

Karen Quigley

No. The business of the town has become too complex and demanding to rely on anyone but an experienced professional in the position of town manager. Gone are the days when citizen volunteers, however dedicated and well intentioned, can properly conduct the day-to-day management of our town.

The stakes are too high to entrust the management of our town to an individual who does not have the education, background and professional experience to successfully meet the demands of this position.

There is no logical reason to hire a manager and not give this person the tools and leeway to do the job independent of special interest groups and without fear of reprisal.

Before one thinks that changing the Town Manager Act will improve our governance, one should look to the persons we elect to manage this key individual. The current turmoil at town hall has less to do with the TMA and everything to do with a core group of selectmen that have failed in their most important duty: to represent the interests of the public in both hiring and managing the town manager.

It really won't matter what the TMA is or becomes if we continue to have selectmen who fail to lead and are overly influenced by special interest groups and self-styled power brokers.

On May 11 your vote will determine whether we return to an open, responsive, respectful, and reasonable model of democracy. That's my goal and I ask for one of your two votes for selectman.

Russell Bonetti

The key to making the Town Manager Act work is a Board of Selectmen that does its job.

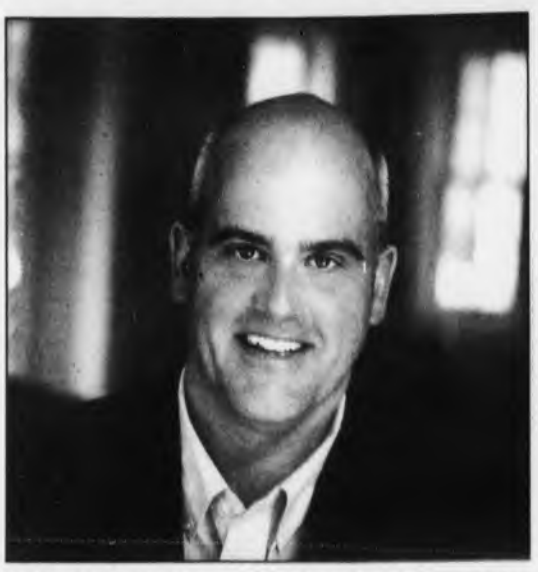
A selectman's job is to listen to the citizens, to actively govern, and yes, to rein in a town manager when necessary.

The town manager is the chief administrative officer (CAO) of Cohasset. The selectmen are the chief executives of the Town, acting at the direction of Town Meeting. Any good management person understands that only problems will emerge when the CAO thinks he or she can act like the CEO.

Over the last few weeks a new majority of the selectmen have thankfully exerted the type of leadership Cohasset needs. All too often in the past, selectmen have taken a hands' off approach. The results have been painfully obvious.

Still, Cohasset has a strong town manager form of government for a reason. We want a professional manager to balance the books, manage town operations, support our schools, and above all to be truly open and objective. As your selectman I will allow the manager to exercise good professional judgment. I will however insist that he always seek permission of selectmen and our other boards before any new initiative is launched.

The Town Manager Act needs some tweaks, some additional checks and balances on potential power gone astray. Like our beloved Cohasset itself, the Act needs selectmen that carry out the will of Town Meeting and our citizens.



I would appreciate one of your two votes for selectman this year to do just that.

Next week's question:

For Selectman candidates: "See you in court!" could be the mantra for Cohasset. Can the selectmen do more to rein in the town's legal costs and do you think a change in Town Counsel would be healthy?

- Responses to the Question of the Week should be no more than 250 words and must be received by noon, Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.) Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com.
- We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like. Candidates both opposed and unopposed are invited to submit a formal announcement of their candidacy with a photograph. There is no word limit on the formal announcements but candidates are encouraged to be as concise as possible.
- The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

Burnett steps out of selectman's race

Bill Burnett has announced that he will not be running for selectman. COURTESY PHOTO

The following is a statement from Bill Burnett:

"Yesterday, April 10th, I removed my name as a candidate for the Board of Selectmen. Since announcing my candidacy three weeks ago, I have been overwhelmed by the strong support for our campaign from our citizens and current town leadership. I stepped forward as a candidate because I care deeply about our schools, our infrastructure, and the health, welfare, and vitality of our great community.

"After careful reflection with my wife and family, it became clear I could not devote the energy to the job of Selectman that the people of Cohasset deserve while also meeting the demands of my role as a businessman, husband, and father. My family and I look forward to contributing to Cohasset in other ways that will positively impact our community."

CANDIDATES CORNER

Editor's note: Candidates provide their own announcements.

Leland Jenkins

Town Manager Act Update — Currently a dedicated group of volunteers has been working almost a year to bring clarifications to the current Town Manager Act and their recommendations will be brought before the Annual Town Meeting on April 22. If passed these changes will help redefine the working relationship that is supposed to exist between the Board of Selectmen and the Town Manager providing the necessary checks and balances. I hope that many will attend to support the work of the Governance Committee.

Absentee ballots for senate primary

Absentee Ballots for the special State Primary on Tuesday April 30 are now available at the Town Clerk's office.

Only those voters who will be absent from Cohasset during polling hours, or who may have a physical disability, or whose religious beliefs prevent them from coming to the polls, may vote Absentee.

To obtain an Absentee Ballot, you must fill out an application with a valid signature for each voter, along with the address as to where the ballot should be mailed. You can obtain an Absentee Ballot application online at www.mass.gov or at the Town Clerk's office.

All Absentee Ballots must be applied for before noon on Monday, April 29. If you have any questions, call the Town Clerk's Office at 781 383-4100.

Volume 38 - Report No. 14 April 1-5, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on three roll call from the week of April 1-5. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

TRANSPORTATION PACKAGE INCLUDING TAX HIKES (H 3382)

House 120-31, gave initial approval to the Democratic leadership-sponsored transportation package that includes $500 million in tax hikes. Provisions include a 3-cent-per-gallon hike in the state's current 21-cent-per-gallon gas tax, which, beginning in 2015, would also be indexed to inflation. Other provisions include a $1 hike in the current $2.51-per-package cigarette tax, an increase in the tax on cigars and smokeless tobacco, imposition of a 6.25 percent sales tax on computer system design services as well as modification of prewritten software, and a change in the way utilities are classified for tax purposes. All Republicans voted "no" while all but two Democrats voted "yes."

Beacon Hill Roll Call uses the words "gave initial approval to" above in describing last week's action. The technical language of the House is: "ordered the bill to a third reading." Generally there are three hurdles that bills have to overcome in both the House and the Senate before they go to the governor's desk: ordering the bill to a third reading, engrossment and enactment.

There was no debate on the actual bill itself. Legislators offered different reasons for voting yes on this roll call.

Some say the bill is a reasonable package that will begin to solve many of the structural and financial problems that plague the state's transportation system. Others say they voted for initial approval only as a "procedural move" to bring the bill onto the House floor for debate and a vote and some of these legislators say that they plan to vote against it when it is up for debate and a subsequent vote in a few days. Others who say they voted for the bill as a procedural move note that they have not yet made up their minds whether to support the bill when it comes up again.

Opponents say the proposed tax hikes will hurt already overburdened taxpayers. They argue that the state can't tax its way out of this economic climate and urged the Commonwealth to live within its means. On the day after this action, GOP legislators proposed their own transportation plan that they say will accomplish some goals without raising taxes.

It is also fair to note that 31 legislators, including 29 Republicans and two Democrats, voted no. Most, if not all of those representatives say that they oppose the substance of the bill and would prefer to kill it at this early stage rather than go along with the "procedural move" argument.

(A "Yes" vote is for initial approval. A "No" vote is against it.)

HOLD PUBLIC HEARING ON TAX HIKES (H 3382)

House 30-123, rejected a GOP-sponsored motion to postpone action on the transportation bill and $500 million tax hike package until a public hearing is held. All Republicans supported postponement while every Democrat except one opposed it.

Supporters said it is undemocratic and irresponsible to debate and vote on this important bill without giving taxpayers a chance to express their opinions at a public hearing. They noted that there have been hearings on Gov. Deval Patrick's markedly different tax hike plan but not on this new one.

Opponents said the House held ten hearings on the governor's plan and noted that this new plan is the result of those hearings. They argued more hearings would be superfluous and never-ending if the House held one every time a new version of a bill is proposed.

(A "Yes" vote is for a public hearing. A "No" vote is against it.)

STUDY AND DELAY TAX HIKES (H 3382)

House 30-123, rejected a Republican-sponsored amendment that would replace the tax hikes with a proposal to study them instead. The amendment would require the Patrick administration to study and report back to the Legislature on the impact the tax hikes would have on the state. All Republicans supported the study while every Democrat except one opposed it.

Supporters of the study acknowledged the amendment is just a way to delay or kill the hikes. They said they are simply borrowing a tactic often used by Democrats, who attach the same delaying amendment to Republican proposals to lower taxes.

Opponents of the study dismissed it as a delaying tactic by opponents of the hikes. They said the Legislature has a responsibility to address the transportation problems in the state and to vote on the tax hikes.

(A "Yes" vote is for studying and delaying the tax hikes. A "No" vote is against the study.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

HEARINGS IN FULL MODE - Dozens of proposals were the subject of public hearings on Beacon Hill last week. Here are some of the more interesting ones:

INCREASE LEGISLATORS' TERMS (S 64) - Increases the terms of legislators from two to four years. Supporters said that the increase would allow legislators to focus on their work and their constituents and not be tied up with campaigning and fundraising every two years. Opponents said that the increase would make legislators less accountable and give voters fewer opportunities to remove unpopular legislators.

Basketball game benefits project

A co-ed basketball fundraiser recently took place to raise money for a new playground at Deer Hill School. The event, sponsored by the Cohasset PSO, featured a silent auction and co-ed game between Osgood and Deer Hill staffers, parents and other volunteers.

The game was emceed by sports radio host Glenn Ordway and TV meteorologist Joe Joyce. The Cohasset High School cheerleaders and Cavanaro Brothers band provided entertainment.

Attendees had the opportunity to make a mark on the proposed new playground— by purchasing a brick with their name etched on it to be placed in a pathway in the playground. The project is estimated to cost $160,000 to renovate the playground, which is used by local youth, Deer Hill students, the Rec. Department's RISE program, and the department's Summer Playground program.

Girls beat Sandwich, fall to Scituate

The Cohasset Mariner

Scituate is always a tough game for the Cohasset girls lacrosse team.

It's one of those games where anything can happen, and it did this time with Scituate notching an 18-10 win on Tuesday.

Before that, Cohasset team won two straight home game with a 13-7 victory over Sandwich.

The game was relatively close in the first half and goalie Kylie Coffman did her best to make sure it did not get even closer.

Coffman was outstanding with eight total saves on the day and stuffed several free position shots in the first half to keep the Skippers on top.

The close defense of Molly and Megan Fitzgerald stifled the Sandwich attack and forced them to make multiple passes before having any chance of getting a decent shot. Mackenzie Axelson was a force in the midfield, gobbling up seven ground balls

Thanks from boys lacrosse and Boosters

The Cohasset High School Boy's lacrosse team and Boosters want to thank those families who donated to the 2013 Lawn Clean Up Fundraiser. Forty five players, coaches, and parents banded together on a beautiful Saturday to clean up 23 yards of branches, sticks, stones and debris left behind by this winter's battering of New England. Success of the program was made possible by the support and generosity of Atlantic Bagel, Cohasset Pizza House, and Graham Waste Services.

The Lacrosse Boosters extend an open invitation to the Cohasset Community to come out to Alumni Field to cheer on the High School lacrosse teams. The next Home Game for the boy's is Saturday, April 20 at 11:00 a.m., and for the Girl's it is Monday, April 22 at 6 p.m..

MIXED MARTIAL ARTS

Fun Size

Local fighter Erin Cooney not the typical MMA type

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Erin Cooney is a study in contrasts, a perfect example of not judging a book by the cover and so on.

Checking in at 5'2" and 110 pounds, with a big smile, especially when she's working with kids, Cooney at first may not look the part of a warrior trained to battle in the rough and tumble world of Mixed Martial Arts.

Think again.

For the past two years, the 2008 Scituate High School graduate has been training at Norwell's South Shore Sportfighting, learning the sport from Rockland's Bill Mahoney, who has been involved in MMA for 20 years.

In that time, the former cheerleader and soccer player has become a force in and out of the cage, partly through her upbeat attitude and general love of what she does.

Her cage name "Fun Size" suits her well, unless of course, you are an opponent.

"I'm 2-0 as an amateur," Cooney said. "I really want to get a little more amateur experience before I turn pro."

Cooney said once she stepped in the cage, there was no turning back.

""I'm obsessed with it," Cooney said of her bouts. "I can't explain the feeling of winning. Being a trainer makes it even better, extra sweet. I see my students in the crowd cheering me on, letting them see that I'm a real fighter. It's amazing."

In her most recent match, Cooney, who wears a custom mouthpiece with her name and a couple of four leaf clovers to show her Irish background, won a bout in a Cage Elite Fighting card in New York on St. Patrick Day.

"I won two minutes into the first round," Cooney said. "I won via TKO by strikes."

Breaking that down into layman terms, Cooney got a knockdown boxing style to stop the fight.

The format of MMA has fighters starting in a standing position and most use a combination of boxing, kickboxing and wrestling styles and moves to force the fight to the ground where they can work at getting opponents in submission holds that hopefully get the other guy or girl to tap out before any real damage happens.

In the cage, fighters wear 6 oz. gloves similar to boxing gloves, but smaller with less padding.

That can lead to fights being stopped quickly if a fighter can connect early to the head.

"We're aware of head injuries, concussions," Cooney said. "If you can, you want to go to the ground quickly. Refs call it quickly before real injuries happen, especially in the amateur game.

Much more is allowed in the professional ranks, like those in the Ultimate Fighting Champion fights.

Cooney said her smile is real, and can be used for intimidation, although it isn't the intention.

"I'm always smiling," she said. "Before a fight a girl will come over, snarling wanting to get that punch when you tap gloves. I'll just smile and say hi. They'll be saying, 'after the fight'. Some of them give me looks. They're not expecting the smile. I'm still smiling even when I'm fighting."

Soon, UFC will be having tryouts, and Cooney is hoping that she might have a chance at some point.

For women, fighters have to have three pro fights under the belt.

Aside from her MMA experience, Cooney has a black belt in Shodokan karate that she earned when she was younger.

"That was nothing compared to this," she said. "Now we train as a whole. It is mixed, kickboxing, jujitsu, grappling."

Breaking it down, she said the sport has a very heavy boxing/kickboxing element, along with wrestling, jujitsu and whatever fighters and trainers find works as the sport continually evolves.

When she was younger, Cooney participated in jujitsu competition in the North American Grappling Association.

"There's a lot of ground fighting," she said. "I go for the pin, submissions, arm locks, leg locks, chokes. There's no striking. You start standing and go for takedowns, like wrestling. I was 25-2 in that sports. I was known as the Wrestler Girl. I only missed two of my takedowns. Grappling is a favorite. I love it."

Mahoney calls MMA style 'kinetic chess'. Cooney adheres to that.

"I'm usually smaller, so I have to think three steps ahead to make things work. I'm smaller than my training partners. I'm used to wrestling big guys, so when I get girls my own size it does make it a little easier."

Cooney decided on South Shore Sportfighting because she wanted to find something different to do.

She clicked instantly with Mahoney and has been there ever since.

Two months into her jujitsu training, she entered a competition for the first time and won two of three matches in the tournament by submissions.

She has also taken a turn in the boxing ring.

"I took on a match on three days notice," Cooney said. "It was a match for charity, the Lymphona Society. My dad (Garrett) has battled Lymphona. I want to help any way I can. The match was at Marina Bay. They called it the Battle of the Bay.

"My dad is my hero. He's my driving force. I've seen him struggle with cancer and still he's so positive that when I get a few bumps or bruises it's nothing. He's also my biggest fan. He's always said you should love what you do. I love this."

When Cooney started training, it was to get a good workout and strengthen up a balky knee that she had been told was going to need surgery.

"I was worried how my knee would do, but with Bill's conditioning I've strengthened the knees," Cooney said. "When I came in, I had trouble walking up a flight of stairs. I work out every day and do something different every day. I do the bench press, dead lift, squat, lift every day. There's cardio, interval training with some sparring."

Not long after she started the workouts, Cooney started working at the gym in sales and helping out around the gym.

Soon she found herself training people and began to get more and more clients coming to work with her.

At the same time, she was going to Curry College, where she earned her teaching degree in Special Education, an area dear to her as her younger brother is autistic.

"My brother is awesome," she said. "He's a big fan. I just love him."

Graduating left some decisions, but decisions Mahoney made a little easier.

"When she graduated, I knew she'd be needing a job," he said. "She's great with kids and teenagers. When I teach kids, sometimes it's tough for me. The kids love her. When little girls come in, they're always asking if Erin is coming. She was too valuable for me to lose."

Cooney feels the same way.

"Bill has been my mentor," she said. "I give him 100 percent credit. He's got an open outlook. There weren't many women in the sport, but one of his trainers was a woman. He understands. We work really well together. We have a blast and our students are awesome."

The special education degree has been very beneficial.

"A lot of kids with learning delays come to the martial arts," Mahoney said. "The sport does hel with focus and discipline. Erin has the ability to find the ground where kids like her as a friend, but also respect her as an instructor."

"When I started we didn't have many little girls," she said. "One time we had a boot camp, then we started getting girls and women to come in. My little girls call themselves Erin's Angels. I love that.

With the girls coming in, and the gym being a second home, Cooney has taken a few steps to make it more friendly for girls, including a spotlessly clean women's room in pink.

As a trainer, Cooney is available to train in not just fighting, but all forms of fitness and exercise.

For more information on training with her, or watching her fight, hopefully next in May, visit www.sssfighting.com.

and using her excellent speed to transition the ball into the offensive zone.

Kathryn Dunn got the scoring started in the first half with a hard drive to the cage and Hope Kissick followed soon after by blasting one home after a great feed from Ally Leahy. Dunn would score her second of the day and give the Skippers an early 3-0 lead. Leahy then scored one of her own to answer a Sandwich goal followed by scores from Maddie Curley, Corey Golden and Kristin Alexander to close out the half with a 7-3 lead.

Cohasset dominated most of the second half with Kissick adding four more tallies and Golden notching her second score after catching a laser pass from Axelson who had blown by three Sandwich defenders. The Skippers would take a 12-4 lead with under ten minutes to go before Sandwich had a brief rally to make the game seem closer than it was.

The Skippers traveled to Scituate on Tuesday and did not fare as well, losing 18-10 in a fast paced game that was even at 6-6 with five minutes to go in the first half before Scituate broke it open with six out of the next seven goals

TEN REASONS WHY YOUR CHILD NEEDS A SUMMER CAMP EXPERIENCE

Part 1 By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

There's no doubt that summer camp is fun. Kids get to sing silly songs, play funny games, swim in lakes, and tell spooky stories around a campfire; this is the image of camp that has been captured and memorialized in films, books, and television programs. But there's much more to camp than just a good time. For the last century and a half, experiential education in summer camp settings has played an integral role in children's overall development – cognitive, physical, and social-emotional. Here are five of ten reasons why your child shouldn't miss out on the unique growth experience that awaits this summer at camp.

1. Development of critical-thinking and leadership skills. Camp provides the perfect environment for your child to learn and practice individual and group decision-making, how to socialize and navigate their interactions with others, and how to resolve conflict and other issues that may arise when living and working together closely.

2. Increased physical activity – from canoeing and hiking to soccer and tag, an on-going workout is a natural part of the day.

3. Direct experiences in nature and living much more closely to the Earth – being outside is proven to reduce stress levels, improve mood, and simultaneously stimulate all of a child's senses.

4. Lasting intergenerational and diverse relationships – from peers to counselors, summer camp gives your child an opportunity to meet new people from a variety of age groups, providing them with positive role models and new friends.

5. Safety away from home – at camp your child is supervised by trained professionals who ensure their safety while inspiring them to try new things.

Most popular guy in school

The entire Deer Hill School student body came outside to greet recently retired custodian Tom Jones on Monday whom they nominated recently for the Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year. While the Citizen of the Year selection committee does not make its decision based on the number of nominations received for an individual, the Mariner wanted to give Mr. Jones special recognition because in an unprecedented show of support, Mr. Jones, who worked for the schools for 39 years, received more than 80 nominations from fourth and fifth graders. He is pictured here with all his supporters! Thank you, Mr. Jones, for your many years of service to our schools. STAFF PHOTO/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

Cohasset High School debate students got a chance to showcase their oratory skills, debating students from surrounding schools, during a recent Southeastern Massachusetts Debate League regional competition, held at Hingham High.

Kyle Gundersen listens intently as his partner presents his case for the negative.

Virtuoso fortepianist Sylvia Berry at First Parish

Sylvia Berry is a well-known specialist in historical keyboard instruments, as well as being the organist at First Parish Cohasset. For this performance, she will be bringing two fortepianos with her to Cohasset to perform works by Mozart, Haydn, and Clementi in a program titled "Music from Vienna and London."

The performance featuring these two unique instruments will be on Sunday, April 21 in the Parish House of First Parish Cohasset at 23 North Main Street, Cohasset, MA 02025. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

This concert will feature two historical pianos, one an actual antique from London built by John Broadwood and Son 1806, and the other a replica of a piano built in Vienna in 1795. Music of Mozart, Haydn, and Clementi will be played by Sylvia Berry, a noted specialist in historical keyboard instruments and performance practice. Hailed "gutsy and poetic" in Early Music America, she will be joined by her husband Dale Munschy for the Clementi duet. Munschy is a well known instrument restorer based in Somerville, MA who brought the Broadwood back to life in 2011.

Berry, a native of Philadelphia, has performed as a soloist and chamber musician in the US, Canada, The Netherlands, and Italy. A specialist in late 18th- and early 19th-century Viennese music, she has quickly become a favorite in Boston and beyond not only for her exciting performances, but for her engaging commentary about the music and the instruments she plays. As well as being a professional recitalist, she also serves as the organist at First Parish Cohasset.

Berry studied at the New England Conservatory, the Oberlin Conservatory (where she received a Masters in historical keyboard instruments), and the Royal Conservatory in The Hague, The Netherlands. She has studied with David Breitman, Lisa Goode Crawford, Bart van Oort, Stanley Hoogland, and Malcolm Bilson. For more visit: www.sylviaberry.org

MASSBAY COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Scholarships help fund student dreams

By John O'Donnell
President, MassBay Community College

When she heard that her son Patrick would be going to college for free, Enive Dieudonne could not believe it. "Are you sure they're not taking money from your account?" she asked him. But we weren't.

Thanks to the dedicated members of the MassBay Foundation, Patrick Dieudonne is one of dozens of MassBay students who benefit from scholarship monies available every semester. Led by James McKenzie, whose father, John F. McKenzie was MassBay's president when it first opened its doors in 1961, the MassBay Foundation is comprised of 13 business leaders and members of the MetroWest community who have volunteered their time and talent to provide the funds students like Patrick Dieudonne need to pursue their dreams.

Patrick, his two brothers and their mother came to the U.S. from Haiti in 2010, receiving political asylum here after their father, who was a politician, was assassinated. Settling in Norwood, Patrick spent his senior year at Norwood High School. By earning a 3.65 Grade Point Average (GPA) at Norwood High, Patrick finished in the top 10 of his graduating class. In doing so, he became eligible for the President's Top Ten Scholarship, which is awarded to two students every year. The scholarship provides two years of free tuition and fees to MassBay students who graduate with a 3.0 GPA or higher and/or finish in the top 10 of one of the public high schools in the 27 cities and towns MassBay serves.

In its September 2012 Vision Project report, Time to Lead, the Massachusetts Department of Higher Education notes that by 2018, 70 percent of jobs in Massachusetts will require at least some college – the most of any state in the nation. Like his father before him, Jim McKenzie understands the fundamental mission of community colleges as an affordable gateway for MassBay students of all ages to get these jobs, and the sustainable careers they will provide for thousands of Massachusetts citizens.

Scholarship opportunities at MassBay are almost as diverse as our student body. While we present $1,000 scholarships each year to up to 10 students who have economic hardships, we also recognize and reward students of all kinds through these scholarship funds.

In addition to the Top Ten scholarship, MassBay awards thousands of dollars each year through the Sapienza Scholarship in support of a musician or artist; the Maxine Elmont Scholarship given to students who are coming back to college and who are at least 25 years old; the Leonce Cadet Joseph Award presented to "a deserving international/immigrant dream chaser"; and the John F. McKenzie Scholarship, awarded to one graduating senior from each of the 27 public high schools in our service area who has earned a 2.5 GPA or higher and the recommendation of a guidance counselor.

Scholarship awards are also given to current MassBay students who score a 4.0 GPA, are scholar-athletes, carry a 3.0 GPA and higher and enroll in summer classes (need based), or show the most academic improvement.

At MassBay we are proud to offer needed funds to people like Patrick Dieudonne, who are on our Wellesley Hills, Framingham and Ashland campuses pursuing their dreams. Without them, we know that the jobs of the future may be out of reach.

MassBay awards associate degrees and certificates in over 70 academic programs in a wide range of career-driven subjects ranging from accounting and automotive technology to forensic DNA science and early childhood education. The College's facilities in Wellesley Hills, Framingham and Ashland house day, evening and weekend classes that meet the needs of degree-seeking students and career minded lifelong learners. Online options provide convenience and allow faculty to facilitate the learning process. Since its founding in 1961, MassBay has been accredited by several governing bodies and strives to meet the needs of the diverse local communities it serves. SCHOOL OF THE MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS

Creative arts education in the heart of Boston

Take your creative passions to the next level with a degree from the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston (SMFA). Founded in 1876 and accredited by the National Association of Schools of Art and Design, SMFA has a mission and reputation for providing an interdisciplinary, self-directed education supported by a faculty of practicing artists, mentors and advisors. Live, study and work in the heart of America's legendary college town, home to over 60 colleges and more than 250,000 college students SMFA's range of degree and certificate programs offers students the flexibility to create their own path of study, experiment and evolve as an artist. There are no majors here, instead students work across 13 disciplines of study, including drawing, printmaking, performance, video and more. Our Studio Diploma offers an all-studio arts education, without an academic component while our degree programs in partnership with Tufts University (Bachelor of Fine Arts, Dual Degree, Master of Fine Arts or Master of Arts in Teaching, Art Education), allow students to pursue academic studies at the world-class Tufts. Many choose to declare an academic minor, which encourages investigations beyond the art world that support both their practice and personal growth. The Post-Baccalaureate program offers an intensive year of studio art study and practice, closely advised and supported by dedicated faculty.

SMFA is one of only three art schools in the country affiliated with a major museum — the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston (MFA) — conceived at the same time as the Museum itself, as the crucial second part of a mission to educate through the arts.

The Museum is an invaluable part of our campus and community; many alumni are in the Museum's collection and exhibitions of recent graduates include Kristin Baker, Jedediah Caesar and Ridley Howard. Students have free access to the Museum's encyclopedic collection of nearly 450,000 works of art, which provides infinite sources of inspiration and study. In addition to invitations to concerts, films and lectures our students also have access to the Museum's curatorial and conservation staff, with opportunities for internships or to assist with installations. Internationally acclaimed artists visiting the Museum frequently make exclusive trips to the School's campus to meet, lecture and work with SMFA students.

SMFA has a long tradition of training successful artists — Edmund Tarbell, Ellsworth Kelly, Lois Mailou Jones and Nan Goldin. More than working artists, the SMFA education allows alumni to go on to a range of successful, creative careers: teaching at universities and colleges, working in fashion and interior design, as creative directors and designers, entrepreneurs, journalists, gallery owners and much more.

Whatever the program, SMFA's educational approach will challenge and push limits, but our graduates emerge as self-confident individuals with unique skills and interests, supported by the fearless curiosity that fosters groundbreaking ideas, conversations and art.

'Gifted Hand's at St. Anthony's

"Gifted Hands" is an outreach ministry at St. Anthony Parish in Cohasset. A group of parishioners and friends meet on Monday mornings from 10 a.m. to 12 noon to knit prayer shawls and hats for patients serviced by South Shore Hospital. Recently, the Rev. Peggy O'Neil Siles from the Pastoral Care Office at the hospital spoke to the "Gifted Hands" group and blessed their hands.

Over the past few years, parishioners have knit hundreds of shawls for patients ministered to by the Pastoral Care office at South Shore Hospital. New members are welcome to join "Gifted Hands," which meets in the Parish Hall. For additional information, please call St. Anthony Parish (781) 383-0219.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Did you know child car seats have expiration dates? They have stickers attached that show the date of manufacture as well as the date of expiration. This is generally six years. The plastics and other material can deteriorate, weaken and lose their safety rating for effectiveness. For this reason you should not pass a used car seat on to family or friends and should discard it when the 6-year time has been reached. COURTESY PHOTO

Reinvent dinner with rice

While most people view rice as a simple side dish, if you take a more inventive approach, you'll find it is a great way to enhance almost any recipe. Try adding it to soups, side dishes, main dishes, appetizers and even desserts. It's even a great way to start the day off right.

Wrap it up: Chop your favorite veggies and meat, and cook in a pan. Add cooked rice and then wrap all ingredients in a tortilla for a quick and filling dinner. Have leftovers? Chilled wraps are great for brown-bag lunches.

Chop it up: Try mixing cooked rice, fresh tomatoes, onions and your choice of peppers in a blender or food processor. Enjoy the fresh flavors with crackers or chips, or add eggs to make a breakfast omelet in the morning.

Jazz it up: Try adding some chili seasoning for heat, or sweeten it with some chopped dried fruit and a touch of honey. Try cooking rice in broth, fruit juice or stock for additional flavor.

Tots hit the spot

Sweet potato tater tots the newest twist

By Lisa Messinger
Creators Syndicate

You can't get much more comforting when it comes to food than tater tots. Whether homemade, restaurant-ordered or packaged, the browned oil-drenched nuggets are decadent and diet-busting.

Fast-food chain Sonic is one in a line of preparers who have decided seasoned sweet potatoes should be added to the mix. They have created a stir and an uptick in orders with the ones they've been promoting as accompaniments to spicy popcorn chicken.

Specialty supermarket chain Trader Joe's notes sales spiked fast when its brand of frozen sweet tots came on board.

The little darlings are fairly simple to prepare at home, too. When that's the case you can add your own flavors, such as bacon, garlic, oregano and curry powder, featured in the recipes below. Best of all is the mild sweet kick from the flavor of the potato and the mild nutritional benefits from the sweet potatoes' additional vitamins. Or you have the option of baking them — they still remain more flavorful than their bland cousins.

Sweet Potato and Bacon Tots with Creamy Mustard Dipping Sauce

For the tots:

- Salt, to taste
- 2 large sweet potatoes, unpeeled
- 2 strips bacon
- 3 cups vegetable oil
- 3 heaping T all-purpose flour

For the sauce:

- 2 T mayonnaise
- 1 T honey
- 1 T Dijon mustard
- Salt, to taste
- Freshly ground black pepper, to taste

Yields 4 servings.

To prepare tots: Boil a pot of salted water. Add the potatoes and partially cook, about 15 minutes. Drain the potatoes and set aside.

Meanwhile, add the bacon to a small skillet over medium heat and cook until crisp, about 10 minutes. Transfer the bacon to a paper-towel-lined plate. Finely chop the bacon when cooled.

Carefully heat the oil to 300 F in a straight-sided skillet.

When the potatoes are cool enough to handle, shred the potatoes using either a box grater or shredding attachment on a food processor.

Place 4 sheets of paper towels on a countertop. Dump the potatoes on top of the paper towels and fold the towels over the potatoes. Squeeze as much moisture out of the potatoes as possible.

Combine the potatoes with the bacon, flour and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Mix well to combine.

Form the potato mixture into small logs using a 1 T measuring spoon. Working in batches, carefully fry the tots in the skillet until golden brown, 2 1/2 to 3 minutes. Adjust the heat as needed to keep the oil at 300 F. Carefully transfer the tots to a paper-towel-lined plate to strain excess fat. Sprinkle the tots with salt while still warm.

To prepare dipping sauce: Combine the mayo, honey and mustard in a small bowl. Sprinkle the sauce with salt and pepper.

Serve the sweet potato and bacon tots hot with the creamy mustard dipping sauce.

Why are sweet potatoes so good for you?

SXC.HU.COM

If you haven't fallen in love with sweet potatoes yet, here are some reasons why you might want to do so. This fibrous tuber is jam-packed with nutrition:

■ The sweet potato is loaded with beta carotene and overflowing with vitamin A, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This is a powerful antioxidant known to reduce the effects of free radical damage. According to WebMD, vitamin A is necessary for the maintenance and repair of skin. If your diet is low in vitamin A, your skin may appear dry, flaky and damage-prone. The average sweet potato contains almost two times the daily recommended allowance of A.

■ Sweet potatoes are a good source of fiber — 4 grams in a medium-sized one. Fiber is not only filling, it's been linked to lowering blood cholesterol levels and blood sugar levels, according to the Mayo Clinic.

■ They have a low glycemic index rating. According to WebMD, this rating system is important for anyone controlling his or her blood sugar. Foods that are high on the glycemic index contain a comparatively larger amount of sugar or simple carbohydrates than things that are low on the glycemic index. Sweet potatoes have the lowest glycemic index rating for root vegetables containing slow-to-break-down good carbohydrates. The rise in blood sugar from this veggie is slow and steady.

■ Protein in a vegetable? Yes, it's true! According to the USDA, one medium sweet potato boasts about 2.15 grams of protein, 4 grams in a cup, according to Self Magazine's Nutrition Data. Protein helps keep you full longer and is essential for building muscle tissue.

Baked Garlic Sweet Potato Tots

- 2 small sweet potatoes, unpeeled
- 1 egg
- 1 t salt
- Dried oregano, to taste
- Curry powder, to taste
- 1/2 cup panko bread crumbs
- Garlic powder, to taste

Yields 8 servings.

Grate sweet potato and par boil for 2 minutes in a pot of salted boiling water. After par boiling, place potatoes in a bowl of ice water to stop them cooking further. Drain thoroughly, carefully squeezing out moisture.

Shred potatoes. In a large bowl, mix together potatoes, egg, salt, oregano and curry powder. In a separate bowl, mix panko breadcrumbs and garlic powder. Roll potato into approximately 2-inch pieces and coat with panko crumbs.

Place on an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 425 F for 20 minutes, carefully turning with a utensil halfway through.

Whole grains with lots of benefits, no gluten

By Charlyn Fargo
Creators Syndicate

If you have to avoid gluten, it doesn't mean you have to skimp on whole grains. The key is to focus on those that are gluten-free — grains such as amaranth, buckwheat, corn, millet, oats, quinoa, brown rice, sorghum, teff and white rice.

Whole grains are those that are intact and possess their outer layer of bran, their starchy endosperm layer and their inner germ layer. Whole grains have a host of benefits — lowering risk of stroke, type 2 diabetes, heart disease, asthma, colorectal cancer, inflammatory diseases and gum diseases. They also increase satiety and promote a healthier weight, not to mention, they are chock full of nutrients, from B vitamins to riboflavin, thiamin and folate as well as calcium, iron and magnesium.

Here are some tips to boost gluten-free whole grains, from Registered Dietitian Shelley Case, author of "Gluten-Free Diet: A Comprehensive Resource Guide."

1. Add cooked buckwheat, oat groats, steel-cut oats, quinoa, sorghum or wild rice to rice pilaf mix.

2. Enrich soups with cooked brown rice, buckwheat, oat groats, quinoa, sorghum or wild rice.

3. Boost nutritional content of brownies, cakes and cookies with 1/4 cup cooked amaranth or teff.

4. Sprinkle cooked gluten-free whole grains over mixed green salads.

5. Toss cooked gluten-free whole grains with gluten-free pasta.

Q-and-A

Q: I love using a salad bar at lunch. How can I avoid creating a mega-calorie salad?

A: To control calories, fill most of your plate or take-out container with a variety of dark leafy greens (like spinach, romaine or other mixed salad greens) and plain colorful chopped vegetables (including carrots, peppers, cucumbers, mushrooms and tomatoes). For a sweet touch, include about a half-cup (a rounded handful) of unsweetened fresh fruit, such as pineapple or berries.

To make a main dish salad, include one of the following (or smaller portions of several): a half-cup of kidney or garbanzo beans; a half-cup turkey, seafood chunks, chopped hardboiled egg or tuna (unless it's mixed with lots of mayonnaise); or one-third cup (a level handful) of nuts or sunflower or pumpkin seeds. If you want cheese, add about one to two tablespoons for flavor in combination with one of these leaner sources of protein. Try Parmesan or feta for plenty of flavor in a small amount.

Finally, be careful with salad dressing portions. A full typical four-tablespoon-size ladle of regular dressing probably contains 140 to 320 calories (and 500 to 640 milligrams of sodium). Even reduced-fat dressings add up. Make sure you only fill the ladle part way before dressing your salad. You can extend salad dressing with lemon juice or splashes of vinegar. For even lower calories and sodium, dress your salad with a couple teaspoons of plain olive oil.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 22, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You easily handle your tasks this week, thanks to those high energy levels that never seem to run down. But pace yourself, Lamb, for the demanding week ahead.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) With the arts dominant this week, you might want to pick up any of those creative projects you've neglected. A workplace situation benefits from some fresh insight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Music helps replenish your energy levels. Play your CDs if you must. But a live concert could prove more rewarding, especially if you go with that very special someone.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Close friends reach out to help perk up your lagging social life. That workplace situation also eases, leaving you time to do more fun things by week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A revelation clears up that perplexing job-related problem. Some changes will have to be made, which, no doubt, will meet with the Big Cat's roaring approval. Good luck.

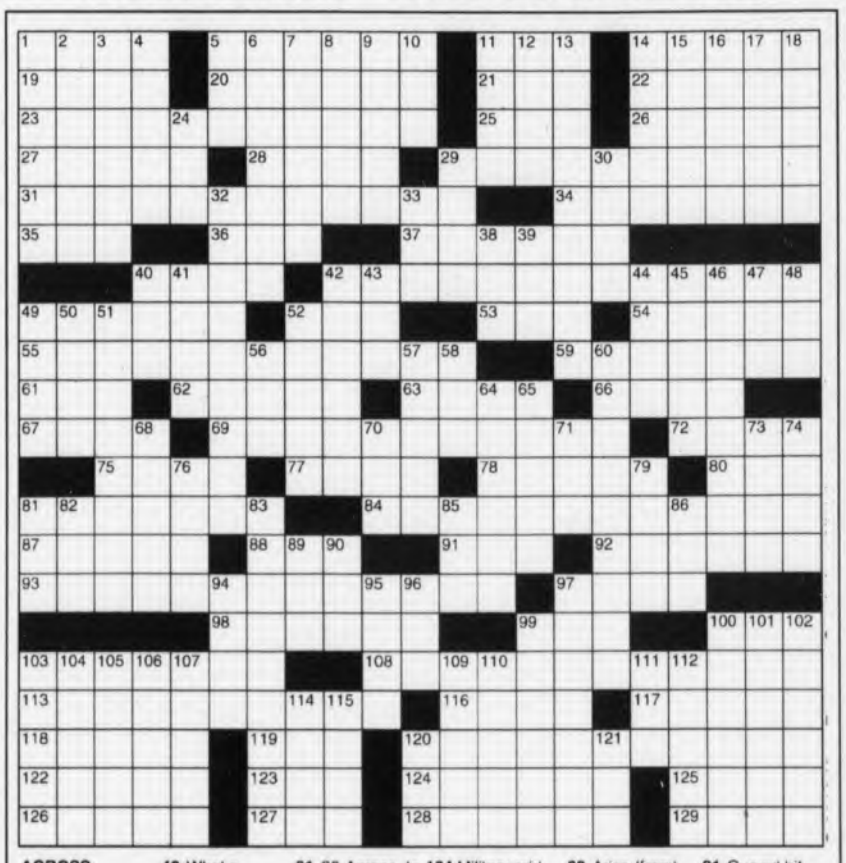
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Reaching out to someone in need is the noble thing to do. But try to restrain the temptation to add a lecture — no matter how well-intended — to your good deed.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) There could be another tough challenge to face before the month is over. But all that hard work is winning you lots of important recognition from your peers.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Keeping to your work schedule could prove difficult with all those personal distractions. Best advice: Stay with it. There'll be time later for socializing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Jumping hurdles this week might be vexing for most, but not for the sage Sagittarian, who recognizes that meeting a challenge can open up opportunities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) More obstacles might be thrown in your path as you try to finalize a new agreement. But the sure-footed Goat ignores the stumbling blocks and stays the course.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) We know the Water Bearer takes pleasure in giving to others. But why not let someone else enjoy the experience too by accepting that offer of help?

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might find you need to ease up on your hectic schedule this week. Don't fret about it. It could be helpful to take a break and replenish your energy supply.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of finding practical solutions to complex problems, and you do it with grace.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

BOSTON MARATHON

After bombing, 'You saw the best of Boston'

Cohasset runners, spectators reflect on tragedy

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Diane Kennedy posted a victory photo on Facebook at 1:16 pm on Monday, April 15, when her husband, Patrick, crossed the Boston Marathon finish line.

"Great finish," Kennedy posted. "Such a great day!"

Later on, Kennedy, a Cohasset selectmen, reflected on how that great day was "marred by something completely insane."

"Pandemonium" is how some described the scene following the two bombs going off on Boylston Street at approximately 2:45 p.m. Monday.

Gabriel Gomez crossed the finish line only moments before the bombs went off. He said that what he heard was not unlike bombs he heard from his days as a Navy SEAL.

"As a military veteran, I've seen some pretty bad stuff," said the Cohasset businessman and U.S. Senate candidate. "It pales in comparison to what I saw yesterday, in a civilian area... This is pure evil."

Shelly Mahoney completed the marathon 15 minutes before the explosions went off.

"I didn't hear it— I was out of the area. I didn't see the chaos," she said.

BOSTON MARATHON

Cohasset couple separated, reunited after blasts

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Following the two explosions that detonated around 2:45 p.m. at the Boston Marathon finish line Monday, many runners and spectators searched through the chaos to find their families and friends.

Cohasset police officer Patrick Reardon was waiting for his wife Heather near the finish line.

"We were up the street by the Hynes Convention Center a couple blocks away. We heard the explosions and all of a sudden saw hundreds and hundreds of emergency personnel running and driving toward the scene," he said.

Heather, 27, was far enough away that she did not hear the blasts. According to her father, Hingham Police Chief Michael Peraino, Heather was suffering from a cold and was running slower than her usual time; this was Heather's second Boston Marathon in a row.

"I didn't hear the bombs," she said. "I was at mile 25 and they stopped me. Basically police officers just barricaded off Commonwealth Ave. and made us go onto the sidewalk. They told us the race was over; a bomb had gone off."

When Peraino heard the first blast he thought a transformer had blown up, but when he heard the second blast, he knew it was a bomb, he said.

NEWS UPDATE

Town seeks chief

Selectmen vote to continue search

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The search for Cohasset's next Police Chief continues.

In a unanimous vote, the Board of Selectmen agreed to advertise the Police Chief position for 30 days and select a pool of candidates to be interviewed. The vote included going to bid to hire a consultant to conduct an assessment of the candidates. In a separate vote, the selectmen also decided to advertise the job in a local newspaper.

The chief position will be advertised again and resumes will be collected. After 30 days, a selection committee will review the applications and select top candidates; those candidates will participate in an assessment center, to be overseen by a consultant. After the assessment, the town manager will recommend a candidate to the selectmen; the selectmen will have 15 days to accept or reject the appointment.

Cohasset has been without a police chief since May 2012, when former chief Mark DeLuca was placed on paid leave following several allegations of misconduct by the town police union. DeLuca's employment contract was not renewed when it expired in January 2013. Deputy Chief William Quigley has been running the department as acting chief since then.

The selectmen's vote essentially continues the search that was started on March 26 by Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. Last week, they voted to start from scratch due to some problems with the job posting, including a phrase they wanted removed that indicated Cohasset already had a "strong internal candidate" for the chief job.

The post has since been amended and will be posted again in the MMA Bulletin, CJIS law enforcement database system, with the Mass. Chiefs of Police Association, and in the Patriot Ledger.

The vote came after the selectmen heard a presentation from public safety consultant Wayne Sampson, who is also the executive director of the Mass. Chiefs. He gave the board many suggestions and points to ponder on the merits of launching a statewide or nationwide search, or promoting within. He also asked the board to consider what it is they want in a chief, if they feel the need to go outside. What, if they feel the department is somehow lacking, are they looking for, exactly?

"Let me ask you, what is the town's goal in seeking an outside candidate? What is it you want to accomplish in the police department and community?" Sampson asked the board. "Maybe you're looking for a candidate with specific qualities... that you have to assure cannot be found in your department now."

Sampson continued, "If you're determining you have to or want to go outside, and I'm hearing you have a qualified internal candidate, what don't you like about the internal candidate? Is there an internal strife or conflict you need to fix? Normally in a community, especially of this size, if you have a good working police department that's cohesive and doing its job, and the community likes it, why would you go outside?"

The Chiefs Association prefers "to see internal promotion," said Sampson. "It's healthy."

Selectman Fred Koed, however, said that his constituents have been asking for an open search. "They don't want anything less than that," said Koed. "I work for them."

Koed also liked Sampson's suggestion to hold an assessment center to review the final candidates, presenting them with a series of real-life scenarios to test them on. Koed wanted to hire a consultant to not only conduct the center, but to launch the search and write a new job posting. It could cost up to $15,000 to hire a consultant.

Sampson said the assessment center could be done for free by bringing in outside police chiefs, many of whom agree to participate in the interview process for free. Milanoski reminded Koed of that.

Koed responded, "No offense, but I'd rather have a consultant manage that assessment instead of you; nothing personal."

The town manager has the authority to appoint department heads, including chiefs, according to Cohasset's town manager act. After the town manager makes a recommendation, the selectmen have 15 days to accept or reject the appointment.

The selectmen continued a discussion from last week on whether or not they should open up the search to the outside, and if that should include a nationwide scope. Milanoski urged the board to limit the search to Massachusetts, since Mass. has different requirements than other states.

Sampson said there were at least a handful of states whose police training would not carry over to Mass.; applicants from those states would automatically disqualify for the chief position.

Milanoski said in a phone call Wednesday that he thought Sampson made some good points, particularly when it comes to looking at internal candidates.

"If you have a department that's run well and has good leadership, that's what you should put your focus on," he said.

What's next? Milanoski will proceed with the board of selectmen's directive. "We've started on the advertising process and have to continue the process. We'll put that in one of the papers; we'll utilize the CJIS system so every police officer in Massachusetts gets a copy" of the job posting. "Once we get the resumes, we'll have a screening process and assessment committee that will then make a recommendation to the board of selectmen."

The process will take over a month to complete. By then, the town election will have passed and a new board of selectmen will be in place.

"The new board of selectmen, whoever's elected, will be in a position to approve the appointment of the new chief," said Milanoski.

POLICE BEAT

Drunken woman allegedly causes disturbance in lobby

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 30-year-old Cohasset woman was taken into protective custody early Sunday morning until she was released into the custody of family members. Police said she had arrived at the police lobby in an intoxicated state at around 12:44 a.m. and starting shouting a series of anti-gay and racial slurs at the officers.

She demanded to see the acting chief who was not on duty. Part of the incident was recorded on video for investigatory purposes, police said.

She was not charged with drunken driving because police did not see her driving.

Her family was contacted and attempted to drag her to their car; initially she broke away and ran back towards the doorway of the station screaming more slurs.

Once loaded into the car she yelled the "n" word out the window as she was driven away, police said.

Police called a towing company to tow her Nissan that was in the parking lot because they were concerned she may return to pick up the car. During the inventory of the car, which is part of departmental procedure, about a dozen bar napkins were found containing various derogatory and anti-gay, homophobic slurs aimed at the police command staff. The napkins were photographed as part of the police report.

Police have contacted the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office Civil Rights Division to independently review this incident as a potential hate crime.

Police said the woman, who is a relative of a former police employee, had been celebrating her birthday when she became upset about what she believes was unfair treatment of her relative.

Chain reaction

A Cohasset officer was conducting a traffic stop for a red light violation near Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Ridge Top Road at 4:44 p.m. on Monday (April 8), when a 17-year-old Hingham girl operating a 2002 Mercedes sedan, was distracted by the incident and drove into the rear of another vehicle that was in line at the lights, police said. She plowed into a 2011 Jeep SUV, operated by at 36-year-old Marshfield man, causing the Jeep to hit a 2009 Lexus, operated by a 36-year-old Hingham woman, that was in front of the Jeep. The impact caused the Mercedes to catch fire.

There were no injuries and no entrapment. Both the Mercedes and Jeep were towed. The 17-year-old was cited for following too closely. Police shut down Route 3A between Pond Street and Stop & Shop due to fire apparatus in the street.

Loading zone

Police said the loading zone by Mr. Dooley's on Depot Court and the one near the Community Center have been striped to help motorists be more aware of the parking restrictions for the loading zones that are needed for commercial delivery vehicles. A 1995 Chevrolet pickup was ticketed last week that was blocking the loading zone near Mr. Dooley's before the asphalt was striped, police said.

Metal detector

Police responded to a complaint about a suspicious 2005 Saturn that had been driving around the Beechwood Ball Park area last Wednesday (April 10). Police said it turned out that pickup's driver is a Taunton man who had a metal detector and was checking area beaches, playgrounds and parks for buried treasure.

Liquor sting

The Alcohol Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) conducted an underage liquor sting at Cohasset licensed establishments last week and found that the Great Neck Grill and Red Lion Inn both served a beer to a 17-year-old girl. The two establishments will have to answer to the license violations at the state level, police said. The ABCC could levy punishment ranging from a warning to suspension of the liquor license.

A Taste for Wine and Spirits at 380 CJC Highway, which did not sell to the girl, notified police when the 17-year-old tried to buy alcohol there without an ID, describing the suspect and providing a direction of travel of the vehicle she was traveling in.

Cohasset police in the past have conducted stings when there is grant money available to do so. In those cases, any establishments found in violation would answer to the local licensing authority, which is the Board of Selectmen, police said.

Drive off

Police responded to a complaint from the Mobil Mart about a customer who drove off without paying for $25 in gasoline last Friday (April 12). The clerk at the convenience store provided police with the plate number of the vehicle. Police were able to contact the customer, a 22-year-old Hull man, who had used his speed pass that did not register with the pump. He said he would return to the station and pay up. The man is a regular customer, police said.

Train tracks

Police investigated a single-car accident at the grade crossing for the train on Beechwood Street at 1:40 a.m. on Saturday (April 13). Police found a 2004 Ford Taurus, owned by a 25-year-old Scituate man, that had been traveling east on Beechwood Street when it apparently hit the curb by the railroad crossing, damaging the car. Police searched the area and determined the operator left the scene. Later they located the driver at his house in Scituate.

The Scituate man will be summonsed to court for leaving the scene of an accident and for failure to drive in marked lanes. The investigation into the incident is ongoing.

Police notified the MBTA about the accident in case there were any work trains coming through that night because the car was on the tracks.

Loud thud

A Norfolk Lane couple notified police at 4:19 a.m. on Saturday (April 13) after hearing a loud thud in the attic. Investigation revealed the noise was due to a flapper in the HVAC unit, police said.

Ticketed

Police ticketed several cars parked on Bancroft Way on Saturday morning (April 13) near Milliken Field. The area is clearly posted no parking, police said.

Given ride

Police provided a man, who had been reported as being suspicious, with a ride to the bus depot in Rockland after finding him walking along Jerusalem Road near St. Joseph's Retreat Center at around 2:20 p.m. on Saturday (April 13). The concerned caller described the man as having long gray hair, wearing a mustard colored jacket, carrying a blue bag and being "possibly homeless."

BRIEFLY

New town website on the way

Cohasset's Chief Technology Officer, Rob Bonnell, was asked during Tuesday's selectmen meeting when Cohasset could expect a new town website. People have complained that the website is outdated, officials have said.

Updating the website was also part of a list of recommendations in the Dept. of Revenue's recent report on Cohasset.

Bonnell said that while the "backend" of the new town website is done, the project is "currently on the back burner because of other projects." However, Bonnell is in the middle of working with the school department on developing a new technology course at the high school that would train students to do IT work, he said. Helping to build the website could be part of the course.

"I'd like to get students involved in the construction of the new website," said Bonnell. "It's a great learning opportunity."

Officials try to quash anonymous 'blogging'

Selectmen seek to identify online commenters

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Online blogging and comments were once again a contentious topic at the Tuesday Board of Selectmen's meeting. Town officials have been trying to crack down on anonymous commenters writing negative posts about town employees and officials.

An issue raised during the public comment portion of the selectmen's meeting led to a discussion on local newspapers' online commenting policy, and whether anything could be done to track down the anonymous commenters. The selectmen ended up voting to give the commenters 72 hours to identify themselves publicly and apologize before launching their own investigation. The board plans to start their investigation by checking computers in Town Hall.

David and Ronnie McMorris, Doane Street, both read prepared statements at the selectmen's meeting to address a negative post that a commenter posted on a Patriot Ledger news story, that also ran on the Wicked Local Cohasset website. Ronnie said that she believed the negative comment was vilifying her for events that occurred when she was a selectmen 10 years ago, and her role in the public hearings on two police officers in 2003. The commenter alluded to that and also to a personal family matter involving the McMorrises and the police. The post was troubling enough that the couple decided to address it publicly.

David said that he wanted to support his wife by addressing the "anonymous bloggers defaming my family." While calling his family one that "believes in public service," he noted that those who serve have a price to pay. However, he continued, it does not excuse the online commenters – whom he referred to as "anonymous cowards" – from spreading rumors and lies.

David asked for elected officials to launch an investigation and shine a "bright light on these issues."

Ronnie was visibly emotional as she spoke, adding that she and her family had been at the Boston Marathon Monday, where her daughter had finished the race. She said, "It is not our choice to be here tonight... but we have no choice." She explained how she served the community for nine years as a selectman, and yet nearly 10 years after leaving office, "I am paying a price for doing just that."

Ronnie said that the commenter alleged that her child was not arrested for drinking 10 years ago, implying that favoritism had occurred on the part of the police department. Ronnie said that if her child had done something wrong, he or she "would have paid the price." She added that she knew that participating in the police hearings 10 years ago would "potentially expose my family to risk."

That said, Ronnie said that the vicious online attack "isn't about me. This is about everyone who chooses public service. The selectmen hold the highest elected service in this town... Any decision you make is fodder for the bullies."

Like her husband, Ronnie also called for the board to take action. "Ferret them out, hold them accountable, and send the message that we will not tolerate the intimidation in this town."

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said he agreed with everything the McMorrises said and that the board should confer with Town Counsel on pursuing the matter further. "We all have had attacks, too."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that she thought the board could seek a court order to find out who the commenters are. "It's a horrible thing," she said of the negative posts.

Selectman Diane Kennedy was also emotional when she addressed the McMorrises. "Ronnie, my heart breaks. I don't even know what's on the blogs because I don't read them, but I'm getting similar comments myself," she said, adding that people come up to her in public, at the grocery store or French Memories, and tell her what's in the online comments.

Kennedy also called for putting an end to the online insults. "This has got to stop. We are all trying to do the best job we can... I implore the media to find a way to identify people... It's nuts. I'm actually afraid of having conversations," she added, because of "the vitriol in this town."

Kennedy added that having also been in Boston during the bombings Monday, and also dealing with the negativity in town, she did not want to attend the selectmen's meeting that night.

"There are bigger issues in the world," she said. "All I want to do is contribute and do the best I can for the town. I shouldn't be afraid to come to a selectmen's meeting on a Tuesday night."

Next steps

While the board all acknowledged that something had to be done to cease the negative commenting, they seemed fuzzy as to what, if anything, could be done. They discussed news websites, such as the Wall Street Journal, that requires folks to have a log-in name to post comments. Some news sites require a credit card number and charge a $1 fee for posters, who can then post an unlimited number of times, but are required to use the name on their credit cards.

The Ledger and Mariner papers are part of GateHouse Media and both sites require a log-in in order to comment on stories; however, users can create any screen name they want once they register an account. They can also create multiple usernames from different computers, or IEP addresses.

GateHouse websites have rules for commenting, in that commenters are asked to keep it civil and not post defamatory statements or lies. Posters who abuse this policy can be flagged and their comments removed. Those who continually post vicious remarks can be blocked from accessing the site; however, nothing can stop them from creating another username using a different IP address.

The selectmen decided they would like to track down the online commenters, starting with an investigation of Town Hall computers. Selectman Fred Koed motioned that the board give the commenters 72 hours to reveal themselves publicly and apologize before launching an investigation.

Carlson noted that such an investigation would be on "tricky ground" because of "constitutional issues."

Koed said they could get to the bottom of it, that the selectmen have the ability to get a subpoena and search town computers. "We have the power to do that."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said the town has a computer use and civil discourse policies, which "prohibit" employees from writing negative posts online. The policies also acknowledge that all town employees' computers are owned by the town, therefore can be used for town work only. Also, everything on these computers is considered part of the public record.

Milanoski also noted that all of the town's non-union employees have signed the computer use policy, while the town unions "want to impact bargain that policy."

Kennedy noted that even if town employees are the ones writing nasty remarks, it does not mean they do so on town-owned computers. "Anyone can go home on a personal computer" and comment or blog, she explained. "People have the right to do what they want."

Milanoski said that some employees do post with their real names, and still write "disparaging remarks against the board" from their home computers. "They're doing it on their own time."

Koed said that many of these comments could be considered slander or libel. "Nobody has the right to lie about someone's family."

Cohasset police Detective Lieutenant Gregory Lennon was in the audience and said that the board could get a subpoena for a criminal matter, if a crime is committed or a threat is issued. "If it's libel, you can file a civil suit. Have your attorney file a motion for a subpoena as part of the lawsuit against the unknown person."

Milanoski said that in the meantime, he avoids reading certain blogs and does not patronize businesses that advertise in one local newspaper that has a corresponding blog.

"The blogging has gone to a level that's uncivilized. My only recourse with one of the blogs is to not do any business with anyone who advertises in that paper," he said, adding that this blog has referred to Town Hall as "the Third Reich." "It goes way over the line... Unfortunately people have free speech, and can make up things... We have little control over that."

Agnes McCann, Doane Street, said at the meeting, "We do not control the newspapers, nor should we," adding that, however, "we can investigate this and see if there is any connection to anybody who is supposed to be serving this town." That should be the selectmen's focus, she said.

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Comments vs. blogs

As officials discuss "anonymous bloggers," what they are referring to are those who create usernames on the Mariner website (wickedlocal.com/Cohasset) or other news sites and log in with these usernames to post comments on stories. Anyone with computer access can create a username/screen name and post.

A blogger is an online writer who posts articles, stories, journals or other opinion-oriented entries. They can do this on their own personal website or post on websites that post blogs.

The Mariner has a "Blogs" page for those who are GateHouse bloggers. They are volunteer writers who opine on various subjects, such as lifestyle topics. They are not necessarily affiliated with online commenters.

Comments written in reaction to an online article are not blogs; thus, commenting on a newspaper article does not make the commenter a "blogger."

The bottom line? There is a difference between bloggers, or online writers, and commenters/posters using created usernames to comment on original content, at least as far as the terminology is concerned.

No act of violence
Can break the spirit of Boston.

We honor those who lost their lives,
Those who lost their loved ones,
And all those affected, physically and emotionally,
In the wake of Monday's tragedy.

We will never lose our sense of community.

Lending a hand to Boston

Police, volunteer assist in wake of tragedy

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Many Cohasseters were in Boston on Monday, April 15 celebrating both the Marathon and Patriots' Day. After two bombs went off, killing three and injuring nearly 200, many citizens rushed to help those injured in the blasts. Still others stayed behind to help during the aftermath of the horrific event.

Cohasset resident Linda Fechter organized a large group of volunteers at the Marathon. She took to Facebook yesterday afternoon to assure her friends and family that she was safe. She also let them know that she was staying in the city.

"I'm OK but still working, so if you don't hear from me, please don't worry," Fechter posted around 10 a.m. Tuesday. "I'm never more than two feet from a member of the National Guard."

Fechter's reason for sticking around after the event is simple.

"I love this race and everyone associated with it," she wrote. "Our family is pulling together and doing what needs to be done to make sure our runners and their families get whatever help they need."

One of Cohasset's finest headed into Boston Monday afternoon to lend a hand. Lt. Gregory Lennon commands a unit of 11 detectives for the Metro Law Enforcement Council. The Metro-LEC is a consortium of 43 metro-south police departments that band together to provide mutual aid for one another, said Cohasset's Acting Police Chief William Quigley.

Lennon went into Boston around 4 p.m. Monday, not long after the two bombs exploded. Quigley said in a phone call Tuesday, "Right now he's providing investigative support to the Boston P.D. and receiving leads, helping with the investigation, working with the FBI and other federal authorities. We're very proud of him."

This is not the first time the Cohasset P.D. has teamed up with Boston, said Quigley.

"We've had assistance from the Boston P.D. before. We had their bomb squad down here," he recalled, referring to a 2011 incident where a local man brought two Vietnam-era hand grenades to the Cohasset police station. The bomb squad took the grenades to their Moon Island firing range for detonation.

Sending Lennon to Boston Monday gave Cohasset P.D. "a chance to pay them back," Quigley said of Boston's finest. "And we're happy to do it. In times like these, we stick together and help our neighbors."

COUPLE

"I called my daughter on her cell phone while she was running and told her to stop now and get off the course – it is too dangerous to come down here," said Peraino.

Heather was in disbelief. "We didn't have any direction. No one knew what was really going on."

Before learning about the bomb from the officers, Heather noticed something strange was happening. "I noticed the crowd was thinning and runners just stopped running and were on their cell phones and texting... The demeanor or everyone around me changed instantly. People were crying... It was horrific."

A quick phone conversation with her husband confirmed that he and the rest of her family members waiting for her were OK. Eventually cell phone service was disabled as authorities feared phones could trigger more blasts. It only added to the confusion as people scrambled to find one another.

"We had a quick talk before we were disconnected, but I heard they were safe, and they knew I was safe," said Heather. "I knew where they were, but it was a challenge getting there."

Although the race was officially over, Heather and her fellow runners had another marathon ahead—reaching their loved ones. "It took me two and a half hours to walk to Boston Common because of the roadblocks, and my legs were tired. We couldn't go back to the scene."

Heather eventually reunited with her husband, parents and other family members at the Hyatt, where they had rented a room.

The police took possession of the items marathoners had left behind as part of the investigation. "All our bags were where we left them on the buses. We went back [Tuesday] morning to get them."

Heather said that she knows how fortunate she is.

"Luckily everyone in our group was safe," she said, reflecting, "It's so frightening that this could happen in your own city."

The fear from that day has not crushed Heather's resolve, however. When asked if she plans to run the Boston Marathon again, she said, "Definitely. I run for Dana-Farber, and the amount of good that comes out of the marathon outweighs the bad that happened" Monday. "It's a positive event for charities.

"I don't know about next year," she added, "but I will definitely run again."

If anything, Monday's tragedy "motivates me to run in Boston more and do more for the city."

MARATHON

"So much of what happens in life is timing."

On Tuesday, Mahoney said that she was grateful to have finished the race when she did. What happened "was so much worse for other people. I just feel lucky."

Like Kennedy, Mahoney was rejoicing over the marathon and her personal victory before the horrific event transpired.

"The Boston Marathon is such an epic day. The weather cooperated; it was so perfect. There are all these great events happening along the 26.2 miles that make so many great memories... It's such a happy time. To have a terror attack at the end... It's unfathomable."

Gomez described trying to locate his wife and kids after he had crossed the finish line and headed to a pre-designated press area for interviews. First, Gomez stopped by where his family was waiting, "literally a block or two from the finish line," to give them hugs and kisses. Gomez has four children, aged 13, 11, 10 and eight. Then Gomez went to do media interviews.

"That's when I heard the explosion and saw the smoke," Gomez recalled. He was thinking, "I've got to find where my wife and kids are. I knew [the explosion] was right around where they were. It took about a half-hour to make contact. There was no cell coverage for a long time."

Despite the turmoil, Gomez admired how people jumped in to help.

"It was unbelievable how quickly the first responders reacted, [with] security, emergency people, EMTs and ambulances rushing to the scene," said Gomez. "People reacted so fast, and so brave."

Gomez added, "You saw the best of Boston after you literally couldn't see anything worse in Boston."

Marathoner Katie Naples finished running around 20 minutes before the bombs went off, said she was a block or two away when she heard the explosion. Naples, a friend of Gomez and Mahoney, also witnessed Boston's volunteer spirit firsthand.

The mile 18 water station team, headed by Cohasset's Bill Burnett, front center, strikes a pose during the Boston Marathon on Monday, April 19. COURTESY PHOTOS

"I'm amazed at how many people ran toward the bombing to help people versus running away, which I thought was a testament to the people at the marathon," said Naples. "I'm so heartbroken for everyone; it's such a terrible tragedy. I just hope everyone can heal."

While Kennedy and her family were safely away from the site where the bombs exploded, since she has "a very fast husband who finished the race in three hours," they still witnessed much of the chaos that broke out afterward.

"It's indescribable, almost, the noise," Kennedy said. "The minute it was quiet, there was another siren... Policemen, bomb squad vans... Everybody was in a daze in one sense, but also... You know how people rally and pull together in adversity. People were randomly speaking to each other and offering comfort on the streets."

Kennedy added, "You think of the silly stuff that affects you on a daily basis, and what really matters is the full force of humanity."

Bill Burnett, organizer of the annual Cohasset Triathlon, was manning the 18-mile water station, managing around 100 volunteers who were giving water to runners tackling Newton's Heartbreak Hill. There, he was a spectator of the runners and their "spirit of determination."

Burnett said Tuesday, "Athletic events such as the Marathon are staged to provide an opportunity to inspire individuals to set goals, accomplish something greater than themselves—and to serve as an inspiration or tribute to others. The stories of inspiration and perseverance in this historic race are too numerous to count... It is this very spirit, determination, fight and absolute refusal to quit that we know will help Boston heal, recover and come back stronger than ever."

Kennedy said that her husband was doing fine on Tuesday, although both of them were "obviously shaken." However, this was not the first time Patrick, a lawyer, had a brush with a terrorist attack.

"He was also on an airplane on 9/11; he literally flew out of Boston to D.C. that morning," said Kennedy. "Once again, like anything else, when these things happen, you just treasure what's really important in the world, and you realize there are more good people than bad."

Gomez echoed that same sentiment. "There's a lot more good people than evil people. That's what you have to remember."

Mahoney said that while it might seem trivial, it was sad that a large number of people who trained extensively for the marathon were unable to complete the race.

"It's such a great support for friends helping friends get through to the end. It's so pathetic that someone would ruin the day," said Mahoney. "It's hard not to let the bombings overshadow the goodness that comes out of stuff like that."

Monday marked Mahoney's third Boston Marathon; she also ran in 2009 and 2010. And she will "definitely" run it again next year.

"It's a hometown race and I'm lucky enough to qualify. It would be my honor to run it again," she said. "It's sad that this will change the finish line or how people view it... but I would love to be a part of it again next year."

"Next year," Mahoney said, "will be a real tribute year."

LEAD-UP TO LEHANE

Sacco & Vanzetti at the Library

Decade of the 20s at the Historical Society

For those who feast in the village, ask for the "Lehane Special" at local restaurants where menu creations honor the author and his novel.

The 2013 Cohasset Reads Together selection, The Given Day, by Dennis Lehane, depicts 1919 as a year rife with violence in Boston. Racism, ethnic tensions, high unemployment, a city police strike, Spanish influenza, political corruption, and a host of awful events cripple the city. Add to this cauldron of fear, rage, and suffering, growing numbers of Bolsheviks and anarchists spreading real and imagined terror and creating the first Red Scare.

Christopher Haley, the second speaker in the Cohasset Reads Together Program, will speak at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Thursday, April 25, at 7 p.m.. Haley will present a one hour slide lecture that chronicles the lives of the two Italian immigrant anarchists, Niccola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. He begins with the robberies in Bridgewater and Braintree, examines Sacco's and Vanzetti's trial in Dedham followed by seven years of attempts to get a new trial, and discusses the worldwide protests and demonstrations that preceded their sentencing and execution.

The "Sacco-Vanzetti Revisited" lecture slide presentation contains period photographs of all the major venues and players in the case. Many of these photographs are rare and unpublished. Although Sacco and Vanzetti play no major role in The Given Day, they were purported followers of Luigi Galleani, an Italian anarchist and advocate of revolutionary violence, who was an important character accused of igniting terrorism and mayhem in the novel.

In honor of the upcoming Dennis Lehane event on May 5, the Cohasset Historical Society has created an on-going exhibit of "The Decade of the 20s in Cohasset." The exhibit will showcase documents, photos, and fashion of daily life in Cohasset. It will be open to the public on Wednesday, April 24 and run through the middle of May. Also on Wednesday, April 24, at 10 a.m., the Cohasset Library will host a book discussion of The Given Day. Watch for other event announcements next week.

For those who feast in the village, ask for the "Lehane Special" at local restaurants where menu creations honor the author and his novel. At Atlantica, "the Molasses Flood cocktail;" at Mr. Dooley's, "the Irish Trio" (shepherd's pie, cottage pie, and beef stew); at Bia Bistro, "the Local Sustainable Catch of The Given Day;" at 5 South Main, "the Evil Eddie Curtis Wrap" (shaved steak, gorgonzola, caramelized onions, and spicy catsup) and "For the Love of Nora" grilled cheese; at Ava Cucina, "the Lehane linguine and clams."

Dennis Lehane will speak at the Cohasset High School auditorium on Sunday, May 5, at 4 p.m.. A wine and cheese reception will follow at the Cohasset Historical Society where his books will be available for purchase and signing. This event is free but tickets are required for admission — they are available at the Cohasset Library.

Cohasset Reads Together is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and the Cook Estate. A Taste for Wine and Spirits donates wines for the post-talk receptions.

OUR VIEW

Self governing

"...government of the people, by the people, for the people..."

There are still upwards of a billion people around the world who do not enjoy what those words in President Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address mean right here in the USA.

While it is our right to govern ourselves through our democracy – it is also a privilege that should not be taken for granted, ever!

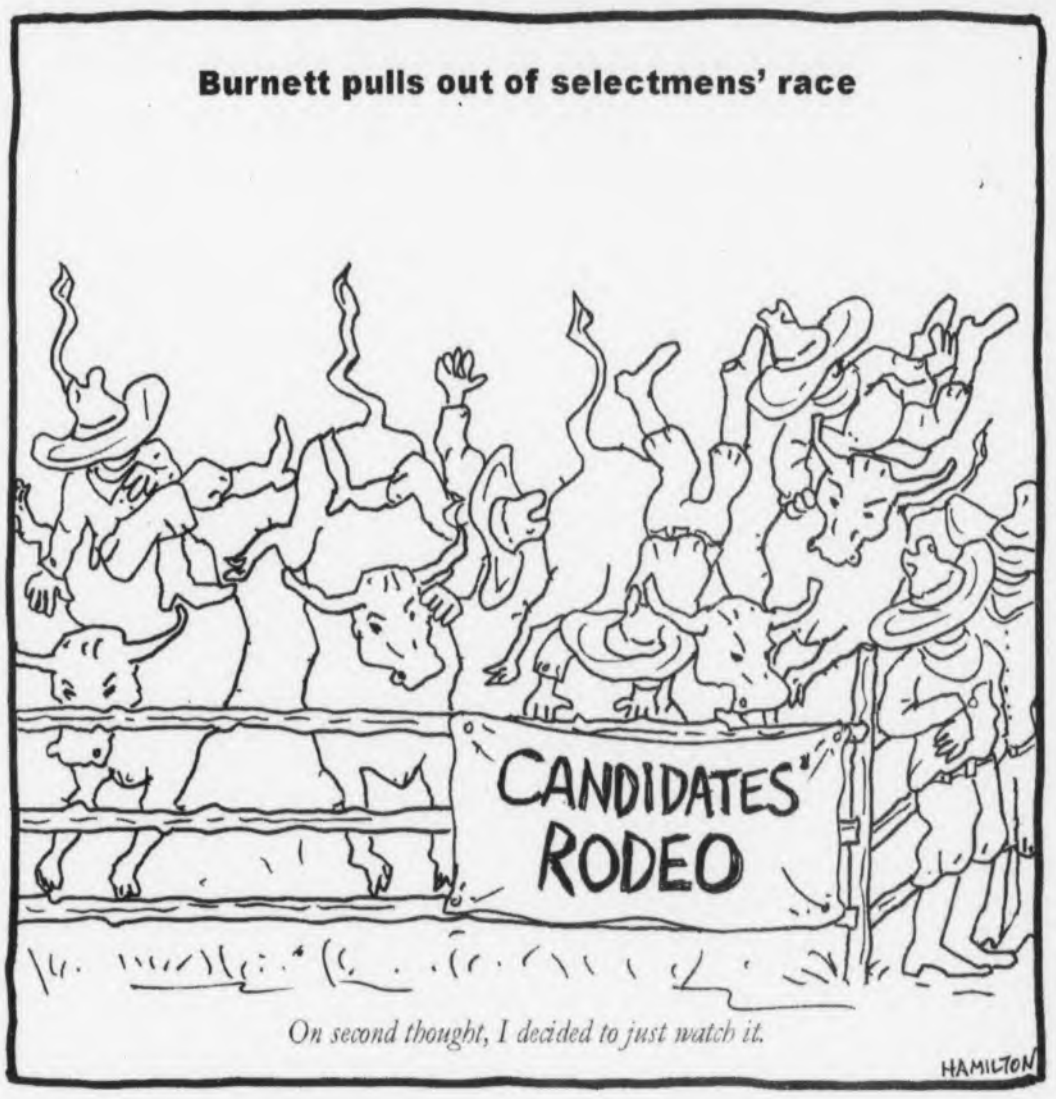
On Monday, Cohasset residents once again have the opportunity to be captains of their own ship and help decide the best way the town should proceed on many issues and budget items.

It is important to remember that Cohasset citizens don't simply "go" to Town Meeting – they "are" Town Meeting.

The issue that is likely to attract generate the most debate is how the town should proceed on plans to revamp the Town Manager Act.

It is our sincere hope that those on both sides of that issue will practice civility and respect the views of those with whom they disagree. Let's set a good example so when our young people reach voting age they will also practice civility and respect. We hope there will be no cheers or boos as the issue is discussed – just active listening and polite applause.

Another issue that is back before the voters for a third time is the Meals Tax. Scituate Town Meeting just adopted the Meals Tax – should Cohasset join its neighbors (Hingham adopted the tax two years ago) and adopt the new tax?



An issue that continues to unfold is the legalization of medical marijuana in the state of Massachusetts. Town Meeting will consider adopting a temporary moratorium on medical marijuana treatment centers. Many other towns are looking at the same thing.

This year's Town Meeting has complex issues but the best way to grasp them is by attending. We admit to being Town Meeting groupies in that we always find the discussion interesting and educational.

Town Meeting should not be about winning or losing even though there will be some articles that pass while others fail. If a vote or votes don't go your way, it is OK to be disappointed, but with the full realization that you took part in a very important democratic process in your own hometown.

Candidates' debate on Cable-TV

The selectmen candidate's debate will be held in the 143tv studio on Monday, April 29 starting at 7pm. The debate will not be live, but will see many replays leading up to the May 11 election. Check out the schedule at: 143tv.org/tvschedule.htm.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

TMA changes not ready for primetime

While acknowledging and appreciating the work of the governance committee, the Town Meeting should vote NO on the proposed changes to the Town Manager Act.

It is impossible for voters to know what is being changed! Examination of the current Act against the proposal with a fine toothcomb is no help. While it appears that entire sections have been deleted and replaced, in fact, it is only renumbering and reordering with the substance being the same.

So what are we changing? We can't be certain. An informed voter must know, in precise detail, what they are approving. We will likely live with these changes for the next 5 to10 years. Every word that is changed or deleted has significance. An informational summary in the warrant that states that the recommendations "improve Governance" or "allow for greater collaboration amongst town officials" is just Vote Yes messaging, not illustrative information.

It seems the role of the Board of Selectmen is changing wit new "oversight" of regulatory boards, and new involvement in the budget process. Over the past few weeks the proposals have changed from the Selectman creating the budget back to the town manager; and the BOS appointing the Conservation Commission to the town manager's appointment, then back to the selectmen. Who's been debating these issues and why the back and forth? The voters are clearly out of the loop.

The controversial changes to qualifications for town manager that were defeated by town meeting are back. The addition of a search committee to "assist" in the selection does little to address the issues of qualification and eligibility.

Changes of this significance require a strong foundation of consensus

Building among the voters before passage. To accomplish that, we need clarity—not confusion, and more importantly, what is needed may require a charter commission. The case has yet to be effectively made, which route the town should take. For now, Vote No on Article 8.

Ronnie McMorris, 89 Doane St.

TM warrant is a disgrace!

Cohasset's Annual Town Meeting warrant arrived on Saturday and it is a disgrace. An introductory letter from Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski is by turns self-promoting, argumentative accusatory, ,dismissive, inaccurate and illiterate. Informational summaries of budget articles are misleading, unclear and unhelpful. Others advocate where they should explain.

In particular, Article 8 – Home Rule Petition to Change Town Manager Act is presented in a manner that will make it impossible to understand or knowingly act on for most people, since no attempt was made at distinguishing between what is being proposed and what currently is in place. No typeface cues, no underlining, no footnotes.

I attended almost every meeting of the Governance Committee from December 13, 2012 through March 14, 2013. I attended Selectmen's meetings where the proposed changes to the Town Manager Act were discussed. I have been paying very close attention to the process. My professional experience was as an attorney who read and interpreted insurance policy language every day. And I can tell you that as presented in the Warrant, the language voters will be asked to consider consists of 4 pages of wholesale substitution and it is impossible to know by reading it what part of any provision is new or different.

I firmly believe there are many other solid, substantive reasons to vote against Article 8, but in addition I urge everyone to vote against it because it is impossible to know what you will be voting for.

PSO hoop support appreciated

We wanted to extend a huge thank you for everyone's support and enthusiasm for the April 5 PSO Elementary Basketball Challenge!

It was an exciting evening and we are thrilled to report that we raised $17,000. We are pleased with the event's success but we have a great deal of work to do as we continue to raise funds to make the new playground at the Deer Hill School a reality. For more information or if you would still like to order a brick for our Donor Dedication Path please contact Franchesca Arnold at franchesca@cohasset. net or 383-2548 or Michelle Loughlin at mloughlin521@hotmail.com or 383-8308.

The Playground Committee has been meeting with various town departments. The CPC (Community Preservation Committee) has proposed to support our project. They will be presenting Article #15 Community Preservation Projects at Town Meeting on Monday, April 22, (meeting begins at 6:30 p.m.) and we would love to have you in attendance to vote your support for the CPC's contribution to the Playground Renovation.

Many thanks.

CDTC 'movie night' April 19th

The next selection for CDTC "movie night" will be The Queen of Versailles. This documentary will be shown at the Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Rd., Cohasset on Friday April 19th at 7 p.m..

The movie follows the story of a billionaire couple as they begin construction on an enormous mansion modeled on Louis XIV's Versailles Palace. Their goal was to build the largest single-family private home in the U.S. That is, until the financial crisis of '08 hit and David Siegel's business, which relied on cheap credit, began to fail. The Queen of Versailles follows Jackie and David Siegel as they struggle to scale back their affluent consumption while their 90,000 square foot mansion falls into disrepair.

"This is almost like a riches-to-rags story," David Siegel remarks to the camera. Somehow, contrary to the many who lost their homes in the Great Recession; given the machinations of the financial world, the Siegles are able to make a come back. Come join us and see how they do it.

According to Ezra Klein, columnist for the Washington Post, the film "ended as perhaps the single best film on the Great recession."

All CDTC movies are free of charge. Refreshments are served. All are welcome!

Budget and the TMA

Editor's note the following was provided by the Governance Committee.

How the proposed budget revisions to the Town Manager Act improve financial governance and increase financial transparency.

The Governance Committee's first project after being formed by the board of Selectmen was to review the process for creating the annual budget.

The preparation of the budget is a significant part of town hall's work and the process is complicated and time consuming. The budget review starts in late September and finishes in early April. Many citizens, town employees and town departments are involved and play an important part in assembling the budget. The coordination of all of the people and information can be a challenge especially when state imposed deadlines are approaching.

We began our review by examining the existing budget documents and regulations that affect the budget process. Unfortunately, we found no documentation on the budget process for the town of Cohasset. By interviewing citizens and town employees who had been part of the past town budgets we found the tradition had been to allow the town manager to organize the budget process has he wished. We concluded two of our past town managers had a good grasp of the budget process and put together a budget in an orderly fashion. Our other town managers struggled to produce a budget on time, had problems with cost overruns and were more prone to presenting overrides at the Annual Town Meeting.

We then looked to the current Town Manager Act (TMA (1997)) and the town by-laws for guidance. The responsibility for the preparation of the operating budget and the capital budget is given to the town manager in Section 4b. The board of selectmen are given the power to review and change the budget, before it is presented to town meeting in Section 3h. In general, the TMA (1997) gives broad powers to the town manager to organize the budget and imposes little or no structure to the process.

We immediately set out to review the budget process in other towns. There are a handful of towns in Massachusetts that are acknowledged by their peers to be well governed and are the benchmark for best practices. Well governed towns such as Brookline, Arlington and Wellesley have a clearly defined, transparent and documented budget process. Their budget documents are published and available on the town's website. They have clearly defined the roles of the town manager, selectmen, advisory committees, the assessors and finance department in the process.

A summary of the best practices includes:

- Budget guidelines from the selectmen published early in the budget cycle
- A calendar for the preparation of the budget which includes clearly defined deadlines
- A well documented budget process that defines the role and responsibilities of the town manager, selectmen, finance department, assessor and the advisory committees.
- The budget process provides multiple opportunities for citizen input and review
- The budget process that has multiple opportunities for the selectmen to participate in and review the progress of the budget negotiations.
- The budget process allows for emergencies and unusual financial events
- The budget process can be conducted in an orderly fashion and completed on time
- The budget process and responsibilities are incorporated into the town's governing laws

The Governance Committee with the help of the selectmen, the finance department, the town manager and the advisory committees drafted a set of budget guidelines based on the best practices outlined above. The draft guidelines were reviewed in public meetings and finalized and presented to the Selectmen in the fall of 2012. The selectmen voted 5-0 to approve the guideline and to use it in this year's budget cycle.

Finally, the Governance Committee began work on the TMA (1997) to incorporate the updated budget process into the Act. After much input and deliberation, we decided to more clearly define the roles and responsibilities for the budget process into the new TMA (2013). The significant changes to the TMA (2013) are:

- (Section 3(i)) The selectmen are responsible for establishing and maintaining a written process for the preparation of the budget,
- (Section 8c) The town manager now must prepared the town budget in accordance with the selectmen's budget process in Section 3(i),
- (Section 8d) The information the town manager is required to provide in the budget is more clearly defined.
- (Section 8e) The town manager now must submit the preliminary budget and the capital plan to the selectman 70 days before town meeting. The budget submission deadline is now a fixed date and the longer lead time allows more time for review.

These changes to the Town Manager Act are significant. The new language in the Act bring us closer to the best practices of our peer communities and permanently codify a transparent, clearly defined budget process with which to conduct town business.

Please attend Annual Town Meeting on Monday April 22nd and vote yes on Article 8.

Highlights of major changes to Town Manager Act

The following was provided by the Governance Committee:
Over the past year the Governance Committee has examined Cohasset's existing Town Manager Act in detail with the purpose of bringing it into conformance with current practice in the town, addressing ambiguities in the roles of selectmen vis-à-vis the town manager, improving the annual budget process and providing guidance to the selectmen in their process of appointing a town manager. The major changes are as follows:

- Section 3 Power and Duties of the Board of Selectmen:
Reaffirmed that the role of the selectmen is to be the goal setting and policymaking body of the town and that they direct the town manager by setting guidelines and policy directives for his or her implementation.
Required the BOS to formally approve the warrants before submission to town meeting.
Added authority to appoint an independent auditor.

- Section 4 Appointment of the Town Manager
Obliged the BOS to create a search committee to assist in the selection of candidates for town manager and required the town, by bylaw, to establish qualifications for the position.
Added the prerequisite that the person selected for town manager have demonstrated ability with administrative experience in public management or business administration.
Broadened the pool of qualified potential candidates by eliminating the prohibition that appointed or elected officials including employees could not be appointed as town manager within one year of such appointment. (prohibition remains for selectmen)

- Section 5 Removal of Town Manager
Established a written process for removal of the town manager.

- Section 5A Absence of Vacancy of Town Manager
Completely rewrote the section regarding temporary absences of the town manager and established that the selectmen have the authority to determine when the town manager is unable to effectively perform the duties of the office and their right to appoint an acting or temporary town manager.
Authorized the selectmen to determine the powers and responsibilities of any acting or temporary town manager.

- Section 5B Administrative Responsibilities of the Town Manager
Obligated the town manager to develop and maintain a full and complete inventory of all town property.
Authorized access by the town manager for all information necessary for the performance of his or her duties except for attorney-client privileged information or electronic communications in an employee's personal work area.

- Section 5C Financial Responsibilities of the Town Manager
Completely rewrote the section (see accompanying article)

- Section 5D Appointment Powers of the Town Manager
Added that the selectmen shall affirmatively approve town manager appointments of the Fire and Police Chiefs and Director of Finance on merit and fitness alone.

- Section 5E Collective Bargaining
Required the BOS to approve and ratify collective bargaining agreements negotiated by the town manager.

- Section 5F Procurement
Established that the town manager is the chief procurement officer under Chapter 30B of the General Laws with the right to delegate duties for school department purchasing to an employee of the school committee.

VIEW FROM THE FRONT PORCH

A busy Jackie Robinson Day

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Originally I was planning to write an article about the game of baseball, but Monday's attack gave me pause. My family and I were less than a mile away from the finish line when the explosions occurred. Having gone to the Sox game earlier, we spent the better part of an hour near Kenmore Square getting ready to cheer on Kirsten Ripple's attempt to finish her first marathon, in hopes of meeting her goal for the Christmas in the City charity.

Let me tell you, trying to spot a solitary runner in a sea of thousands isn't easy, but we did. At roughly 2:41 p.m. with much enthusiasm the family cheered and waved to Kirsten as she went by. Nine minutes later, the bombs exploded just yards from the finish line. It took us until the next day to find out if Kirsten was OK. She is, but barely. Kirsten was able to finish and in the process raise close to $6,000, (with the help of some of you) but 11 seconds after she crossed the line, the devices detonated shattering the lives of hundreds of people forever including some people I know pretty well.

Monday's bombing was horrific and cowardly, but it will not deter our great city nor this article. I condone this spineless anonymous act and hope that justice is bestowed sooner than later, but this article isn't about terrorism, it's about baseball.

"The one constant through all the years has been baseball. America has rolled by like an army of steamrollers. It has been erased like a blackboard, rebuilt and erased again. But baseball has marked the time. This field, this game: It's a part of our past. It reminds of us of all that once was good and it could be again" – Terrence Mann (James Earl Jones) in "Field of Dreams."

Trees blossoming, flowers blooming, warmer days and the sound of a sharply thrown baseball hitting a mitt, are just a few rewards of making it through yet another cold winter. The other day as I drove by Barnes Field, I couldn't help but smile as I saw a father and son playing catch; baseball the purest of all sports, is back for another season and all is good.

Nothing comes close to baseball; sure all the other major sports have their strengths but baseball is and will continue to be synonymous with America itself. From Doubleday Field in Cooperstown to the friendly confines of Fenway Park to local ball fields such as Barnes and Chase, the game is the perfect combination of skill and strategy.

Whether you are walking up the ramp at Fenway, or driving at night listening to Joe Castiglione, the game is as captivating today as it has been for the better part of the last 120 years; 12 decades, 12 decades of fathers tossing the ball with their children, 12 decades of statistics that have stood the test of time and 12 decades of fans saying "wait 'til next year." While the game has no equal, it has had its low points; none perhaps lower than the exclusion of African American players until 1946. This is the subject that is at the core of the new movie "42."

For the past 25 years, "Field of Dreams" has stood alone at the top my list of favorite sports related movies. It's the perfect story of how the game has transcended generations and I have seen it dozens of times, and every single time I find myself choking up as Ray Kinsella asks his Dad to play catch. 'Fields' just got replaced by "42," the story of how Jackie Robinson and Brooklyn Dodgers owner Branch Rickey broke down the color barrier in baseball. It's spectacular.

Very rarely does one get to see a movie that moves an audience to remain in their seats applauding while wiping the tears away. "42" delivers that and much more. A wonderful cast, great baseball scenes and a historical accuracy that makes one cringe. It's impossible to tell the story of Jackie Robinson breaking into the Major Leagues without facing racism head on and "42" does that, sometimes quite uncomfortably.

I had the pleasure of taking a carload of boys to see the movie last weekend, and it was a true testament to all of them that they were truly disturbed by the battles Robinson had to endure. Much of what is uttered and displayed in the movie has virtually gone from our society, but don't kid yourself into thinking it is all gone. Sadly, we all are reminded from time to time that some amongst us still harbor baseless resentment toward others based on the color of their skin, but that narrow-mindedness continues to fade away.

The sport of baseball has proven to be the great equalizer; a game where 5'8 Dustin Pedroia wins the MVP and a player nicknamed "Pee Wee" is elected to the Hall of Fame. However, it was the vision of Rickey and the all-around strength of Robinson that truly made the game equal. There is much to love about the movie "42,", but none greater than a half a dozen 12-year-old boys being touched by the story – even if they did want to sit by themselves. Incidentally Monday was Jackie Robinson Day across the Major Leagues with all the players wearing the number 42. The game at Fenway was a great one with the Sox beating the Rays in the bottom of the ninth, too bad for all of us that the day didn't end there.

Thanks for reading and I hope to see you at the ball field.

John McSheffrey was born and raised on the South Shore and he and his family have been part of the Cohasset community since 2007. John can be reached at jjmcs@aol.com.

FOR THE RECORD

Analyzing our new audience

GREGORY MATHIS

Here we are in 2013 and the transformation is still far from over as companies big and small position themselves to survive in the changing digital age of journalism.

Many of us got started in this business many years ago when it was just about newspapers.

For a weekly reporter and editor back then, that meant covering the required town government meetings during the week, checking in with the police and fire department to see if anything newsworthy happened, and seeking out a few features stories to provide readers with a mix of stories that adequately reflected what was happening in their community during the week.

Circulation numbers were strong, for the most part, as was advertising revenue. Times were very good. I'm talking 15-20 years ago.

Despite the good times, it was often difficult to get a read on what our audience liked or didn't like. Letters to the editor or anonymous phone-in lines (we still have Speak out! and Sound Off for some of our papers) occasionally gave us insight and feedback. Reader surveys helped us understand what content mattered most, but that took weeks, sometimes months to coordinate and review results.

Circulation and other industry benchmarks have taken a hit over the years as the newspaper business slowly, but surely transformed into a multimedia business.

Here we are in 2013 and the transformation is still far from over as companies big and small position themselves to survive in the changing digital age of journalism.

A big part of surviving will depend on how well we know our audience and our ability to reach new people on multiple platforms with our content and brand.

Unlike the mystery sometimes surrounding our newspaper readers, we know what our Wicked Local audience wants. Analytics provide great detail, not only the top read stories, but how you're finding our stories (search engines, page is bookmarked, through Facebook, etc.), what devices you're using to read our stories, and what town or country people looking at the site are from. It's all good data that helps shape the type of content we provide online.

Social media – mostly Facebook and Twitter at this stage – also provides valuable feedback, almost instantly. Whether people "Like" our Facebook posts, follow us on Twitter or otherwise engage in conversation on either platform, the response we get is often immediate and useful.

That aspect of audience participation is very different from the print-only era. It seemed we sent our newspaper off the press and out the door to a certain number of people each week and waited to hear if anything struck a chord.

In this new era, letters to the editor are still valued. Phone calls and email responding to what you see in the newspaper or view online are very much appreciated, even if your comments are critical.

But social media can provide us with instant feedback and allows us, along with our websites, to reach an audience that expands beyond a town's borders.

It's our hope that Facebook Fans and Twitter Followers are eventually finding their way to our websites and even picking up the newspaper. Even if that doesn't happen for some reason, our goal is to grow in those areas and quite possibly reach a whole new audience beyond our print circulation and web traffic that will pave the way to our continued success in the future.

Act defines the framework governance of Cohasset

DIANE KENNEDY

Please plan to attend Cohasset's Annual Town Meeting on Monday evening, April 22nd at 6:30 pm; the participation of many is so important. The Town will vote on the proposed FY14 budget, zoning bylaw changes, a moratorium on the implementation of the state's medical marijuana law, a number of capital expenditures, and the rescission of debt — an important process in our continued advancement towards fiscal responsibility.

One article, that will be hotly debated, is a revised Town Manager Act. The current Town Manager Act (TMA), passed Town Meeting, in 1997 by 14 votes (75 to 61). Once approved by Town Meeting, the act went to the state legislature where it was adopted as a Special Act of the Legislature and became state law. The Act defines the framework for the governance of our community.

While the Act was an important step towards bringing strong, professional management to the Town it was presented and adopted as a citizen's petition and as such did not have the advantage of being edited or revised by Town Counsel. There are inconsistencies with the bylaws and there are sections where the intent is unclear. In the past year plus, many of these gray areas have ill-served the Town.

When the Governance Committee was formed in Fall of 2011, it was charged with looking at all aspects of Cohasset's government structure that could be improved to provide better governance, including accountability, and effective, efficient use of limited tax-payer dollars. Given some of the unrest that had occurred in town, with not only town managers, but also the finances (years of audit reports never shared with the elected Board of Selectmen, for example) and the interplay of the Boards and the Town Manager, the Governance Committee recognized a thorough review of the Town Manager Act as a priority.

The committee, of 8-10 residents, which has met in public session — almost weekly since 2011— has thoroughly reviewed and vetted every word, meaning, intent, phrase, and order of sections in the current TMA; it has held numerous public input meetings and considered and discussed at length every change suggested or hinted; the members have reviewed the charters, Town Manager Acts and other guiding documents of over 15 similar Massachusetts communities, and, finally, Town Counsel has parsed every word and statement with a legal eye, so that the proposed revised Town Manager Act is a strong, commanding document that will serve the Town going forward with very little gray area.

The majority of the proposed TMA does not fundamentally nor substantively change anything; most of the changes are elaborations or clarifications of the original language.

The "material" changes, as I see them, are as follows:

• Collective Bargaining: currently the Act states the Town Manager will "Negotiate collective bargaining contracts unless said board of selectmen designate another negotiator..." The presumptive responsibility rests first and fully with the Town Manager. The proposed change is critical: The town manager or a negotiating committee authorized by the board of selectmen, shall negotiate collective bargaining contracts on behalf of the board of selectmen which shall be subject to approval, ratification and execution by the board of selectmen... board of selectmen may authorize use of special counsel to assist the town manager or negotiating committee..." A burden now would be placed on the Board - the elected representatives of the town - to ensure that contracts are properly negotiated in the best interests of the Town. The Board must have the responsibility to look at these decisions in the context of both short- and long-term goals for the town as the approach to and results of collective bargaining and all negotiations have wide-reaching impact on the community. In addition, the language on counsel - currently non-existent in the TMA - encourages participation of legal counsel in this process.

• Eligibility and Appointment: Currently, the language states 'Said board of selectmen, by a majority vote of its full membership, shall appoint a person to perform the duties of town manager ... No person holding elective or appointive office in the town shall within one year of holding such office be eligible to be appointed to the position of Town Manager." The recommended change states "The board of selectmen shall create a search committee to assist in the selection of candidates for the position of town manager ... no selectman within 15 months of holding such office shall be eligible to be appointed to the position of town manager." This change in language not only adds the requirement for the selectmen to establish a search committee, but clarifies a weakness in the current TMA - the language that has caused much confusion over the past year: "elective or appointive office." A strict reading of that language would preclude many town employees, who are defined in the By-Laws as "appointed" from being eligible for the town manager position. After much discussion and consideration, the Committee opted to preclude selectmen from being eligible (within 15 months of their serving on the Board), and allowing for a wider net to be cast for the best qualified individual.

• Acting Town Manager: the current Act does not elaborate on an Acting Town Manager's authority so the presumption is an ATM assumes the full responsibilities of the Town Manager. In this case, someone appointed to cover a vacancy for more than 30 days has the authority to hire and fire on day one. The material change in this section is the addition of "Irrespective of the duration of the absence of the town manager, the board of selectmen shall determine the powers and responsibilities of any acting or temporary town manager." This is an important and critical protection for the town of Cohasset.

I am grateful to the members of the governance committee and the citizens who took the time to provide input into the revised Town Manager Act. I believe the product is better and stronger and offers protections and guidelines that will ultimately serve both future Town Managers and the residents of Cohasset well. The resulting document, as well, is an example of how good government works, offers checks and balances, and maintains the town's commitment to strong professional leadership. Please attend Town Meeting — and watch your town government in action. It is not as dysfunctional and "divided" as some choose to tout; there are important differences in opinion on matters that ultimately do impact us all and I encourage you to listen, consider and participate.

Diane Kennedy is a member of the Board of Selectmen.

COMMENTARY

Changes mean more balanced structure

PATRICIA MORSE

The Governance Committee, appointed in December of 2012 identified the following areas of concern after reviewing the issues facing the town.

• Financial Governance – who develops the annual budget, what is the process and what are the roles within the process of the various committees, Town Manager and Board?

• Review of town committees: How are the committees structured? Do they have term limit and should they be appointed or elected? Are they relevant, active, and overlapping with other committees? How do they recruit and educate new members about their mission?

• Bylaws and Town Manager Act: Last spring it became painfully clear that the current Town Manager Act could be interpreted differently than how many in town understood. This issue became paramount as we realized this document supersedes the bylaws, and is the framework for the town government. To leave this foundation shaky, would be a great disservice to the town. We set out to identify and reconcile inconsistencies between bylaws and Town Manager Act.

The study of these areas was undertaken at once, and work on all three took place simultaneously throughout the spring and summer of 2012. Before beginning this work, the committee prioritized town governance issues; examining the chronic, acute and structural issues, and those most influenced by personalities. We asked ourselves what a healthy system of governance looks like in light of the 3 areas of focus we were about to tackle. We asked ourselves where the weaknesses are in our governance structure, and set about the work of identifying ways in which to repair or strengthen them.

It became apparent quite early on that the town's budgeting practices were in need of an overhaul. The committee set about developing a budget planning process policy and framework that has since been approved by the Board of Selectmen and implemented.

With the budget planning process complete, the committee continued its work in the remaining two areas. While some members worked on developing a detailed on-line survey to be presented to the boards and committees in town. Also during this time, various officials and boards were invited to come in and explain how their committees work, how they manage the appointment of their chairmen and so on. In many discussions about the structure and appointment process for committees, we discovered that there is no existing set of guidelines or policy manual for committees to follow. This year, the governance committee hopes to create a framework for such guidelines, having gathered some strong examples from other towns. This will give committees some helpful guidance with regard to setting term limits, posting meetings, articulating their missions, rotating chairmen in a sensible way and providing other information that would be helpful to new members as they begin their terms. Examining and suggesting best practices for how committees are appointed and run will be a great part of our work in the coming year.

As we approached Annual Town Meeting, our work began to turn toward finalizing the suggested changes to the Town Manager Act so that it would be complete, reviewed by Counsel and ready in time to be included in the warrant. Part of this process involved getting feedback from the Department of Revenue, who recommended a complete overhaul, the Department of Housing and Community Development, members of various town boards and from the public at large. Every word in the amended sections has been carefully assessed and every sentence parsed to eliminate ambiguity and to strengthen its intent.

If approved by Town Meeting, the TMA will then go to the state legislature, where it will be carefully reviewed and then brought before the legislature for a vote, a process that could take many months. Once approved, it will become the cornerstone of Cohasset's governance structure, clearly defining the powers and obligations of both the Town Manager and the Board of Selectmen.

With this foundation in place, the Governance Committee will be able carefully map the town's bylaws to the Town Manager Act, and add new specific provisions, to include the detailed process by which a search for a new town manager would be conducted and the processes for appointing and retiring members of other boards and commissions. The TMA is the foundation. The Bylaws will build upon that foundation. It cannot be done in the reverse order. You cannot paint the house until the frame is complete.

Clearly, there is much more work to be done. There will be a need for public input, and for new people to join the Governance Committee in completing this work around the bylaws and committee ground rules. What we thought might be one year of work, every other week, has become weekly work (and some in between) for two years. But the outcome will be a far more clear, balanced and effective governance structure, which we hope will serve the town of Cohasset for years to come.

I urge you to come to Town Meeting on April 22 and vote for the provisions in the amendments to the Town Manager Act, which will better protect the town and provide a much more clear and balanced governance structure for our town. We want our town manager to have the ability to do his or her job as chief administrative officer without undo overbearance of the Board of Selectmen, but we also want the Selectmen to be compelled to actively engage in and be more directly accountable for the direction of the town in its role of the chief executive body. This balance, should serve the town well for years to come.

Patricia Morse lives at 78 Forest Avenue and is a member of the Governance Committee.

Volume 38 -Report No. 15 April 8-12, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on eight roll calls and local senators on six from the week of April 8-13.

The House and Senate approved different versions of a Democratic leadership-sponsored transportation package that includes $500 million in tax hikes. Increases include a 3-cent-per-gallon hike in the state's current 21-cent-per-gallon gas tax, which, beginning in 2015, would also be indexed to inflation. Other hikes include a $1 jump in the current $2.51-per-package cigarette tax, an increase in the tax on cigars and smokeless tobacco, imposition of a 6.25 percent sales tax on computer system design services as well as modification of prewritten software, and a change in the way utilities are classified for tax purposes. In the House, all Republicans present voted against the package while Democrats split, with 97 members voting for it and 27 opposing it. On the Senate side, all Republicans present voted against the package while all but two Democrats voted for it.

Supporters defended the bill as a reasonable package that will begin to solve many of the structural and financial problems that plague the MBTA and the state's financially ailing transportation system. The opposition was led by Republicans, who brought along some fiscally conservative Democrats. They said the proposed tax hikes would hurt already overburdened taxpayers. In a classic case of "politics makes strange bedfellows," the GOP in the House was joined in its opposition by a number of more liberal Democrats, who said they didn't think the taxes would raise enough revenue.

Here are some of the key votes on the bill. Beacon Hill Roll Call urges you to read the roll calls carefully and be aware that in some cases, the amendment would eliminate a proposed tax hike. In those cases, a "yes" vote is for eliminating the hike and therefore against the hike. In cases in which a study is proposed in place of a tax cut, a "yes" vote is for the study and essentially is against the tax cut. Conversely, a "no" vote is against the study and favors the tax cut.

APPROVE TAX HIKES (H 3382, S 1766)

House 97-55, Senate 30-5, approved different versions of a Democratic leadership-sponsored transportation package that includes $500 million in tax hikes. (A "Yes" vote is for the tax hikes. A "No" vote is against them.)

STRIKE PROPOSED SERVICE TAX (H 3382, S 1766)

House 54-97, Senate 5-28, rejected an amendment that would strike the proposed 6.25 percent sales tax on computer system design services as well as modification of prewritten software. These services are currently exempt from the sales tax. It is estimated that this service tax would generate $161 million in new tax revenue. (A "Yes" vote is against the tax. A "No" vote is for it.)

STRIKE PROPOSED UTILITY TAX CHANGES (H 3382)

House 45-106, rejected an amendment that would strike a proposed change in the way utilities are classified for tax purposes. It is estimated that these changes would generate $83 million in new tax revenue. (A "Yes" vote is against the tax. A "No" vote is for it.)

STRIKE PROPOSED GAS TAX HIKE (H 3382)

House 48-103, rejected an amendment that would strike a proposed 3-cent-per-gallon hike in the state's current 21-cent-per-gallon gas tax. It is estimated that this hike would generate $165 million in new tax revenue.(A "Yes" vote is against the tax. A "No" vote is for it.)

STRIKE PROPOSED GAS TAX INFLATION INDEX (H 3382, S 1766)

House 53-95, Senate 7-24, rejected an amendment that would strike the proposed indexing of the gas tax to inflation. (A "Yes" vote is against the tax. A "No" vote is for it.)

STRIKE TOBACCO TAX HIKE (H 3382)

House 47-104, rejected an amendment that would strike a $1 jump in the current $2.51-per-package cigarette tax and an increase in the tax on cigars and smokeless tobacco. It is estimated that this hike would generate $165 million in new tax revenue. (A "Yes" vote is against the tax. A "No" vote is for it.)

STUDY GAS TAX EXEMPTION FOR CITIES AND TOWNS (H 3382)

House 108-42, approved an amendment requiring the state to conduct a study of a proposal exempting cities' and towns' vehicle fuel purchases from the 21 cents-per-gallon gas tax. The study amendment would replace a proposal to simply exempt the fuel purchases. It is estimated that this exemption would save cities and towns $15 million. (A "Yes" vote is for studying the exemption. A "No" vote is against the study and favors the exemption.)

SUNSET GAS TAX INFLATION INDEXING (H 3382)

House 42-107, rejected an amendment that would eliminate the indexing of the gas tax to inflation after five years. (A "Yes" vote is for eliminating the tax after five years. A "No" vote is against elimination.)

GAS TAX EXEMPTION FOR CITIES AND TOWNS (S 1766)

Senate 5-28, approved an amendment exempting cities' and towns' vehicle fuel purchases from the 21-cents-per-gallon gas tax. It is estimated that this exemption would save cities and towns $15 million. (A "Yes" vote is for the exemption. A "No" vote is against the exemption.)

ALLOW TOLLS AT BORDERS (S 1766)

Senate 19-15, approved an amendment that would allow the Secretary of Transportation, with the approval of his board of directors, to establish tolls on the borders of Massachusetts. (A "Yes" vote is for allowing tolls. A "No" vote is against allowing them.)

SELL NAMING RIGHTS OF MBTA STATIONS (S 1766)

Senate 20-12, approved an amendment allowing the MBTA to sell to private companies the naming rights to all subway, bus and commuter rail stations. (A "Yes" vote is for selling the naming rights. A "No" vote is against selling them.)

Question of the week

For Selectmen candidates:

Can the selectmen do more to rein in the town's legal costs and do you think a change in Town Counsel would be healthy?

Leland Jenkins

By nature I am not a litigious person, I try to persuade people to settle disputes among themselves before running to attorneys and the court system. Unfortunately we have had elected officials and employees who have attorneys and state departments numbers on their speed dial.

Some in our society prefer to avoid discussion, debate and compromise and continue straight to the lawyer's office. In many instances, with no real basis for legal proceedings we are forced into situations defending the town at great cost to the taxpayers.

We experienced years of Board initiated expensive legal and engineering fees stemming from operating the tidal gates at Cat Dam a few days late. We had a $50,000 bill over the placement of cell antennas on a water tank. These antennas will improve public safety and are now going forward. Our current Acting Town Manager is spending much of his time dealing with inherited legal issues.

Throughout my years living in Cohasset I have observed cycles of counterproductive agendas promoted. Prior to my election and during my term I have encouraged residents to discuss their concerns and learn the "rest of the story." Today we have bloggers further complicating issues by disseminating unsubstantiated and misleading information resulting in expanding use of legal counsel with higher legal fees. At the April 9 Selectmen's Meeting the Chairman discussed such an erroneous blog.

Periodically rebidding audit and legal services is always prudent. It forces us to ask if we are receiving needed services at competitive prices.

Karen Quigley

While it's always good practice to review long-standing consulting agreements, I would argue that our legal expenses have less to do with town counsel than with deliberate choices made by the selectmen and the acting town manager.

Consider the number of selectmen's agendas over the past two years with executive sessions for litigation, union negotiations, and the acting town manager's contract. Add to that legal expenses incurred because advice of town counsel was either ignored or never sought prior to critical decisions and it is hardly surprising if legal costs have risen.

As for any other reason to change, consider our lead town counsel's credentials: over 30 years experience in municipal law; 18 years practical experience as a selectman; 5 years on the Commonwealth's Local Government Advisory Committee; and 8 years as a New England Super Lawyer.

Current town counsel has served us well for a long time with unbiased and unwavering advice in the town's best interest. I know this due to my first-hand experience and I know how important it is to have such valuable expertise.

We have that. What we need is more selectmen who respect the law and who seek legal advice prior to making decisions and not as justification for precipitous actions.

If you share my deep abiding respect for the law, process and procedure, then please give me one of your two votes for selectman on May 11.

Russell Bonetti

The best way for Cohasset to control its legal bills is to have a Board of Selectmen that stops getting into trouble.

We need to end the bad decisions that expose the Town to legal risk that lands us in court facing even more lawsuits.

A current idea from Town Hall to save legal costs is short sighted. The Acting Town Manager was quoted in a December 2012 Boston Globe article saying, the Town needs to look at "how vigorously to defend [decisions]." Since over a third of our legal fees are spent defending the work of three important land use boards – Conservation Commission, Planning Board, and Zoning Board of Appeals – we need to be very careful.

Some legal fees are the price we pay to live in a community where we protect our environment and value our local character. As selectman, I will never allow a town manager to tell a land use board we won't defend a decision. Doing that would allow developers to have free reign.

The current Town Counsel (TC) has been serving Cohasset well for the last 17 years. As Chair of the CPC, I have used TC for a variety of legal opinions. I have found them to be accessible and responsive to Cohasset's needs. In December 2011 counsel won a little-publicized $500,000 settlement from a former maintenance contractor under the School Department.

We need to find better ways to save legal costs, but not at the expense of what we value in Cohasset.

Steve Gaumer

The U.S. is a litigious society and Cohasset is no exception.

Cohasset spends $240,000 on average for legal services each year. But, according to a legal expense benchmark survey conducted for the town in 2004, we spend almost twice as much on legal services as similar towns in the survey.

Many of our legal expenses, in fact, are not a result of actions of the selectmen or directly within their control. Our independent boards, acting under statutory powers and individuals demanding redress for grievances of one kind or another create legal cost. For example, approximately 50 percent of legal expenses are spent on property rights disputes brought by citizens challenging decisions made by the Zoning Board of Appeals, the Conservation Commission and the Planning Board.

Of the legal costs that can be managed directly, approximately 25 percent are related to personnel/union contract issues and the remainder, 25 percent on general litigation issues.

I will work to reduce legal costs by changing the litigation policies of the independent boards so that we are not party to disputes that are not in our best interest. I will ensure that the town manager develops human resources policies and procedures for all departments and job descriptions for all employees to reduce personnel related litigation.

I will not support a change in Counsel because a change might be "healthy." As your selectman, I will conduct an assessment of counsel, which will include a performance review and a review of the cost of services before recommending any action.

Next week's question:

For selectman candidates: Given the constraints of Prop. 2-1/2, how can the Town reconcile its needs to deliver services provided by employees (teachers, police, fire, public works, etc.) when salaries and benefits are the largest line items in the budget and rise faster than 2-1/2 percent per year?

Responses to the Question of the Week should be no more than 250 words and must be received by noon, Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count.

Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.) Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like.

Candidates both opposed and unopposed are invited to submit a formal announcement of their candidacy with a photograph.

There is no word limit on the announcements but candidates are encouraged to be as concise as possible.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

VSO update

Cohasset has an amended agreement with the town of Hingham when it comes to sharing a Veterans Service Officer (VSO). Cohasset has shared services with Hingham by utilizing their VSO, Keith Jermyn, since Cohasset's last VSO, Joe McElroy, retired in late 2011.

Cohasset had a temporary VSO for a while before working with Hingham. Now, Cohasset has hired a new part-time VSO, Vincent Fountaine. The new agreement between Cohasset and Hingham still has Hingham taking the lead on VSO services out of Jermyn's Hingham Town Hall office, with Fontaine being trained by Jermyn. Fountaine is currently in the process of being trained. Once he starts, Fountaine will work for 15 hours per week.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

TEN REASONS WHY YOUR CHILD NEEDS A SUMMER CAMP EXPERIENCE

Part 2 By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

This article is continued from last week. There's no doubt that summer camp is fun. Kids get to sing silly songs, play funny games, swim in lakes, and tell spooky stories around a campfire; this is the image of camp that has been captured and memorialized in films, books, and television programs. But there's much more to camp than just a good time. For the last century and a half, experiential education in summer camp settings has played an integral role in children's overall development – cognitive, physical, and social-emotional. Here are the next five of ten reasons why your child shouldn't miss out on the unique growth experience that awaits this summer at camp:

6. Greater self-reliance, self-sufficiency, and self-confidence – in addition to learning how to take responsibility for themselves, their space, and their belongings, campers often discover strengths that they never knew existed through various activities and experiences. Being at camp is independence boosting.

7. Reduced summer learning loss – studies have shown that during summer vacation, students can lose the equivalent of up to three months of what they've learned during the school year. Camp programming keeps a child's brain active, alert, and acquiring knowledge and skills.

8. Positive risk-taking – camp provides a safe, wholesome, judgment-free environment for your child to step out of their own comfort zone to take physical and emotional risks that they never would have under other circumstances.

9. A strong sense of community – group living and team experiences teach children how to work together for a common goal and to find their place and voice within a group.

10. Memories that will last a lifetime – when the summer ends, camp memories live on in children's hearts and minds.

Into the heart of the season

Skippers ready to face South Shore League foes

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset baseball team has struggled a bit this season, but in the big picture, things have been going well and look to get even better.

As they near the midway point of the season, the Skippers are at .500, but are also right in the middle of the battle for the South Shore League title with a 4-1 mark in the league.

"So far we are off to a good start," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "We are 4-4 overall, 4-1 in the South Shore League. We have had many bright spots so far, but inconsistency as a team has kept us from putting up more wins."

One big problem, a problem that has hampered many teams, is the weather.

"The boys continue to work hard, and I feel very confident once the weather warms up the team will too," Afanasiw said. "The mistakes we are making seem to be from rust/lack of playing which are quite fixable. The chemistry on the team is great, and everyone helps each other out and supports one another."

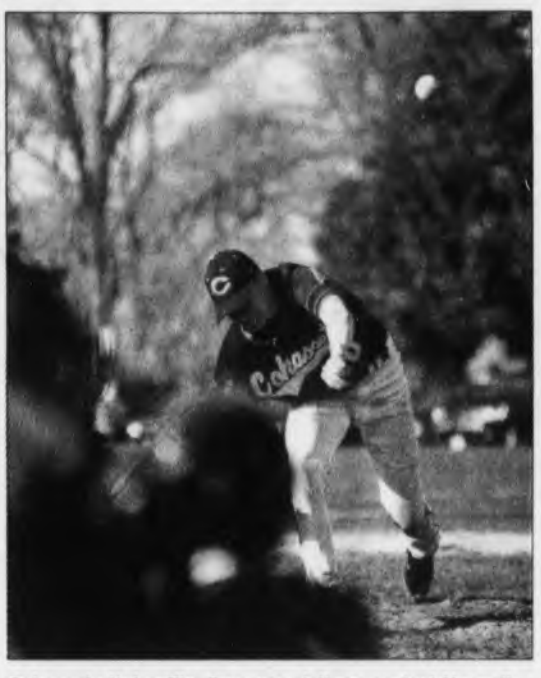
A few highlights include a team batting average of .318 with 38 runs scored in 8 games.

Senior, Connor Goetz leads the way with a .438 average, with 3 doubles and a team-leading 7 RBI.

Junior Colin Gideon-Murphy is right behind with a .400 average and a team-leading 8 hits.

Junior Mickey Barry has been outstanding with a .316 avaerage with 4 doubles and 6 RBI.

Shane Haggerty checks in with a .318 average, 2 homeruns and 4 RBI. He has also been excellent on the mound, working a 2.15 ERA and a 1-1 record in two starts.



Cohasset Skipper Pete Afanasiw keeps an eye on the action during a recent game.

On the mound, Terence Doonan has been the go-to guy.

Doonan has a 2-0 record and 1.62 ERA. He's started two games and gone 13 innings.

The Skippers will be back in action April 25 as they travel to Harwich to face Monomoy. To start a run of South Shore League contests through the rest of the season.

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset High School girl's lacrosse team traveled to Hingham to play the rival Harborwomen last Thursday, in their final game before April vacation, and found themselves in a fierce battle that ended in a 9-9 tie.

The Skippers got off to a quick start with Kathryn Dunn winning the opening draw and passing to Hope Kissick who set up behind the cage and fed a cutting Corey Golden for a beautiful first goal of the game.

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team finished up last week's Chowda Cup with a big 14-3 win over neighbor and rival, Scituate.

The Skippers had a huge game from goalie Jack Conte, who had 17 saves.

Colin Whelan scored 4 goals and added 2 assists, while John Mills chipped in 3 goals and an assist.

Cole Kissick scored 2 goals and added 2 assists and Nick Tangherlini notched a goal with 4 helpers.

The win improved the Skippers to 3-2, while Scituate dropped to 3-2.

In the Chowda Cup opener, Cohasset lost a tough 11-6 game to tournament champion, Marshfield.

Marshfield beat Catholic Memorial 11-10 in overtime to take the title.

For Cohasset, Mills had a pair of goals, while Tommy Ryan and Cole Kissick each picked up 5 ground balls.

Marshfield controlled the pace from the beginning, jumping to a 5-1 start.

Cohasset cut the lead to 9-5 in the second half, but that was as close as they'd get.

The Skippers beat Norwood 14-4 yesterday on the road, and continue to battle tough competition when they host Hamilton-Wenham on Saturday.

After that Cohasset will have a league game with Mashpee, Wednesday at home and then travel to face unbeaten Archbishop-Williams (5-0) April 26.

There are also games with Norwell, Hingham, Hull, Westborough, Scituate and BC High on the ledger.

ROAD WARRIORS

Cohasset's Will Butenschoen played doubles in a recent match against Norwell. The boys have a a lot of traveling in the next few weeks. They will be in action at Randolph on Tuesday, at Monomoy on Thursday, at Bridgewater-Raynham Friday. They return home April 29 to host Mashpee. PHOTO/WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Dunn would then score her first goal of the game on a nice crease roll and a perfectly placed shot to the bottom left corner of the cage for a quick 2-0 lead.

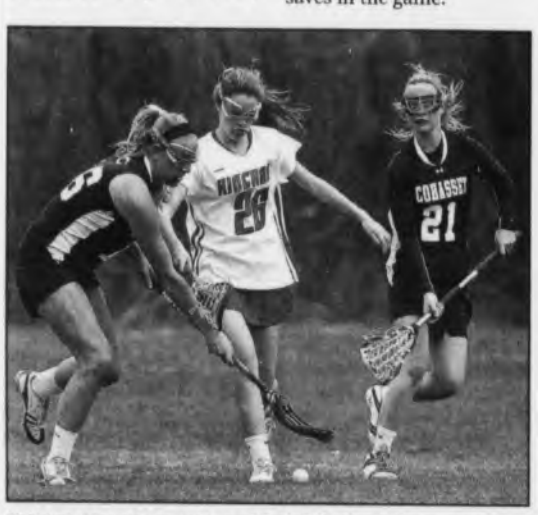
Hingham fought back and took a 4-2 lead before Dunn scored again on a free position shot, and Kissick scored twice before the half to knot the game at 5-5 going into halftime.

Cohasset started the second half playing lockdown defense in front of goalie Taylor Frederick who made her first ever Varsity start and was outstanding with 9 saves on the day.

Defender Molly Fitzgerald was a one woman wrecking crew, causing 5 turnovers, scooping 5 ground balls and forcing 2 charges on the Hingham attackers.

Kristin Alexander scored twice off of great feeds from Dunn and Kissick and finished her hat trick to keep the Skippers on pace with Hingham.

Dunn gave Cohasset a 9-8 lead on another free position shot with under five minutes to go but the Harborwomen would not give up and managed to tie the game with only seconds remaining.



Mackenzie Axelson made a furious rush up field to try and win the game but the final Cohasset shot was denied by Hingham keeper Alison Argiro with only 6 seconds left. Argiro made 17 saves in the game.

Lawn clean up fundraiser a success

The Cohasset High School Boy's Lacrosse Team and Boosters want to thank those families who donated to the 2013 Lawn Clean Up Fundraiser.

Forty-five players, coaches, and parents banded together on a beautiful Saturday to clean up 23 yards of branches, sticks, stones and debris left behind by this winter's battering of New England. Success of the program was made possible by the support and generosity of Atlantic Bagel, Cohasset Pizza House, and Graham Waste Services.

The Lacrosse Boosters extend an open invitation to the Cohasset Community to come out to Alumni Field to cheer on the High School Lacrosse Teams. The next home game for the boys is Saturday, April 20 at 11 a.m., and for the girl's it is Monday, April 22, at 6 p.m. Join in the fun and pick up a Player Program Book to learn the names and faces of the students who are representing your Town of Cohasset.

Celebrate the return to spring as the animals in the barnyard regain their sprightly step, shed their winter coats and enjoy new company. HAPPENING SUNDAY

Music from Vienna and London

Sylvia Berry is a well-known specialist in historical keyboard instruments, as well as being the organist at First Parish Cohasset. For this performance, she will be bringing two fortepianos with her to Cohasset to perform works by Mozart, Haydn, and Clementi in a program titled "Music from Vienna and London."

As well as being a professional recitalist, Sylvia Berry also serves as the organist at First Parish Cohasset.

The performance featuring these two unique instruments will be on Sunday, April 21 in the Parish House of First Parish Cohasset at 23 North Main St. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

This concert will feature two historical pianos, one an actual antique from London built by John Broadwood and Son 1806, and the other a replica of a piano built in Vienna in 1795. Music of Mozart, Haydn, and Clementi will be played by Sylvia Berry, a noted specialist in historical keyboard instruments and performance practice. Hailed "gutsy and poetic" in Early Music America, she will be joined by her husband Dale Munschy for the Clementi duet. Munschy is a well known instrument restorer based in Somerville, MA who brought the Broadwood back to life in 2011.

As well as being a professional recitalist, Berry also serves as the organist at First Parish Cohasset.

Berry studied at the New England Conservatory, the Oberlin Conservatory (where she received a Masters in historical keyboard instruments), and the Royal Conservatory in The Hague, The Netherlands. OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Mary L. Norton

COHASSET – Mary Louise (Niederberger) Norton, a beloved mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, peacefully passed from this world April 8, at her home in Cohasset.

Mary L. Norton

Mary was born in Dorchester, Nov. 10, 1920, to the late Louis and Annie (Sullivan) Niederberger. With her keen intellect, she was the first of her family to attend college, graduating from Emmanuel College and then attending St. Louis University for a master's in Social Work.

With boldness even for that time Mary then headed to Denver, Colo., where she worked for the Red Cross as a medical social worker assisting the returning veterans at Fitzsimmons Hospital.

In 1944 she married her neighborhood sweetheart and love of her life, John Norton, with whom she created an adoring, devoted and loving partnership that endured for 66 years until John's death in December 2010.

Mary and John began their married life in Denver but during the course of their long life together they moved to seven different states as John advanced in his career. These cross country moves included their family which grew to eight children and were successful because of Mary's exceptional organizational skills, eternal optimism, good humor and unlimited affection that made any challenge into an adventure to be savored.

Mary was a good, kind, loving, exceptional woman who lived life with compassion, great integrity, unmatched wit, old-fashioned values and strong faith. She always, always thought of others before herself, welcomed all into her home, and took seriously the mandate of her Catholic faith to make the world a better place.

She loved birdwatching, good books, fast bridge games, pretty shoes, gardenias, interesting food, baseball, tending to her plants and trees and most of all her husband, children, grandchildren and friends all of whom adored her.

She leaves behind her eight children, John Jr., Ann and husband Jonathan Storer, Robert and wife Ginger, Margaret and husband Tom Nixon, Frederick and wife Marena, James and wife Sue, Catherine Nichols and husband Rob and Thomas and wife Dana; along with 19 grandchildren; and her granddaughter, the late Elizabeth; and two great-grandchildren, all of whom are heartbroken and consumed with unbearable sadness at her passing.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday, April 13, 2013, at 11 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours immediately prior to the funeral Mass Saturday from 9-11 a.m. in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (directly across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset. Interment is private.

The family requests that donations to honor Mary be sent to the National Down Syndrome Society, www.ndss.org.

Norma I. Kravette

COHASSET – Norma Irene (Thrasher) Kravette, of Cohasset passed away peacefully April 4, 2013 after a long battle with Alzheimer's disease.

Daughter of Evelyn and Chester Thrasher, Norma was born Aug. 5, 1931 in Keene, N.H. As a child she and her sisters beautiful voices were heard by many people when they sang church hymns regularly for Sunday morning services on the radio.

Her dad was a Merchant Marine. His stories about being on the ocean sparked a love for the beauty and power of the sea, and led her eventually to Cohasset, where she lived for over fifty years.

She dedicated herself while her children were young, to making sure they understood the value of kindness to others, never being afraid of hard work to achieve goals, and never giving up on dreams.

In Cohasset she will no doubt be remembered for her genuine interest in listening to people, and then talking their ears off!

Norma's passion for a bargain as well as seeing true value in an item led her to open the Carousel Antique Shop with her daughter Amanda. They worked thirty two years side by side on a never ending adventurous hunt for treasures on behalf of loyal customers who became great friends and extended family.

Predeceased by her brother Harold Thrasher, Norma leaves her two dear sisters, Shirley and brother-in-law Roy Paine of N.Y, and Doris Mullett of N.H. Loving children, Amanda Burgoon of Cohasset, Randolph and Jessie Kravette of Sharon, Sanford and Christie Kravette of Pa. She was the very proud grandmother of John Burgoon, Samantha Burgoon, Leah Kravette, Eva Kravette, Anna Lawlor, Sarah Kravette, Joshua Kravette, Aaron Kravette, and Great-grandmother of Tristan and Madelyn. She will be missed by many nieces and nephews as well.

Friends and family are invited to celebrate Norma's life at the Paragon Carousel in Nantasket, MA, May 19, 5 p.m. - 7 p.m.

Donations to the Alzheimer's foundation in lieu of flowers.

Pleasant, S.C., Doug Tolman and wife Susan of Scituate, Celia "Cici" B. Franklin of Eagle, Colo., and Stuart Tolman and wife Aileen of Moscow, Idaho. She was the daughter of the late Cleveland Bigelow and Frances Constance (Folsom) Bigelow of Cohasset. Connie attended Cohasset Country Day School, then Derby Academy until 1940, and graduated from Beaver Country Day School in 1942.

She was an avid gardener and birder, a lover of nature's beauty. She enjoyed reading and always had a book near. She enjoyed traveling with her husband, visiting museums, attending musical performances of the Boston Symphony, the Pops, musical theater and jazz.

Connie attended a jazz performance weekly over 30 years at PJs in Scituate. She sang in the Hingham Civic Chorus and participated in the Cohasset Dramatic Club for years along with her husband Peter.

Connie was a longtime member of the First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate, and also attended the First Parish Church in Cohasset for a period of time. She and her husband sang in the choirs for many years. She was an active member and officer of the Women's Alliance of the Scituate church. She also volunteered for the Cohasset Senior Center as a driver of the senior shuttle.

A memorial service will be held in the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church, Scituate, when family can be present, and burial will be at a later date at the Cohasset Central Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the MSPCA, 350 S. Huntington Ave., Jamaica Plain, MA 02130, or the Massachusetts Audubon Society at www.massaudubon.org.

Matthew MacCormack wins writing contest

Cohasset resident, Matthew MacCormack from Cohasset High School was chosen as the winner of the grade 11 division of The 2013 Will McDonough Writing Contest. The contest, presented by The Sports Museum and sponsored by Bank of America and the Boston Globe, is open annually to students in grades four to 12. The Sports Museum received approximately 2,000 entries for this year's contest and judges were asked to pick one winner from each grade.

MacCormack's essay, "The Steal," will be displayed in Will McDonough exhibit located within The Sports Museum until April 2014. Thanks to the continued support from the Boston Celtics, Russo and the other contest winners attended the Boston Celtics vs. Brooklyn Nets game on Wednesday, April 10, immediately following the awards ceremony held at the TD Garden. The winners watched the game from the press level at the TD Garden and experienced what it's like for writers to cover a professional sporting event. Each winner was also awarded an e-reader.

Matthew MacCormack's essay, "The Steal," will be displayed in Will McDonough exhibit located within The Sports Museum until April 2014.

The Will McDonough Writing Contest is designed to encourage the development of language and writing skills while incorporating the topic of sports and concepts such as teamwork, respect, and perseverance. Judges from the Boston Globe hold the entries to the highest of standards, and all entries are judged on organization, expression and how well the topic was addressed.

Will McDonough, a Boston Globe columnist of 44 years, was the Globe's only sports-writer to be nominated for the Pulitzer Prize. McDonough passed away in January 2003. Sports editor for the Boston Globe and one of the judges for the contest, Joseph Sullivan, sites McDonough, as "a legend, one of the greatest sports journalists in history". McDonough was a mentor to young writers and for this reason, The Sports Museum and his colleagues from the Globe dedicated this contest in his memory.

Erin McDonough, daughter of Will McDonough, left, congratulates Matthew MacCormack of Cohasset for being chosen as the 11th Grade winner for the 9th Annual WillMcDonough Writing Contest. COURTESY PHOTO

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

After a crash that involves utility poles or electrical wires, the safest place is to remain inside your vehicle. Although our instinct is to get out as soon as possible after a crash, that can lead to electrocution. This is also a danger to well meaning bystanders who rush to help at a crash scene and risk being electrocuted. The only time you should step out before an emergency responder tells you it's safe to do so is in case of a fire. This serious crash involving electrical wires occurred on Kilby Street in Hingham. BUSINESS NOTE

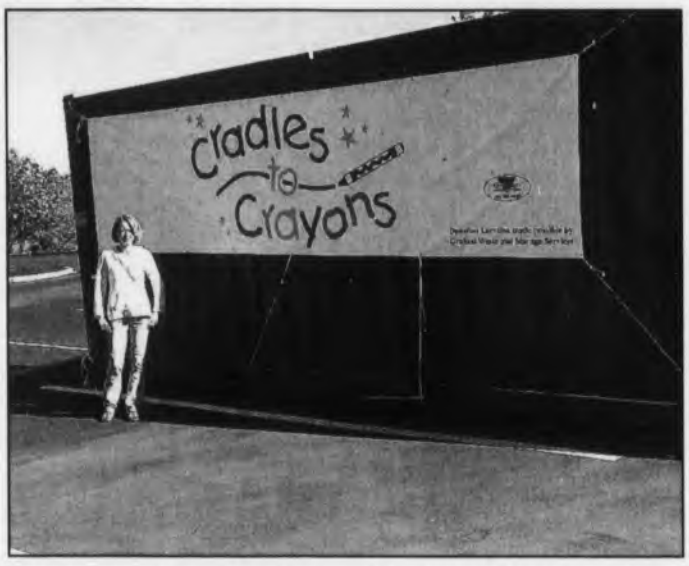
Schwandt named Cradles to Crayons Rookie of Year



In a ceremony celebrating volunteer contributions, Cradles to Crayons, the children's charity, named Lynne Schwandt, owner of Graham Waste Services of Cohasset, Rookie of the Year. The award presentation took place at Cradles to Crayons' Volunteer Appreciation Celebration on Sunday, April 7, in Brighton.

The volunteer appreciation event recognizes individuals who have exceeded expectations in support of the Cradles to Crayons mission to provide children with necessities.

Cradles to Crayons' Rookie of the Year Award is given to individuals, who, during their first year of regular service, have surpassed what was expected of them and increased Cradles to Crayons' capacity to serve more children.

"This is a wonderful and unexpected honor," said Schwandt. "The best part of this is that we were able to help continue Cradle to Crayons presence on the South Shore and help more children in the Commonwealth to thrive."

In October 2012 Graham Waste Services established a permanent collection site at the Cohasset Family Health Center, a medical building in Cohasset. Graham Waste also transported all donated items to Cradles to Crayons' Giving Factory in Brighton. Through the donations from schools, Girl Scout troops, corporations, families and individuals on the South Shore, Graham was able to deliver 212 bags of coats, clothing, shoes, toys, books, and baby items, as well as 11 baby equipment items. This enabled Cradles to Crayons to help 153 children.

Lynne Schwandt, owner of Graham Waste Services

"The impact of the Graham Services drop box campaign has been amazing. We are so happy to have Graham as a champion for our kids," said Julie Lima, director of Individual and Family Philanthropy, Cradles to Crayons.

Founded in 2002, Cradles to Crayons provides low-income and homeless children from birth to 12 years old with new or like new clothing, school supplies, toys and other essential tools that help them to learn, achieve and thrive.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 29, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't waste your time and energy fretting over remarks you consider unnecessary or unkind. Best advice: Ignore them, and just keep doing your usual good job.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Getting that new perspective on a workplace situation could lead to a solution everyone will accept. Meanwhile, make time to keep up with your creative pursuits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Those changes you planned to implement in early summer might need to be reassessed. But don't make any moves until you've discussed this with someone you trust.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspects favor harmony, making this a good time to work out problems in relationships — whether personal or professional, big or small. An old friend comes back.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While you're still riding that high-powered beam, you might begin to lose focus by week's end. Could be you'll need to do a little cat-napping to restore your spent energies.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An unexpected development creates a lot of excitement. Where it takes you is your decision. Check out the possibilities, then decide if you want to go with it or not.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although your supporters help you squash an unfair claim against you, don't let this go unchallenged. You need to learn more about the motives of those behind it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) There are still some tasks to clear up by midweek. Then you can welcome the new month on a high note. A friend brings surprising but very welcome news.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might want to change your plans before they're set in cement. Consider advice from colleagues. But remember that, ultimately, it's your choice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A difficult situation is working itself out. Lingering problems should be resolved by week's end, allowing the Goat to enjoy a calmer, less stressful period.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Be careful not to move so quickly that you miss possible warning signs that could upset your plans. Slow down. Your supporters will continue to stand by you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your generosity in sharing your time and wisdom with others leads to an intriguing development that could have you considering some interesting choices.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of influencing people to be and do their best. You would make an excellent teacher.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Wadsworth steps down after 34 years

David Wadsworth. COURTESY PHOTO

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

David Wadsworth is a townie is the truest sense of the word. Born in Cohasset in 1931, back when the town still had its own hospital, Wadsworth grew up on Ripley Road, graduated from Cohasset High, and eventually went on to become the town historian and archivist, penning the Images of America book on Cohasset along with fellow Cohasset Historical Society members Paula Morse and Lynne DeGiacomo; he also contributed a townwide survey of over 2,000 historical items, many of which are town buildings on the National Register of Historic Places.

"He's a treasure. He's invaluable to the historical society and the town. We've all learned from him and continue to do so."
Kathy O'Malley, historical society

It's clear from talking to Wadsworth and those who work alongside him that he has made quite the mark on this town.

"He's a treasure," said Cohasset Historical Society president Kathy O'Malley. "He's invaluable to the historical society and the town. We've all learned from him and continue to do so."

Judy Dickstein of the Historical Society agreed that Wadsworth "has an incredible mind for the history of this town."

O'Malley said that Wadsworth has written over 30 brochures on various town history topics available at the Historical Society. Wadsworth is like an encyclopedia of Cohasset knowledge — and

TOWN MEETING

Speedy Town Meeting

Voters tackle 19 articles in one night

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski gives a detailed overview of the town-operating budget for fiscal year 2014. PHOTO/ALYSSA STONE

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In what had to be one of the speediest Town Meetings ever, Cohasset voters got through 19 warrant articles in just over three hours, despite the fact that one of the articles required a secret ballot vote.

The meeting began around 6:50 p.m. when a quorum was reached; a quorum of 100 voters is needed to start the meeting. There were 386 registered voters in attendance, according to Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre. The meeting wrapped around 10:15 p.m. with all 19 articles voted. Of the 19 articles, only one did not pass muster: Article 11 for the local option meals/hotel tax.

Voters approved an amendment to the Town Manager Act, which clarifies the roles of the Town Manager and Board of Selectmen and changes who is eligible to be a town manager. This was voted for by secret ballot, and it won with 223 votes out of 364.

Town Meeting also approved a zoning bylaw that differentiates between veterinarian practices and vet hospitals; the fiscal year 2014 town budget; placing a year-long moratorium on marijuana dispensary clinics; and Community Preservation funds for several projects, including a new playground for the Deer Hill School.

The only article that was soundly defeated was the adoption of a local-option meal and hotel tax, which was broken up into two votes for each tax. This was the third time the tax had been brought to – and quashed by – Town Meeting.

Budget talk

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski gave a detailed overview of the town operating budget for Fiscal Year 2014 prior to Town Meeting voting on the budget. Milanoski explained how the town underwent an audit and financial management review from the state Department of Revenue in the past year and is implementing suggestions from those reviews. The town also has an optimistic five-year forecast. These things, in addition to new staffing, training, financial management policies and technological improvements, has helped Cohasset get on track, he said.

"We have regained financial stability," said Milanoski.

One of the goals in the town's financial management policies, adopted by the Board of Selectmen and

After an hour-long debate, an amendment to the Town Manager Act was approved by the April 22 Town Meeting. The article passed 223 to 141 with a total of 364 votes.

Voters approved a Home Rule Petition to amend the Town Manager Act, which was enacted in 1997. The changes will go to the state legislature and eventually become state law.

The amendment repeals a prohibition against town employees or volunteer officials from becoming a town manager. It also imposes a 15-month moratorium on selectmen being eligible for the job. The changes to the Act sought to clarify the roles of the selectmen and town manager.

The newly revised Act reaffirms the Board of Selectmen as the town's goal-setting, policy-directing board, providing directives to the town manager.

The town's Governance Committee was charged with revising the 16-year-old document last year, and spent several months and lengthy meetings picking it apart. The committee met at 7:30 a.m. on Thursdays in Town Hall and also held a few evening public hearings. All meetings were considered open to the public. Committee members said that they listened closely to public input as the document was being revised.

The newly revised Act reaffirms the Board of Selectmen as the town's goal-setting, policy-directing board, providing directives to the town manager. The selectmen will be required to approve all warrants and are also required to create a search committee prior to hiring a new town manager.

The changes to the town manager's qualifications

BMW fished out of Cohasset Harbor

Driver, passenger sustain minor injuries

On Thursday, April 25th, at about 1:10 a.m., Cohasset police were dispatched to Government Island off of Border Street for a report of a car in the water. Arriving officers were met by a man and woman, who were both soaking wet. The 24-year-old Quincy man reported that he and his female passenger were driving on Government Island and inadvertently drove off the landing into approximately 15 feet of water. Both escaped from the car before it sunk and swam to a nearby dock.

The driver and his passenger, who sustained minor injuries, were transported to South Shore Hospital by the Cohasset Fire Department. The vehicle, a 1996 BMW Sport Coupe, was totaled in the mishap. A heavy-duty, towing wrecker was called to the scene to fish the BMW out of Cohasset Harbor. Police officials waited until approximately 5 a.m. to begin the recovery operation, to use the outgoing tide to their advantage. Cohasset Acting Chief of Police William Quigley stated, "those folks are lucky they were able to get out of that car before it submerged. We are happy they are ok." No charges are expected.

SGT. Garrett Hunt (L) and Police Officer Chris Dias check the interior of a 1996 BMW.

Workers from Express Towing use a heavy-duty wrecker to left the 1996 BMW out of the water. The crews waited until low tide to recover the vehicle, which had originally been submerged in 15 feet of water.

POLICE BEAT

Drug take-back day is Saturday

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Police Department has joined with the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) in urging residents to take part in the National Prescription Drug Take-Back Day on Saturday, April 27 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at police headquarters. Drop-off is in the drug kiosk in the police station lobby. The D.E.A. will be facilitating the removal and destruction of these drugs.

This is a great opportunity for those have accumulated unwanted, unused prescription drugs, to safely dispose of those medications.

Loading zone

Police are continuing to monitor the two loading zones on Depot Court and ticketing violators. Another motorist was ticketed last Monday (April 15) around 1:40 p.m. The two loading zones are clearly marked with stripes on the pavement and there is also signage explaining the restrictions.

Police said if commercial vehicles are forced to park in the travel way on Depot Court, it creates a safety hazard for emergency vehicles trying to get through. The loading zones were created to give commercial vehicles a place to unload without blocking the street.

No-trespass

Police assisted a local business owner with a no-trespass order against an employee's former boyfriend last week. A friend of the boyfriend allegedly vandalized the girlfriend's car while the former boyfriend did nothing to stop it, police said. The alleged victim works in Cohasset.

No crime

Last week police talked to a neighbor after receiving a report from the mother of two girls who felt uncomfortable that the neighbor would talk to her two young daughters. The girls went over to his patio to see his dog. Police said the neighbor did not want to cause the mother any discomfort and would refrain from talking to the girls. There was no crime involved, police said.

Generators

Construction workers at a site off Beechwood Street turned off the generators after police received a noise complaint around 7:15 p.m. on Monday (April 15), police said.

Bike injury

A 17-year-old girl was transported to the hospital after she fell off her bicycle and hit the window of a business at around 9:18 a.m. on Tuesday (April 16) on Elm Street in the village. The girl has a laceration on her arm, police said.

Lowered flag

The owner of a local establishment off Route 3A lowered the flag to half-staff on Tuesday (April 16) after police received a complaint from a caller that the flag had not been lowered.

Town property

Last Tuesday (April 16) around 5:50 p.m., police followed up on a complaint about a man walking through a backyard on Summer Street who, the caller thought, was trespassing. As it turned out the man was on town property along Jacob's Brook, police said.

Health violation

A former employee of a local establishment reported to police last week that the chef there smokes cigarettes while cooking in the kitchen. Police directed the reporting person to notify the health inspector and the police did so as well.

Domestic

A 55-year-old Cohasset man is facing domestic assault charges following allegations from his girlfriend, police said. The girlfriend, who was issued a temporary emergency restraining order, was provided an alternative place to stay but did not follow-up with the court to obtain a regular restraining order, police said.

Bank closed

Cohasset police received a concerned call last Friday (April 19) from a Bank of America customer who went to the bank at 4:03 p.m. to make a deposit and found it closed. Bank of America closed all of its banks within a 30-mile radius of Boston due to the pursuit of the bombing suspects, police said.

Hit & Run

A 43-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police the following morning (Friday, April 19) after a hit and run accident on North Main Street at Depot Court that she had left the scene after striking a parked Honda Pilot because she was responding to a family emergency. The owner of the car that was hit heard a noise and looked out; there was also another witness. There was damage to a rear light and bumper of the Honda, police said.

NEWS UPDATE

Bloggers still hiding behind screen names

Selectmen ultimatum is ignored

The selectmen have not yet launched their investigation to find the bloggers' identities. Some officials believe that some of these bloggers are lurking in Town Hall.

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Last week, the Board of Selectmen voted to launch a search against online commenters using pseudonyms who have been making derogatory remarks officials and townspeople in online blogs and newspaper articles, after giving these bloggers 72 hours to reveal themselves. No one has yet come forward, according to selectmen chair Paul Carlson.

The selectmen have not yet launched their investigation to find the bloggers' identities. Some officials believe that some of these bloggers are lurking in Town Hall. Selectman Fred Koed wanted to start the investigation with town computers.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski also seems to think some Cohasset employees participate in these online discussions. He said last week that, so far, only non-union employees have signed the town's computer use and civil discourse policies, adding that the unions wanted to negotiate on signing these policies. Milanoski also stated in an April 8 letter to Cohasset citizens, which was included in the Town Meeting warrant mailed to residents on April 12, that some union members "tried to negotiate on the blogs" by posting details of the union negotiations with the town.

Some Cohasset unions were not pleased with the way they were depicted in the town manager's letter. In it, Milanoski wrote of the challenges in this year's union negotiations, during which all five of the town union contracts – fire, police, police lieutenant, library, and clerical – were negotiated at the same time.

The town manager blamed the challenges on union members who allegedly wrote "false and misleading information" in online blogs and newspaper article comments.

Milanoski shared some details of the negotiations, which he said was shared online. "Several unions felt they were entitled to a three-year 30-plus percent salary increases and one group wanted a total of 30 vacation days."

Milanoski said that the good news is that agreements were reached with all five unions, with increases of two percent for fiscal year 2013 and FY14, and 2.5 percent for FY15, as well as "financial incentives for public safety to use fewer sick days." Milanoski wrote that the town also negotiated many "give backs," including reduced employee vacation and sick days and stronger sick leave language. Also, "all contracts will expire in FY15 thereby allowing for a uniformed negotiation strategy."

A few union leaders took issue with the town manager claiming that union members commented on negotiations in online posts. Cohasset fire union president Jack Hernan stated at the April 16 selectmen meeting that Milanoski's statement contains a serious allegation, accusation the unions of "violating the law and releasing information about bargaining proposals after an agreement has been reached." Hernan called the town manager's statement "totally inappropriate and inaccurate."

Furthermore, said Hernan, "The union categorically denies any utilization of any form of online media that may undermine any of the bargaining that we have undertaken in good faith."

Mary Snow, a member of the clerical union, read a statement written by union president Ellen Warner that also took offense to Milanoski's letter.

"We consider his comments false and derogatory," Warner wrote, adding that part of negotiating involves the union setting a "somewhat unrealistic proposal for large salary increases" and for management to propose "unrealistically low" increases, and the two to meet somewhere in the middle. "But that is part of negotiations."

Warren said that her union did not ask for a 30 percent increase, as Milanoski stated: "This type of comment is inflammatory and paints our Union and our hardworking members in a very bad light."

As for union members posting negotiation details in online blogs, Warren said, "I am not aware of any union members blogging about any aspect of our negotiations."

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

U.S. SENATE PRIMARY

Candidates pick up pace in home stretch

By David Riley

Gabriel Gomez

Daniel Winslow

Michael Sullivan

Edward Markey

Stephen Lynch

Five will go in, two will come out.

A primary election on Tuesday, April 30, will whittle the field of candidates in the race to fill John Kerry's former U.S. Senate seat from two Democrats and three Republicans down to one contender from each party.

Democrats will choose between U.S. Reps. Stephen Lynch, D-9th, and Ed Markey, D-7th. The GOP candidates are private equity investor and former Navy SEAL Gabriel Gomez of Cohasset, former U.S. Attorney Michael Sullivan of Abington and State Rep. Dan Winslow, R-Norfolk, a former judge.

The winners in Tuesday's primary will square off in a special election on June 25.

Entering the home stretch, representatives from each campaign said their candidates would crisscross the state trying to connect with undecided voters and get supporters to the polls while volunteers knock on doors and make calls.

While some polls have suggested Markey is leading on the Democratic side, political observers said Republican Scott Brown's upset of state Attorney General Martha Coakley in a 2010 special Senate election showed no race is over until the polls close.

"I think you have to fight to the end," said Maurice "Mo" Cunningham, a political science associate professor at UMass-Boston. "There is still a chance to win it."

Meanwhile, "very unknown conditions" remain in the Republican field, he said.

The Boston Marathon bombings that killed three people and injured at least 260 cast a shadow over the political race. Candidates temporarily suspended campaigning after the attacks.

Efforts to round up votes have resumed, but with a shift in tone. A debate between Markey and Lynch on Monday, April 22, cosponsored by WBZ-TV and the Boston Globe, often focused on national security and terrorism in a race previously dominated more by domestic matters and the candidates' biographies.

Cunningham said the public remains focused on the bombing and subsequent manhunt, which could hurt voter turnout on Tuesday. "It dwarfs everything else," he said.

As he travels the state, Lynch is reaching out to a large number of Democratic voters who remain undecided, said Conor Yunits, a campaign spokesman.

"We feel very confident that a majority of those people are going to come our way," he said.

Lynch, whose campaign began canvassing and making phone calls again on Monday, is talking to voters about jobs, homeland security and other "bread and butter issues the Democratic Party was founded on," Yunits said.

Markey's campaign has recruited more than 5,000 volunteers for his field operation, and the candidate will keep traveling the state to get his message out, said his spokesman, Andrew Zucker. Markey will continue talking about his pro-choice position on abortion and his vote in favor of federal health care reform, Zucker said.

Lynch does not agree with abortion, but has said he would not vote to overturn the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision. He also has defended a vote against the final health care bill, saying it lacked key provisions from an earlier version that he did support.

Meanwhile, Lynch has slammed Markey for votes against bills that dealt with anti-terrorism and homeland security measures. Zucker touted Markey's background in pushing to screen airline cargo for bombs and keep knives off planes, among other things.

In the Republican race, Sullivan planned to take his "Tested and Trusted" campaign tour to the Merrimack Valley on Thursday, to the South Shore and Cape Cod on Friday and to Worcester and the western end of the state on Saturday, said Alicia Preston, a spokeswoman for the candidate.

He planned to talk about national security, "common sense reform" in Washington, D.C., and cutting spending, she said.

"He's going to talk about what his message has been all along," Preston said.

Spokesman Charlie Pearce said Winslow won endorsements from several large newspapers because he is "an ideas candidate." Among other things, he said the lawmaker has proposed cutting the corporate tax rate from 35 percent to 26 percent while eliminating loopholes and creating a national lottery to fund education.

Winslow also planned to roll out a proposal to cut about $100 billion in wasteful federal spending, Pearce said.

"He's a candidate who could win in June," Pearce said, referring to the general election.

Gomez' campaign touted endorsements from 50 "grassroots leaders" – mainly members of Republican town committees, local officials and activists – and said broadcast TV ads would continue up until election day.

The candidate is talking about his credentials, his plans for jobs and proposed reforms to "reboot" Congress, said spokesman Will Ritter.

"We're going to diners, we're going to Republican town committee meetings, because we think that's really where you can talk one-on-one with voters," he said.

Polls will be open statewide from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. on Tuesday.

WADSWORTH

much of it, said O'Malley, is in his head.

"He's a resource, and when people are interested in their houses or families, he knows it," she said.

Spend a little time with Wadsworth, and you'll know what O'Malley is talking about. The historian can rattle off historical facts and stories like they happened yesterday, weaving a picture of what Cohasset once was and how it has changed.

Wadsworth announced last week that he is resigning from his position as town archivist after over 30 years. Since his appointment in 1979, Wadsworth has worked to archive public town records in the Town Hall vault. He is also secretary of the Cohasset Historical Commission.

Wadsworth said in a letter to the Board of Selectmen that he is opting out of reappointment for the upcoming fiscal year, which starts in July, but that he would like to remain a member of the Commission.
Wadsworth works at the Historical Society's Pratt Building once a week.

The selectmen commented on Wadsworth's decision during their Tuesday, April 9 meeting. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that he hopes "somebody will stand up and continue the terrific work he's done."

Living history

Wadsworth is Cohasset born and raised. He graduated from CHS in 1949 and earned a Bachelor's in Liberal Arts from UMass Dartmouth in 1956. He became a supervisor at a mail order business in Boston, where he worked through the '60s and into the '70s.
Wadsworth was appointed town archivist by selectmen chair Arthur Clark in '79. He was appointed to the Historical Commission around the same time.

One could say that Wadsworth was born to be a historian, growing up with family members who were fascinated by the past.

"My mother was very interested" in history, he said. "She was the family historian. I couldn't get a way from it. I got it from osmosis."

It was a close friend who recommended Wadsworth for the town archivist job. Not too long into his new job, Wadsworth found he took a liking to digging through history. He learned that his great-grandfather was a selectman in 1900. He also learned that his family owned a mackerel fishing fleet, the Tower Brothers Company, located along the harbor where the Atlantica restaurant is now.

Wadsworth discovered that Cohasset's last mackerel schooner, The Charlotte (named for his great-aunt, Charlotte Tower, who was head librarian when Wadsworth was a school boy and hired him as a page to put books away), was seized by Canadian customs near the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Wadsworth joked, "I keep saying one of these days, I'm going to go up there and sail it back."

Learning about his family's past in Cohasset made history come alive to the archivist.

"As soon as I saw my own family in there, I became very interested," said Wadsworth. He thought, "I'd better keep the tradition alive."

Historic preservation

As archivist, Wadsworth was charged with organizing the town records in the Town Hall attic and cellar, "find out what we had," and organize the records in the new storage area at the time, which was a vault located at the high school. The vault would eventually move to a new Town Hall wing that was built in the '80s. The archives vault, said Wadsworth, "is where most of the ancient records" are.

Prior to his coming on board, Town Hall did not have a good storage system for public records, he explained. Laws were changing "pertaining to storage, availability and preservation," Wadsworth explained. "Nothing along those lines had been done. That's when we started. I was really the first one who undertook the records."

And what an undertaking it was. Wadsworth primarily tackled the downstairs archives while the Town Clerk handled the upstairs portion, he explained. Wadsworth has worked alongside two town clerks over the years, Marion Douglas and later Carol St. Pierre, Cohasset's current town clerk. There was a wealth of documentation to sift through when Wadsworth got started — "The town didn't have the manpower to do it," he said.

Wadsworth's work had him doing plenty of research over the years. He organized cards with records on every building on the town common from 1746 on, dating back to Cohasset's first Town Meeting in 1770, held in the First Parish Meetinghouse. The town is required to keep paper copies for the past 30 years, according to Wadsworth, and anything older than 1891 is considered historic and cannot be destroyed.

Douglas started the preservation project, said Wadsworth, with St. Pierre carrying it forward. Town Meeting approved Community Preservation funds this week that will pay for the digitization of town records.

"I think it's tremendous," Wadsworth said of the effort. "It puts us in the forefront among towns as to how far we've gone with our preservation."

Changing times

Wadsworth utilized the knowledge he was gaining from archiving the town's history to help with his work as the Historical Society's museum curator— "I had the knowledge and background," he said. The Historical Society hired him in 1982 to curate the town museums; he used to run the maritime museum in the summers.

At the Historical Society, Wadsworth keeps busy, even though now he is only able to work there once a week. "I do a little bit of everything," he said of his office work. "Computer work, looking things up, answering questions, research, writing," adding that he recently wrote an article for the society's next newsletter.

Wadsworth used to write articles for the Cohasset Mariner and, before that, the South Shore Mirror. "The first article I ever wrote was about the Beechwood fire station," he recalled. "The town declared it as surplus and auctioned it off. Us historians didn't like what happened."

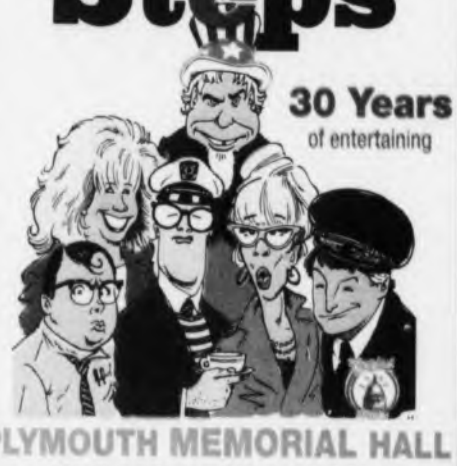
Many of Wadsworth's articles were referenced in Jackie Dormitzer's "Narrative History of Cohasset."

Wadsworth retains a wealth of knowledge on Cohasset, and can tell you how the town has changed over the years, the landscape in particular. "There are a lot of changes with the increase in population." The architecture has changed from "authentic colonial" to "neo-colonial," he noted, "but basically, in most cases, has followed tradition." The biggest change he's seen over the years is the transformation of Route 3A, which Wadsworth called "tremendous" as more and more businesses popped up on the highway.

His favorite part of Cohasset, said Wadsworth, is the shore.

"In particular, Jerusalem Road and the view north toward Boston harbor," he said. "That panorama of ocean and sky."

The historian used to take in that view while sailing along Cohasset's shore. And every day after work, he would take the same drive through town to make sure every history property was properly maintained, in its proper place.



"I got through at four p.m. and I'd always take a spin on Forest Avenue around the shore to see that every early house is right where it should be," Wadsworth said.

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Boston Strong

Hello Cohasset and how are you all this week? I am hoping that everyone has somewhat settled back into a routine after the unsettling events of almost two weeks ago as well as the first week back to school after April vacation for so many. This past week for me was sad in so many ways as we watched, read and for some, took part in the good-byes of those who lost their lives during the bombings and the aftermath and was also, very much a reminder to stop and take the time to enjoy all those "moments" in our days that are gone so fast. I hope and pray that we do not ever need to relive the horror of what happened but I do hope that all of us realize, stop and think of how fast life changes and how important every hug, "I love you," and moment is, even when life is so hectic and fast-paced around us.

I celebrated my daughter Callie's 19th birthday (Happy Birthday Coco) in Boston this past Tuesday as a surprise for her at her dorm and as we walked to dinner, only a few yards away was the actual finish line of the marathon. A range of emotions went through me from overwhelming sadness, to anger and then just pure sadness again, as I thought "Oh my God, they will never have even one more moment with those who love them so..." All over in an instant for the three who were killed that day and for the 200 who were injured, Officer Collier as well, Cohasset's thoughts and prayers are with you all. Boston Strong...143!

Sharing

A quick reminder is being sent out to remind everyone that we love to receive all the event and postings of happenings that are taking place Around the Town, after all, the name of this column is, "Around Town!" One thing that we do not see as much of because of social media, etc., are the wonderful celebratory messages for birthdays, new babies, significant anniversaries and all of those "special and personal" pieces that are so exciting to share with the community as well as to be read and acknowledged by the recipient, whether now or, in the case of our newborns, when they are older and see it in their baby albums! The people who comment the most are children, new moms and our senior citizens of the community who love to read about each week so....make sure to send it all in, even if you share it online too!

LIFE AT CHS

Our Ecology Trip to Costa Rica was inspiring

WHITNEY MALONE

After studying Costa Rica's lush vegetation and biodiversity, we traveled east to Pacuare Nature Reserve on the Caribbean coast, where we learned about endangered sea turtle conservation issues...

Welcome back Cohasset! This first week back after April vacation was long and demanding, as many students prepare for AP exams approaching in just two weeks. With the weather starting to clear up, it's becoming increasingly harder for us seniors to stay on track until May 24th. Following tradition, this week we began the infamous senior countdown hanging in the senior lounge – only 20 school days to go!

The highlight of spring break for a number of students, myself included, was the school ecology trip to Costa Rica. Fifteen of us seniors and juniors, including Mrs. Humphrey and Doc T, flew into San Jose last Thursday night, then drove to La Suerte Rainforest Reserve the next day, where we learned about pineapple and banana plantations and observed amazing creatures on night hikes. After studying Costa Rica's lush vegetation and biodiversity, we traveled east to Pacuare Nature Reserve on the Caribbean coast, where we learned about endangered sea turtle conservation issues, collected data on nesting leatherback sea turtles during nightly patrols, and restored turtle nesting habitats on the beach.

As a student from a small U.S. town in the northeast, it was empowering to work along side experienced scientists and researchers from around the world, who have dedicated their lives to ecology and the environment. We students were able to apply our newly gained knowledge through the development of our own research projects, in which we studied different relationships between sea turtles and their environment. Aside from biology, we were also exposed to Costa Rican culture through our visit to a local high school, where we practiced speaking Spanish and sang and danced to Costa Rican music with students our age.

Staying in a mountain lodge with a volcano view that evening, we spent our last day in Costa Rica white water rafting the Pacuare River, where we floated through vibrant jungle canyons and past waterfalls. I think I can say for all of us on the trip that there is no other way we would have preferred to spend our vacation than experiencing the simple and "pure life" of Costa Rica!

Transitioning back into the reality of CHS, students began their fourth quarter classes Monday and received report cards with their third term grades on Wednesday. As unbelievable as it sounds, seniors are scheduled to receive their final term progress reports next Friday, but they may be postponed as a result of the academic term being pushed back. Underclassmen should not be worried, as they still have plenty of time to get their final grades up!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Art in Bloom begins Saturday, April 27, with drop-in Ikebana floral demonstrations presented and a Museum members-only viewing that evening. On Sunday, April 28, the MFA will celebrate with a Family Day, including family-friendly programming, art-making activities, storytelling, and live entertainment. Additionally, local artist Robert Guillemin (Sidewalk Sam) will be at the MFA, collaborating with visitors to leave their mark on the Museum's steps using sidewalk chalk.

This year's featured speaker will be Shane Connolly, who received worldwide acclaim for the elegant and inspired floral décor he created for the 2011 royal wedding of Prince William and Catherine Middleton. Connolly will conduct two master classes with hands-on floral instruction on Saturday, April 27 and Sunday, April 28. He will also present a lecture and demonstration on Monday, April 29, at 10:30 a.m., followed by a book signing. All presentations by Connolly are ticketed events.

Other highlights include a ticketed Elegant Tea, available Saturday through Monday, in the newly renovated William I. Koch Gallery, one of the Museum's grandest spaces, and the "Give the Arts a Chance" drawing, with prizes ranging from a Bermuda trip to box seats for the Red Sox. Daily events include continuous demonstrations of floral arranging for the home, outdoor walking tours exploring the architecture and neighboring gardens of the MFA, and free gallery tours highlighting the floral arrangements throughout the Museum.

Art in Bloom is free with Museum admission. Advanced ticket purchase is required for the Shane Connolly lecture and master classes and Elegant Tea. Tickets may be purchased at: mfa.org/artinbloom, by calling 1-800-440-6975, or in person at the MFA ticket desks. For the full event schedule, visit: mfa.org.

GOING SOLAR

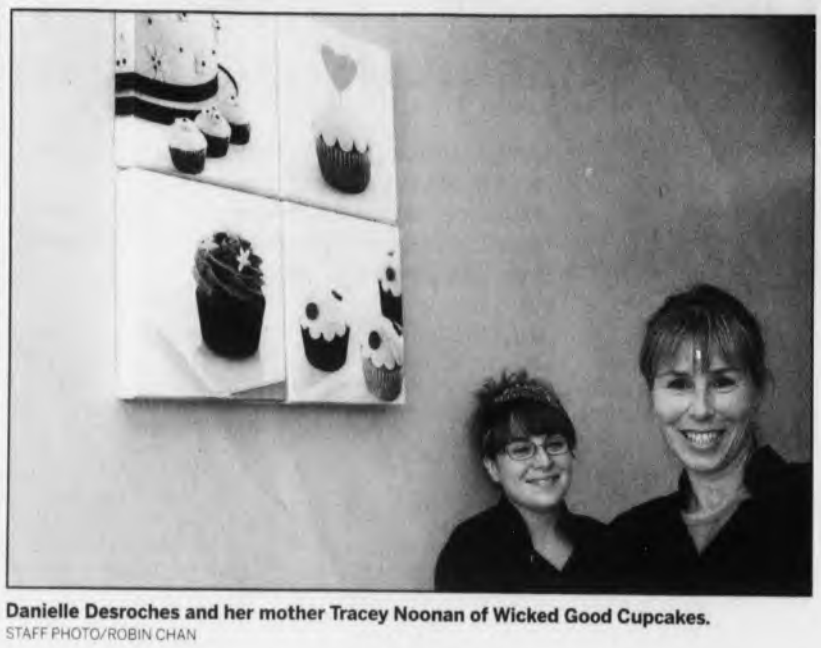
Bidder chosen to install panels

Town Meeting hears report from AEC

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Solar power is well on its way to Cohasset. The Alternative Energy Committee, in conjunction with the School Committee and town, has facilitated a project to bring solar panels to town by going out to bid for a solar power vendor who will install solar arrays on the Cedar Street landfill and Middle-High School roof. A previous Town Meeting approved 20-year leases to a to-be-chosen energy vendor for both of those properties.

AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell announced during Monday night's Town Meeting that three bids were received from three different solar vendors, and an evaluation committee comprised of various board members selected a finalist. A contract is being negotiated with the company, whose name has not yet been announced.



Bodell said that the proposals indicate a large potential energy savings for the town. The solar array on the landfill is expected to save up $45,000 to $60,000 per year over the 20-year life of the project. The school roof array will save between $15,000 and $25,000 per year. The total savings will be in the realm of $600,000 to $1.2 million, said Bodell.

The AEC will bring the final negotiated contract to the Board of Selectmen and School Committee for their approval once negotiations are complete.

Bodell said the solar project is "on a very good track to move forward and realize savings for the benefit of the town."

Good things for Wicked Good Cupcakes

New Boston shop, TV attention

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset bakery Wicked Good Cupcakes will be featured on an episode of ABC's "Shark Tank," airing tonight, Friday, April 26 at 9 p.m. EST.

"Shark Tank" gives budding entrepreneurs the chance to make their dreams come true, and possibly make a business deal that could make them into millionaires. This week, the mother-daughter team behind Wicked Good Cupcakes will try to convince the "Sharks" to invest in their homemade cupcakes-in-a-jar business.

Wicked Good Cupcakes was co-founded by mother-daughter team Tracey Noonan and Danielle Desroches, launching a bakery business out of their South Shore kitchen. They opened up shop in Cohasset in October 2011.

The local brand will soon expand to a new branch in Boston's Faneuil Hall Marketplace. The new shop opens May 1.

Noonan and Desroches will also be featured on an upcoming episode of NECN's "TV Diner" as well as ABC's "20/20" to talk about their "Shark Tank" experience, according to Wicked Good Cupcakes marketing manager Sandy Evansen.

While Wicked Good Cupcakes seems to be the quintessential New England bakery, its appeal is nationwide. The bakery received national notoriety just a few months after its launch when the TSA famously confiscated a Wicked Good to Go cupcake jar from a passenger at the Las Vegas Airport. The incident only increased the demand for Wicked Good Cupcakes and their jars.

Wicked Good Cupcakes offers a wide selection of specialized and seasonal cupcakes baked daily, and has been featured in local, regional and national media. For more information, visit: wickedgoodcupcakes.com or call 781-923-1369.

Visit the Cohasset location at 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). The shop is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Meet the candidates panel discussion

On Monday, May 6, at 9:30 a.m., during Cohasset Café at the Lightkeepers, candidates for Selectman will discuss their views on elder issues, priorities for the Town, and the direction they feel elder affairs should be taking, short and long term.

Questions will be submitted to candidates ahead of time. Each will be given a chance to offer in-depth and thoughtful answers that exemplify their method of leadership.

All are welcome. As always during Cohasset Café, light refreshments will be served.

Cook competes in World Irish Dance Championships

Cohasset Middle High School student Leah M. Cook recently competed in the World Irish Dance Championships that took place in late March at the Hynes Auditorium in Boston. This was only the second time that these championships had taken place outside of Ireland/U.K.

Leah, who is currently in the eighth grade at Cohasset Middle School, qualified for the World Championships for the first time this past November at the New England Regional Oireachtas. She began dancing at the age of 6 for the Nevin Academy of Irish Dance. At the Oireachtas Rince Na Cruinne 2013 (World Championships), she competed with more than 175 dancers from all over the world in the U15 age group. After the initial two rounds of dancing, 50 dancers are recalled and dance an additional set dance to determine placement overall. Leah was one of the 50 dancers who received a recall and was awarded a medal for 44th place at the awards ceremony later in the evening.

A few days later, on March 29, Leah competed with her eight-hand Girls Ceili Team, which is comprised of dancers between the ages of 14 to 19 years old. Local dancers on this team include Kathlyn Conden and Kate Spitler from Marshfield, Mariah Ward from Hingham and Rhode Island dancers Kerry and Mary Lehane, Bailey Driscoll and Natasha Meehan. The eight-hand team competed with 70 teams from all over the world and after two rounds of dancing were awarded 11th place overall and earned a World Medal.

The Nevin Academy trains dancers of all ages and levels, from 4 years to adult, beginner through champion. Dancers compete locally, nationally and in the World Championships, and carry on the Irish culture and tradition through performances at special events and shows throughout the year. Maura Clifford Nevin is the director of Nevin Academy and began teaching Irish dance more than 35 years ago. The Nevin Academy is proud to have Tara Nevin Olivier, Caitlin Vitale and Erin McLoughlin as teachers on staff. They are all former Nevin Academy students and champion dancers.

Leah and several other champion dancers from Nevin Academy are looking forward to competing at the upcoming North American Irish Dance Championships this July in Anaheim, Calif.

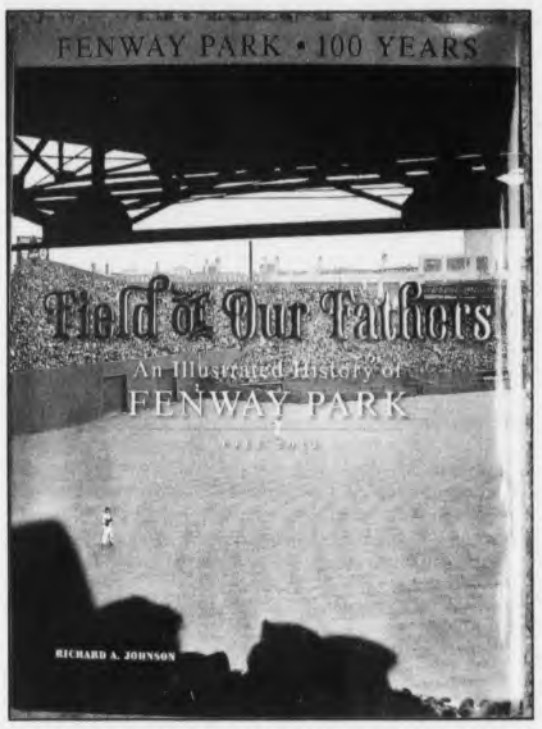
COHASSET READS TOGETHER

In the shadow of the Green Monster

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner



Boston's beloved Fenway Park has been the site of many historic moments since its opening in 1912, so it comes as no surprise to find Babe Ruth in the opening pages and throughout Dennis Lehane's historical novel, The Given Day.

As part of the programming for Paul Pratt Memorial Library's Cohasset Reads Together, sports historian Richard Johnson will speak about the history of Fenway Park at the Cohasset Historical Society on Sunday, April 28, at 4 p.m.

Johnson's most recent book, Field of Our Fathers: An Illustrated History of Fenway Park, was published in 2012 to commemorate Fenway Park's centennial. The book celebrates the teams, the fans, and the quirks of Boston's venerable ball park, and provides first hand accounts of the many events that have characterized Fenway Park since the days of Babe Ruth and Tris Speaker. In addition to essays, anecdotes, newspaper clippings, and programs, Johnson has included a unique collection of photos, posters, ticket stubs, and fan memorabilia.

A prolific writer, Richard Johnson has written or co-written more than 20 books about sports history, most of them about Boston teams. His list of works includes historical accounts of the Patriots, Boston Marathon, Celtics, Bruins, and his favorite subject — the Boston Red Sox. Even the Yankees and Cubs, among a few other outsiders, enjoy a place in his repertoire.

Johnson has been curator of the New England Sports Museum at Boston's TD Garden since 1982. He is also editor of Sportstown Series, which is comprised of original and reprinted titles related to Boston and New England Sports.

A wine and cheese reception will follow Mr. Johnson's talk where his book will be available for purchase and signing. Tickets are not required for this event.

In the spirit of this week's baseball theme, the film, Moneyball, will be shown at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Friday, May 3, at 11 a.m.

Tickets are required for admission to the Dennis Lehane talk on May 5. They are available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Cohasset Reads Together is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and the Cook Estate. Bruce Sinclaire, owner of A Taste for Wine and Spirits, donates wines for the post-talk receptions.

No act of violence
Can break the spirit of Boston.

We honor those who lost their lives,
Those who lost their loved ones,
And all those affected, physically and emotionally,
In the wake of last week's events.

We will never lose our sense of community.

OUR VIEW

Vote Tuesday

Cohasset is not joining with many other towns in breaking with tradition by holding their town elections Tuesday rather than Saturday in order to coincide with the state primary for the US Senate.

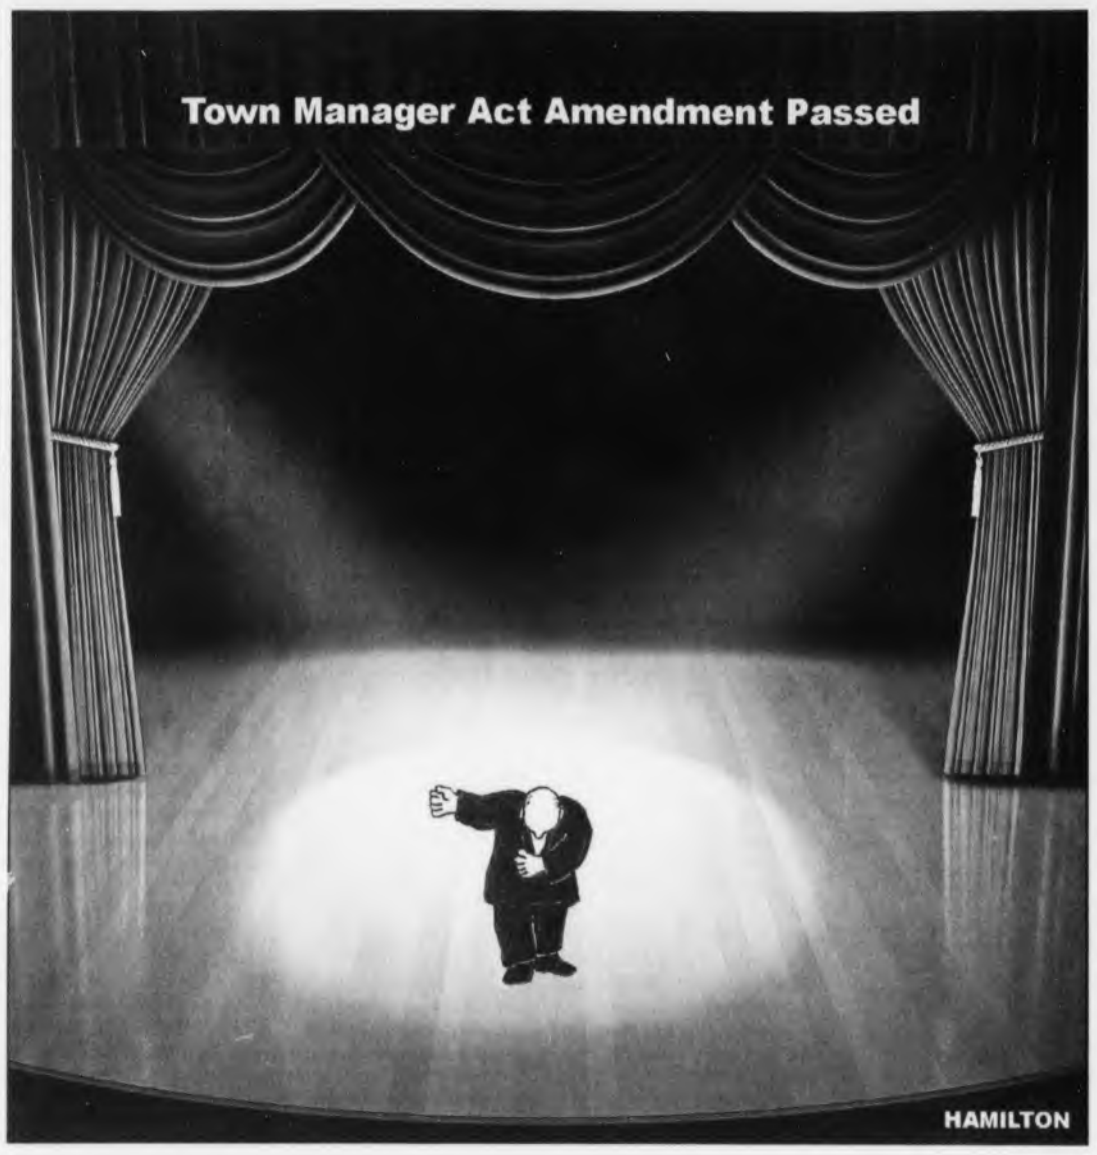
What this means is that Cohasset's registered voters will make a trip to the polls on Tuesday (April 30) for the state Primary only. Those who work during the day can vote before heading to work at 7 a.m. or after they get home. The polls will be open until 8 p.m. (The annual Cohasset Town Election is Saturday, May 11).

The primary is very interesting as it will set the stage for the general election on June 25 to determine who will occupy the "people's seat" that had been filled by former US Senator John Kerry for many years.

There are three Republicans (including Gabriel Gomez of Highland Avenue) seeking the rights to run against one of two Democrats. Primary voters will receive either a Republican or Democrat primary ballot. Unenrolled voters can choose which ballot at the polls.

Congratulations in advance to those who take the time to exercise their right to vote!

Hats off to all who attended the annual Town Meeting and took park in Cohasset's venerable form of self-government on Monday.



Local voters in Cohasset once again proved they are independent in their thinking by voting "no" on the local option meals and hotel tax. This was the third time the tax has come before Town Meeting. It is time to put that issue to rest and move on.

Town Meeting is usually held on a Saturday but Monday's session, which accomplished all the business in one night, may prove that a Town Meeting on Monday night can draw enough voters and not drag on several nights.

Thanks, David

Although David Wadsworth is still going to be a familiar figure at the historical society – he has stepped down as town archivist after serving in that post for more than 30 years. Those who know David describe him as a "treasure." He certainly is! There is no one else in town with as much accumulated knowledge of the history of our town. David was one of the first people we met when we started covering Cohasset and he has been an invaluable resource over the years by providing historical perspective for our stories.

We are so grateful that Cohasset has a historian like David to help chronicle the town's rich history and keep it relevant for future generations.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Appreciates work done on Town Manager Act

I would like to express my deep appreciation to the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Board, Governance Committee and the Acting Town Manager for their extraordinary work, culminating in the Cohasset Town Manager Act passed at Town Meeting on Monday. Democracy is rarely an easy process, often fraught with clashes of philosophy and personality.

However, our dedicated elected and appointed officials have persevered and given us a solid foundation from which to build a well functioning town. For those who believe it is not yet a perfect document, we should keep in mind that one of the world's greatest documents of governance, the United States Constitution, has been amended 27 times, including the 10 in the Bill of Rights.

Thanks to all who contributed to this effort.

Timothy C. Davis, 257 Atlantic Ave.

Bradley bill aims to stop driving while huffing

The current law only makes reference to the "vapors of glue" in addition to the existing prohibition against driving under the influence of alcohol...

ng driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of toxic inhalants, often referred to as "huffing."

Bradley said, "By strengthening the OUI law to include other types of toxic inhalants, we may be able to reduce or prevent situations where drivers, whether young or old, operate a motor vehicle while under the influence, and thus improve public safety on the roads of the Commonwealth."

Under the bill's provisions, state law would be amended to prohibit driving after having "intentionally smelling or inhaling the fumes of any substance having the property of releasing toxic vapors," which are defined in a separate law. The current law only makes reference to the "vapors of glue" in addition to the existing prohibition against driving under the influence of alcohol with a blood alcohol content of .08 or greater, intoxicating liquor, marijuana, narcotic drugs, depressants or stimulant substances.

Existing penalties would apply, consisting of a fine of not less than $500 to $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than two and one-half years, or both such fine and imprisonment.

The legislation, H.3020, is currently being reviewed by the Joint Committee on Transportation.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Open from dawn to dusk

JON BELBER

Many folks came to the farm this past week. Some just came to take a family walk and, of course, to see the animals.

Now that many an early crop are heeled into farm beds for a hopefully fruitful spring, the farmers can continue to turn their attention to summer plants and the ongoing tasks of keeping up with responsibilities in the barnyard, and all who live and grow there.

The early plant sale at Holly Hill Farm saw many happy customers take a page from the "season extension" playbook to plant kale, collards, broccoli along with onions, peas, spinach, lettuce. Not to forget some determined thyme, oregano, chamomile, cilantro and parsley, the latter two similar in appearance only.

The chance to step outside, for many folks, from being sheltered all winter and in place during a 24-hour time period of fear, wonder and ignorance, it felt riotous to grab hold of some seeds, work the soil and take action to grow for one's own. The regular, late-May (last two weekends) plant sale will occur at its usual time and feature warmer weather for tomatoes, peppers, eggplant and summer squash, along with the ability to directly sow sunflowers, beans and pumpkins. Late April, with its nod to Earth Day and still chilly nights, is a good time to work with the weather patterns to grow these hardy greens.

It seems ever more appropriate to see what these strong plants can do and a testament to our commitment to living our lives, in the face of uncertainty and unpredictable events and occurrences.

Many folks came to the farm this past week. Some just came to take a family walk and, of course, to see the animals. At Holly Hill, we never grow tired of telling people that the barnyard is open, free to the public, from dawn to dusk.

The 25 marked trails and the 130 acres of woods are a marvelous endeavor to discover, reflect and see, hear, smell what the reawakening earth has to offer. Spring peepers, chirping birds and a turtle at the Ice Pond, all rear their heads, in celebration of Earth Day and everyday. These animals, the many others we occasionally see and not see, along with the precious few we care for in the barnyard, all give us cheer and considerable pause.

From them, perhaps we can learn a bit. For they have to continually find shelter and be concerned with predators, sourcing food and surviving in an ever-changing climate. When shelter is sought and found, they can rest for another night, hopefully at ease.

For the worm, it may be as simple as burrowing deeper into the rich pile of compost. For the barn cat, it could be tucking under the main barn for respite and safety. We all seek shelter and may not realize how much we need or depend upon it.

This week, I am reminded of the role shelter plays and its basic necessity. The wide open shelter of the farm is pretty important, too, especially when there are new and familiar faces, trails and hardy, strong New England greens to give us sustenance and means to eat and grow for another day.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming.
